Sales Tax Plans Still Considered In House

Not Ruled Out Yet Despite Disapproval Of the President, Members Reveal

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Despite Administration disapproval of consumer taxation, the manufacturers' excise tax has not definitely been barred as a possible source of quick revenue in the defense program.

While decisions on future tax needs have been postponed until next session, one House tax authority said no possible revenue sources have been discarded.

The sales tax, it was indicated, will figure on its merits along with other revenue plans in Congressional tax studies pending decisions next session on sources to be tapped if new income is needed.

Not Actually Ruled Out

The President at a recent press conference said he looked with disfavor on any form of sales tax, but it was learned that the sales tax was not actually ruled out at the White House tax conferences that followed.

One influential House member who has long been identified with sales tax opposition said he could not commit himself flatly to oppose them in the future "because we do not know what we may have to come to in taxes before this emergency is over."

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, a member of the Senate Finance Committee and another sales tax opponent, said he thought of the sales levy only "as a last resort tax."

Bailey said in his opinion "we will exhaust excise and income taxes before we ever get to anything like a sales tax."

Rule of Thumb For D. C. Students: Don't Hitch-Hike

The superintendents of police and District schools—Maj. Ernest W. Brown and Dr. Frank W. Ballou—joined yesterday to stop senior and junior high school students hitch-hiking to and from classes.

Maj. Brown issued to all his precinct commanders a copy of a communication from Dr. Ballou and ordered that the hitch-hiking ban "be enforced strictly."

Dr. Ballou's letter to school officers and teachers reminded them of a circular distributed last year, condemning the practice of thumbing rides and included the regulation prohibiting hitch-hiking.

Maj. Brown ordered his commanders "to issue instructions for a strict enforcement of the regulation quoted, and cooperate fully with the Superintendent of Schools in bringing about a compliance with this regulation."

Yule Deepens Widow's Despair Of Keeping Home Together

By Lucia Giddens
Post Staff Writer

Despair fills the homes of the 50 neediest families in Washington—despair that deepens as Christmas approaches. The best Christmas gift that anyone can give them is to help these families become self-supporting again.

Everyone who contributes to The Post's fund for the neediest families is helping to do just that.

Contributions should be prompt because the emergencies in these families are reaching a crisis.

A contribution to this fund is not merely a gift for Christmas—but for years to come. In each family, a moderate amount of help now—during illness and unemployment and other troubles—will keep the home from breaking up and the family from drifting into even greater misfortune.

Chest Drive Ends With 95% of Quota

$1,911,703 Pledged Or Given by 208,383, 12,500 Over 1939

The curtain came down yesterday on the 1940 Community Chest drive, as solicitors reported pledges or gifts from 208,383 contributors for funds totaling $1,911,703, or 95.58 per cent of the $2,000,000 quota.

In announcing the final figures, Maj. Chauncey G. Parker, jr., general drive chairman, pointed out that there are 12,500 more givers than last year. He told volunteers at the Willard Hotel luncheon that the "city is open" and asked that pledges be obtained during December from potential contributors who have not given to the Chest in the drive.

"We owe it to the people of Washington and to the poor," Parker said, "to see that the needed 4 per cent is gathered.

"The $2,000,000 goal is a minimum. The work has grown with the city. The needs have increased, but not our goal. We thought $2,000,000 was all Washington was willing to give but we haven't that yet."

To potential contributors he said, "If you were missed by the solicitors don't take it as an excuse not to give. Be a volunteer and bring or send your gift to Chest headquarters at 1101 M Street Northwest."

Parker, who is retiring as campaign chairman, also pointed out that 195,870 givers in 1939 gave $1,903,821.

Unit reports were: Government, 133,393 givers of $818,422, or 96.28 per cent of quota; group solicitation, 55,369 givers of $648,310, or 96.76 per cent; Metropolitan, 12,509 givers of $404,587, or 93.25 per cent;

McNutt Named To Head Food, Health Defense

Roosevelt Appoints Him to Coordinate U. S., Private Efforts

President Roosevelt yesterday announced designation of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt as coordinator of "all health, medical, welfare, nutrition, recreation, and other related fields of activity affecting the national defense."

The assignment, vastly increasing McNutt's prominence in the defense set-up, was hailed by many of his friends who are looking on him as a Presidential candidate for 1944.

McNutt will take over the health and medical committee set up by the defense commission under the direction of Dr. Irvin Abell, of Louisville, former president of the American Medical Association.

The order for his appointment provides that McNutt will "formulate and execute plans, policies, and programs . . . during the national defense emergency; to that end he shall coordinate the facilities of existing Federal agencies . . . and shall establish and maintain liaison with such other agencies as he may deem necessary or desirable."

Already the coordinating head of the National Youth Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps, Public Health Service and Office of Education, McNutt is now responsible also for the health and physical condition of young conscripts before they enter active training.

McNutt, who gave up his own campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination early last summer to support a third term for President Roosevelt, was given wide latitude in carrying out his new duties.

15 Degrees Forecast for D. C.; Zoo Inmates Growl About Cold

A cold air mass sweeping down the eastern seaboard yesterday tumbled the temperature here, with a low of 15 degrees—17 degrees below freezing—expected by dawn.

In the 24 hours ending at midnight last night the mercury already had dropped from 39 to 21 degrees, creating some dissension at the Zoo. The lions began grumbling about the cold, and the monkeys, smaller mammals, and antelopes joined in, until the heat was turned on and the thermostat was raised to 70 degrees.

Warmer weather, together with clear skies, was the outlook for today, with the mercury due to rise as high as 30. It also will be warmer tomorrow, the forecast said.

A three-day special forecast for the Middle Atlantic States sees light snows in the north section and middle Appalachian region tomorrow, with temperatures remaining below normal in the area.

The cold spell has been felt through the country, excepting the Pacific Coast, where it has been unduly warm. Los Angeles, for example, had a temperature of 85 degrees, a high that broke a 39-year record.

Coldest spot in the country yesterday was Lone Rock, Wis., where 38 degrees below zero was reported. Rochester, Minn., was only 9 degrees warmer. In Minnesota three deaths were attributed to the extreme cold.

Hellenes Mile And a Quarter From City; Foes Retreat in North

By the Associated Press

Athens (Wednesday), Dec. 4. Greek troops have advanced to within a mile and a quarter of Porto Edda, the Italians' southernmost sea base in Albania, a government spokesman declared early today. In that area, he said, the Fascists were retreating rapidly.

He reported, too, that Greek gains were continuing along the entire front despite bad weather and stubborn Italian resistance at some points.

One important advance claimed was the occupation of the heights northeast of Libohovo, some six miles southeast of Argirocastro, the Italian supply base.

In the center of the front, the spokesman said, the Greeks seized the plateau of Platovouni, "where our men crushed strong enemy resistance."

Fascist Company Decimated

The capture of some 100 prisoners in that sector—specifically in the region of the town of Premet—was claimed, and the spokesman said that as the Italians retreated one of their "choice" companies was decimated and a captain, another officer and "what was left of the company" were made prisoner.

The Greek right wing was declared to have pushed through snow and bad weather generally to extend its line northwest of Moskopolis, and to have "dislodged the Italians from the heights in that area."

Road to Base Under Fire

The Greek high command itself announced the capture of new heights around Pogradetz on the northern front and the seizure of an unstated number of Italian prisoners and heavy arms.

Its communique added that Greek bombers had successfully attacked storehouses behind the Fascist lines, setting big fires. Two Italian planes were declared shot down to one Greek loss.

Earlier, a general advance into Albania had been claimed for Greek soldiers moving across battlefields wet with snow and rain.

British Admit Month's Losses At Sea Totaled 327,157 Tons

By the Associated Press

Adolf Hitler's high command claimed last night that Nazi U-boats inflicted the greatest wholesale destruction on British shipping in the war—at least 18 vessels torpedoed and sunk in a single day.

Yet the Nazi undersea raiders have still to attain the ferocity of Kaiser Wilhelm's "sink on sight" campaign in the last war, London officials said.

Even as the heavy new blows fell, the British ministry of information acknowledged the sinking of 327,157 tons in the four-week period ended November 24, but compared this figure with 881,000 tons sunk in April, 1917, when the Kaiser's unrestricted U-boat attacks reached their zenith and England had only a six-week food supply left.

"It is a serious menace," a British naval spokesman said, "but we as a nation can take knocks."

Order 60 U. S. Freighters

At the same time, British Shipping Minister Ronald H. Cross disclosed to the House of Commons that Britain has turned to United States shipyards with an order for 60 new American-built freighters to meet their most immediate menace—Nazi raids from on, above and below the surface of the sea.

In addition, Cross told Commons: "Old but serviceable United States vessels, including vessels belonging to the Maritime Commission, have been and will continue to be purchased for the British flag as opportunity offers."

The German high command said 15 British merchantmen totaling 110,000 tons and an auxiliary cruiser of 17,000 tons were sent to the bottom "despite energetic fire" from a strong convoy of cruisers and destroyers—in one swoop. Two other ships in the same convoy, totaling 16,000, were listed as "probably" sunk.

Forecast Supreme Effort

In addition, the high command said, a Nazi submarine sank "two armed enemy merchantmen" totaling 21,247 tons in other attacks—making a "probable" grand total of more than 160,000 tons for the two forays.

Presumably these were the ships which sent distress signals from

"MY DAUGHTER!"—Robert King, Washington taxicab driver, meets his daughter, Lola Stageberg, for the first time

By Scott Hart

New York, Dec. 3.—The hearts of two happy obscure people outthrobbed the roar of New York—at least in their own ears tonight.

Robert E. King, of Washington, and his 19-year-old daughter, Mrs. Lola King Stageberg, of Denver, Colo., met for the first time in their lives and were, for a moment, speechless.

They faced an audience of 1,500 in their first meeting and their words—when words finally came—went to the vaster audience of the Columbia Broadcasting System. They did not seem to be touched by stage fright but only by inward tumult. Father and daughter could only gaze for a few moments on one another as if considering.

He is the kind of father I thought he would be. Or, she is my daughter, and all I had expected and wanted.

King spoke first and he told Lola, who had come by plane from Denver to see him for the first time, and that in a glitter of lights, that she was just what he had wanted

CARIBBEAN BOUND—From the rail of cruiser Tuscaloosa, President Roosevelt waves good-by to Miami dockside crowd that saw him off on Caribbean cruise

By Douglas B. Cornell

Aboard U. S. S. Mayrant, en route to Caribbean, Dec. 3.—President Roosevelt shoved off from Miami aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa today and headed for the Caribbean Sea, indicating that he himself had only a general idea of where he will go.

He parried questions about whether he would inspect air and naval sites acquired from England or watch exercises of Atlantic patrol units and marines at Culebra Island, near Puerto Rico.

Because foreign war craft have been rumored to be in the Caribbean, the President's flotilla will take unusual precautions. Gun crews on the Tuscaloosa and the destroyers will stand constant watch, with live shells in their weapons.

Spotlights will play all night on the United States flags. The same measures were used last February when Mr. Roosevelt sailed to Panama and into the Pacific.

40 U. S. Pilots Flying Bombers To England on Mass Schedule

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Dec. 3.—Forty American pilots are making regular mass deliveries of American bombers to England, one of them disclosed today, and are taking the ships across the icy North Atlantic at high altitude in approximately ten hours.

George A. Hutchinson, head of the "Flying Hutchinsons" family which in recent years made "good-will" flights to 31 countries, asserted that regular deliveries had been made since early November and that none of the pilots had encountered German opposition.

Seven high-speed Lockheed Hudson bombers were delivered in the first flight last month, he said. His own ship made the fastest time for the trip—8 hours and 50 minutes from land to land and 10 hours from take off in North America to landing in Great Britain.

The planes take off from an airport in "British North America," Hutchinson said, each carrying a pilot, copilot and a radio operator. He said about 60 pilots and 30 radio operators, including Americans, Canadians and Britons, were participating.

On the first flight the seven bombers started away in formation, led by a British officer, but after 5½ hours' bad weather and icing forced them to separate. Although scattered the rest of the way, the pilot said, all the planes landed within an hour at a British airport.

Since then, he added, mass deliveries have been made on a regular schedule.

Defense Chiefs Confer

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States appeared last night to be preparing to take a new step in aid of Great Britain by releasing thousands of tons of merchant shipping.

As Britain fought for her life on her traditional battleground, the sea, high officials of the Government gathered in a closed conference at the office of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau to canvass the British need for American help to thwart the German submarine blockade. They also discussed British financial resources.

Closeted for an hour with Morgenthau were Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Secretary of Commerce and Loan Administrator Jones, Defense Commissioner Knudsen, Undersecretary of State Welles, Undersecretary of Navy Forrestal, Assistant Secretary of War Patterson, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Dr. Herbert Feis, economic adviser to Secretary of State Hull.

They declined to reveal the subject of their discussion, but one said that "you can just about guess what

Woman Sentenced To 3 Years in Theft, Housebreakings

Mrs. Mary Virginia Blatt, 31, of Bethesda, and John Jones, former big league baseball player, were sentenced at Rockville yesterday to the Maryland House of Correction on charges of housebreaking and larceny.

They had pleaded guilty to charges of breaking into several model homes and to the theft of $1,000 in jewelry from the home of Mrs. Jacob O. Sponseller, 218 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Blatt received a three-year sentence and Jones two years. Judge Stedman Prescott explained that, in imposing sentence on Jones, the Court took into consideration the fact that he had spent six months in jail awaiting trial and that he had cooperated with police in their investigation.

Mrs. Sponseller, who testified against Mrs. Blatt when she was arraigned last week, was called to the stand yesterday. Mrs. Sponseller told the Court that when Mrs. Blatt left the courtroom she said: "I will get even with you."

U. S. Ready to Help British With Ships

More Than 100 Freighters Could Be Sold if Wanted

it was about from the people who were there."

Secretary Morgenthau has been delegated by the President to coordinate aid for Britain with American defense.

Similar gatherings in his office have preceded recent moves in the Administration's program of aid "short of war" to Britain. A similar meeting was the prelude to the trade of 50 Navy destroyers for eight Atlantic bases, the announcement that Britain would be allowed to order 12,000 more planes, and the release to her of four-motored bombers.

British officials, beset by high shipping losses, have been shopping in this country for merchant tonnage.

It was reported yesterday that plans were in the making to turn over to Britain every ton of usable shipping that the United States could spare.

Four Freighters Sold

The Maritime Commission yesterday approved sale of four American-owned vessels to the British, bringing to 130 the number acquired by the London government since outbreak of the war. All involved in the latest transactions were freighters of around 5,000 tons that belonged to the Black Diamond Line.

In addition, there are available 63 vessels of the "laid-up" fleet, owned by the Maritime Commission, remnants of the World War "bridge of ships" that formed a lifeline between this country and the British Isles.

Fifteen of the laid-up vessels will go on sale December 12.

Of the 63, about 30 are tied up at New Orleans, 30 in the James River, and others in the Patuxent River or at Bremerton, Wash.

Purchase of the 63 laid-up vessels would tide Great Britain over the next few months, officials feel.

To care for long-run needs, the London government yesterday made arrangements for construction of 60 new vessels in American yards. This order is expected to be the forerunner of several more.

Private owners, it has been estimated, have about 100 average ships which might become available for sale to Britain in an emergency.

May Want 360

There have been reports that the British wish to buy or build in this country 360 ships to speed the flow of food, munitions and raw materials to the beleaguered Empire capital.

Some quarters assumed that the Treasury conference also discussed Britain's financial resources and ability to pay for war materials in this country.

The recent statement of Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, that Britain was running out of dollar exchange to pay for war materials has caused considerable debate in Congressional circles and was believed to be a topic of official concern.

Though the question of loans to Britain may not be under discussion, it is assumed that top officials are taking an inventory of total British orders compared with ability to pay.

British contracts placed in the United States aggregate $2,500,000,000 and are expected to reach $4,000,000,000 in the next year.

Lending Mission

It was announced last week that Britain soon would send a financial mission to this country and American officials are believed to be making preparations—perhaps the formation of a committee—to meet with the British visitors.

Some policy-makers believe that an early departmental study of British resources might develop information of the very nature for which a number of Congressmen are demanding investigations.

Lord Lothian called on Welles prior to this afternoon's meeting.

American officials, it is understood, feel that British requests for financial aid are premature, that the London government should liquidate some of its gold holdings and direct investments in this hemisphere before officially broaching the subject of a loan.

son; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, White House physician, and Capt. Daniel J. Gallaghan.

Thousands lined Miami streets to cheer as the President rode in an open automobile from his special train to the docks to be piped aboard the doughty 10,000-ton light cruiser.

Receives Tremendous Cheer

Harbor craft whistled a salute. Mr. Roosevelt paused at attention on the gangplank as the band played the National Anthem. He appeared on an upper deck a few minutes later to smile and wave in response to a tremendous cheer.

It was cloudy and Mr. Roosevelt grinned and nodded when a spectator shouted:

"We'll have that sun out for you when you come back."

After tugs nudged the cruiser into the channel, Tuscaloosa cannon boomed a 21-gun Presidential salute. Two escort destroyers, the Mayrant and the Trippe, moved out after the big warship had cleared.

At a press conference aboard the train, Mr. Roosevelt indicated his voyage has a serious purpose and is not a vacation. That fishing stuff is the bunk, he asserted when asked if he will try his luck often.

Sank 16 in Convoy, Germans Claim

about 500 miles west of Ireland over a 20-hour period beginning late Sunday night. It recalled the attack November 5 by a German surface raider on a 38-ship convoy. Only the fight of the British armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, which went down with her guns roaring, permitted the bulk of those ships to escape.

A lone German plane was reported to have added to the toll by sinking a cargo ship of unspecified tonnage southwest of Ireland, Monday afternoon.

British figures alone placed the total of British, Allied and neutral ships sunk since the start of the war at around 3,000,000 tons, and the minister of shipping only recently forecast a supreme German effort to wreck the British convoy system, vital to the transport of American supplies, by next spring.

The reported use of German supersubmarines, carrying 20 torpedoes and operating partly as surface craft, and the acknowledged deficiency in British destroyers have made the danger to the convoys extremely acute.

The size of the British losses claimed by the German high command would indicate a deficiency in escort power of the British—a defect long recognized since most of Britain's naval strength is generally believed to be concentrated in British waters or the Mediterranean or in blockade work extending from Norway to Gibraltar, and with ships scattered across the South Atlantic.

Britain started the war with 179 destroyers and with 16 on the stocks. Probably 35 have been lost and 50 acquired from the United States, but the number available is apparently still too small to furnish the kind of protection given to convoys in the World War.

German emphasis today was laid on the work of submarines, but Britain has still another menace to cope with—the surface raider.

There have been indications that the 10,000-ton German pocket battleships Admiral Scheer and Luetzow, formerly the Deutschland, fast and powerful, are being used for such operations.

Cost of War Soars

Cross, before the House of Commons, gave assurances that "everything possible is being done to get ships with the greatest facility."

Unless Britain is able to arrange American credits by the time the ships are delivered, this will be another strenuous drain on her already-depleted dollar reserve. Britain's war expenses last week totaled a record $360,536,000; the total for the fiscal year so far is about $8,600,000,000.

Another government spokesman in the House, Deputy Leader Clement R. Attlee, parried a question about unofficial proposals "for either definite or implied union with the United States," saying he was aware of no such project.

That American aid—and means to get it to England—was the question of the day for even the Throne was evident, however, from the fact that both Prime Minister Churchill and A. B. Purvis, chairman of the British purchasing commission to the United States, saw King George VI at Buckingham Palace.

U-Boats to Form "Wolf Packs"

Berlin, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Officials here, predicting even fiercer destruction of British shipping, said tonight Adolf Hitler is ready to launch a new-type sea offensive with at least 100 submarines operating in "wolf packs" against big enemy convoys.

These "wolf packs," replacing attacks by individual submarines, will be guided to large convoys by reconnaissance planes, it was said.

that of the left wing, which was reported to have advanced beyond Porto Edda in an encircling movement that threatened to trap the last Italian fighting force in the southwestern tip of Albania.

Casualties were said to be heavy in fierce fighting during which the Greeks repulsed an Italian counter-attack and advanced to the Devoli River.

The high command communique said the road linking the port with Argirocastro, 15 miles northeast, had been placed under Greek artillery fire, and in the center the Greeks seized heights in Premet, east of Argirocastro.

Three Italian planes were reported shot down trying to penetrate the Epirus section, near the coast.

The high command said more prisoners were added to 13,000 already taken in the north, where 5,000 surrendered en masse yesterday.

Italians Yielding in North

Ochrid, Yugoslavia (on the Albanian frontier), Dec. 3 (AP).—Gradual retirement of the Italian northern army toward Elbasan, in central Albania, continued today under constant harassing by Greek forces driving deep into Albania, border advices reported.

After long and bitter fighting, the Greeks last night were declared to have driven plume-hatted Italian Bersaglieri out of the village of Mumulishta, north of captured Pogradetz, in an operation apparently designed to mop up remaining Fascist units along the highway which skirts Lake Ochrida and leads to Elbasan.

Battle in Bitter Cold

With the Greek Army on the Epirus Front, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Greek troops, driving steadily deeper into Albania toward the key town of Argirocastro, today battled Italian "suicide squads" on mountain heights in a snowstorm and bitter cold.

The Greeks now are twice as deep into Albania on the southern Epirus front as the Italians ever penetrated into Greek territory in the early days of the invasion.

Most of the fighting was bitter, hand-to-hand combat to drive the Italians from their nests on the strategic mountain heights.

Sales Tax Still Studied in House

Ways and Means Committee are banking heavily on an increased national income returning higher yields on present schedules. Goal is to balance the "ordinary" budget if possible from present levies, and apply any increased taxes enacted on reducing the defense deficit.

Estimated returns from existing taxes have steadily risen over the last 12-month period, and as of yesterday they unofficially stood at about $6,750,000,000 for this fiscal year—a record peacetime yield.

The manufacturers' excise, definitely rejected by a Democratic House in 1932, meanwhile continued to figure along with other revenue recourses in the Pandora's box of tax plans from which Congress may be forced to draw.

As an alternative to another sharp step-up in individual and corporation income taxes, the plan has strong advocates among both Democrats and Republicans at the Capitol.

1932 Rate Was 2 Per Cent

The 1932 proposal was a 2 per cent manufacturers' excise, carrying exemptions on the necessaries of life, such as medicines, food and some clothing, and estimated to yield $500,000,000. The same plan, invoked today, it was estimated, would raise about $800,000,000.

Exponents of the levy said it had two virtues which make it impossible to exclude it from future consideration:

Provides 'Quick Revenue'

First, it provides "quick revenue" with returns coming in monthly instead of on an annual basis, at the end of the tax year.

Second, it would provide a more dependable source in any post war depression period, falling off less violently than income revenues which rise and drop more sharply.

Consideration has been given to making a sales levy less heavy on the low-income classes, by broadening the necessities exempted. Further compensating for any drain on the low-income groups, it has been suggested, Congress might restore the old income tax exemption levels, and then step up the rates after the first $2,500 of income.

Advocates of the sales levy principle contend that in this manner it would be possible to adjust the manufacturers' excise to the tax structure on practically the same "ability to pay" basis on which incomes are now taxed.

Woodrum Seeks Joint Action

By the Associated Press

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, a leader of the House economy bloc, disclosed yesterday that he was going to seek joint Congressional action to balance normal Government outlays with revenues, reserving the Government's borrowing power solely for defense needs.

Woodrum, a member of the Appropriations Committee, said he was planning meetings among his colleagues in the House and members of the Senate in the next few weeks with the purpose of obtaining action early in the next session. He said that probably a resolution would be presented proposing creation of a joint budget committee to chart the 1941 fiscal program.

His plan, he said, did not deal in any way with economizing on defense expenditures, but "only with normal outlays."

"The more we borrow for defense needs, however," he said, "the greater is the menace of our unbalanced budget."

He added that "when the war is over in a few years, and the business of the defense industries diminishes, there will be grave economic danger throughout the world; and we will all the more need to put our own house in order, and we shall all the more need sound fiscal policies."

Britain Will Not Lose War, U. S. Air Corps Observer Asserts After Return

Referring frequently to a sheaf of typewritten notes, Gen. Chaney gave a detailed account of his observations in England.

"Most people don't seem to realize how much we are getting from this war in the form of secret and technical information that will aid us in our own rearmament efforts. We and Gen. observation of German are able to learn from the British tactics and study of captured planes things that might be worth hundreds of millions of dollars to us," Gen. Chaney said.

"I'm Optimistic"

Asked what he thought Britain's chances were of winning the war, he said, "I'm optimistic about the outcome of the war, so far as Britain is concerned."

In reply to a question, Gen. Chaney said: "England needs aircraft, 100 destroyers, bases in Ireland, munitions, and, according to Lord Lothian (British Ambassador), credits."

The aerial blitzkrieg was divided into what Gen. Chaney called three phases, the first two of which England won decisively, and the third of which is now in progress.

The first from August 8 to August 18, was carried on by wave after wave of twin-engined bombers escorted by pursuit planes, he related. They were based in German-occupied France and other parts of the continent, and after climbing to about 12,000 feet, flew straight for their objectives.

In his instance, he continued, the objectives of the Nazi planes apparently were confines to shipping and airdromes. Apparently, the docks were spared for use by the Germans in their invasion effort, for they were not subjected to great attack. During this first phase, which ended on August 18, when the British shot down 180 German craft, German losses were six times those of the British, he said.

The second phase, which began on September 5, with daylight raids, and continued until September 15, was by all odds the most violent and destructive, he declared. Bombers, again escorted by pursuit ships, went up to 18,000 feet and by flying wide to the north and south attempted to flank their targets. The dive-bomber which played so important a role in the march through Poland and the Low Countries and which had been tried in the first phase was not conspicuous in the second phase, because it was too vulnerable, Gen. Chaney declared. German losses during this phase were about four to one, and after a day in which 185 swastika-marked planes were shot down, Nazi tactics were changed again.

Both Tricks Go To Defense

Gen. Chaney said that both the first and second phases of the air battle over Britain were decisively won by the speedy fighters of the Royal Air Force. A large measure of the success enjoyed by the Royal Air Force was attributed to the plane detecting system employed.

So thorough and able is the system and organization for detecting raiding planes, Gen. Chaney said, Royal Air Force fighters can remain on the ground until they are sure that enemy planes are approaching, and when they rise to meet them they know how high they are, how fast they are flying and the direction of their flight.

The third phase, which Gen. Chaney asserted caused much material damage but could never win a war, is daylight attacks by fighters carrying bombs and night attacks by big bombers. This began September 27. Messerschmitt 109s and 110s are used in this work, and they now operate from 23,000 to 30,000 feet. The ME-110, a twin-engined craft, carries two 500-pound bombs, he reported, while the single-engine ME-109 carries either four 110-pound or one 500-pound bomb.

Both bombers by night and fighters by day fly at "very high" altitudes and the German bombsight is not well adapted to night bombing, he asserted. In this respect the German bombsight differs from the American and English instrument. English and American bombing tactics place a great deal of emphasis on night bombing, and the bombsights used have been designed to let in more light to aid the bombardier. At the present time losses are in a ratio of 1.9 German craft for 1 British plane, Gen. Chaney said.

Calling the balloon barrage "an essential to any air defense," Gen. Chaney said it, in conjunction with antiaircraft guns, had done much to drive the raiders to higher and higher altitudes. Antiaircraft fire, he revealed, has accounted for about one-seventh of all Nazi planes brought down.

Gen. Chaney said he had examined a captured German Messerschmitt 109 and had seen it flown by an English pilot. It took off, climbed and landed well, he said and had a top speed of about 350 miles an hour.

He said, however, that he believed it had reached the peak of its development, and future improvements would have to be in a new type.

The ME-109, he said, has a small wing and consequently a heavy wing loading. Originally, he said he had been informed, it was meant to be powered by a 500 or 600-horsepower engine, but explained that a 1,150-horsepower engine was now used, and it made the plane a little hard on the controls.

German engines are superior to both the English and American in some respects, he said. This applies particularly to the German fuel injection system that has replaced the carburetor, thus removing a spot for possible icing in winter weather.

The quality of German airplane fuel and oil is high, despite reports to the contrary, he reported.

American planes need more guns to make them the match of English and German planes, Gen. Chaney said, and such additions were now being planned and made. Our bombers need more defensive fire power, and our fighters more offensive fire power, he said.

Fire Routs 50 Scrapping Ship At Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 3 (AP).—Fire broke out today in the forward hold of the former World War troopship Mount Vernon, being scrapped at the Fairfield docks of the Union Shipbuilding Co.

Men who were working in the forward hold said the fire was started by an acetylene torch. Some 50 men scrambled off the ship when the fire broke out and gave the alarm.

Two fireboats and several engine companies answered the three alarms.

The Mount Vernon was the former luxury liner Kronprinzessin Cecile, pride of the North German Lloyd Line from 1906 to 1914. It was interned at Boston in 1914 and used as a troopship after the United States entered the war.

After the war the Mount Vernon was laid up at Norfolk, then was tied up at Solomons Island, Md., from 1920 until a few weeks ago, when it was towed here to be scrapped.

The Gallup Poll

Support for Dies Increases in Year

65% Are in Favor Of Continuing House Un-American Quiz

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 3.—With national discussion being stirred by the activities of the Dies Committee, a public opinion study just completed by the Institute shows an increase in the number of voters who want the Dies investigations to continue.

The vote does not mean that the public approves everything the committee has done. The general attitude of the majority is that the Dies group has "revealed important facts the country should know." A congressional appropriation for another year is favored by a substantial majority of those polled.

Before Roosevelt Letter

Most of the interviewing in the study was completed before President Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Martin Dies last week criticizing certain phrases of the committee's activities. The survey put the following question to a cross-section of voters throughout the Nation:

"Do you think the Dies Committee should be continued?"

The latest results, compared with the results on a closely similar question in December, 1939, show the following trend:

| | Today | Year Ago |
|---|---|---|
| Committee Should Continue | 65% | 54% |
| Committee Should Not Continue | 7 | 18 |
| No opinion or never heard of committee | 28 | 28 |

It can be seen that about one-fourth of the voters (28 per cent) have no definite attitude on the Dies Committee issue. This group is made up of 12 per cent who are not familiar with the committee and 16 per cent who are undecided or without an opinion on its activities.

Support Rises in Year

If the voters without definite attitudes are excluded, the division of sentiment among the remainder who do have an opinion is 91 per cent for continuing the committee, to 9 per cent opposed. A year ago, on the same basis, the results were 75 per cent for continuing, 25 per cent against.

In the latest survey, both Willkie voters and Roosevelt voters favor continuation of the Dies probe, although the Roosevelt supporters are less in favor (62 per cent) than the G. O. P. supporters (74 per cent).

Chairman Dies is asking for a Congressional appropriation of $1,000,000 to continue his work for another year. The question whether Congress should grant him this sum was put to the voters in a second question in the Institute survey.

A sizable majority favor such an appropriation. The vote is 57 per cent in favor, 11 per cent against, and 32 per cent undecided.

Official Vote Tests Survey Accuracy

Further checks on the accuracy of the Institute's 1940 pre-election survey are made possible this week as complete and official election returns from nine more States were received by the Institute from various State officials.

The comparison between the Institute's final survey published November 4 and the official election returns November 5 for these nine States follows:

| | Major Party Vote Gallup For FDR | Election For FDR | Deviation |
|---|---|---|---|
| Ore | 54% | 54.1% | .1 |
| Ala. | 86 | 85.6 | .4 |
| S. D. | 41 | 42.6 | 1.6 |
| Va. | 70 | 68.3 | 1.7 |
| Wis. | 46 | 50.9 | 2.9 |
| Vt. | 42 | 45.1 | 3.1 |
| Ill. | 48 | 51.2 | 3.2 |
| Ohio | 49 | 53.2 | 3.2 |
| Nev. | 56 | 60.1 | 4.1 |

Translating percentages into actual votes cast in the election in the State where the Institute error was the smallest—Oregon—the Institute's 54 per cent would have indicated 258,104 votes for Roosevelt. In the election he actually got 258,415—a difference of 311 votes. In the State where the error was the greatest in the above list—Nevada—the poll result translated into actual votes cast shows 29,777 for Roosevelt, as compared to 31,945 which he actually received in the election—a difference of 2,168.

The average deviation in all the 48 States, on the basis of unofficial returns, was 2½ per cent.

Cumberland Pay Roll Sets Three-Year High

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 3 (AP).—Cumberland merchants, shooting for $5,000,000 in sales during December, read a chamber of commerce report today that, for the first time since July, 1937, the city's October pay roll exceeded $2,000,000.

The report showed 17 major industries issued pay checks totaling $2,005,980 during the month, an increase of $297,308 over the total for October last year.

Employment in the city amounted to 15,288, a boost of 729 jobs over the October, 1939, mark and the highest total reached here since September, 1937.

Dispute Over Apportionment Of House Seats Threatened

By the Associated Press

A Congressional dispute over which of two formulas shall be used to apportion seats in the House was indicated yesterday following the publication of the new 1940 census figures.

These figures revealed that under present law ten States, largely in the East and the Mississippi Valley, stand to lose a member each, with that number of seats added to the delegations of eight States, mostly in the West and South.

California would gain three and one each would be added to Arizona, Florida, Michigan, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon and Tennessee. The States which would lose a seat each are Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania.

The present reapportionment law works automatically. Unless Congress enacts legislation to the contrary, the revision will take effect technically in March, but actually not until the new Congress is elected in 1942. The law keeps the total House membership at 435. Under the formula the total population of the country (less the District of Columbia) would be divided and the resulting figure is the controlling factor in the reapportionment.

This year it is 301,163. Each State would have one House seat for each 301,163 of its population, and a seat additional if the fractional remainder were more than half of 301,163. The formula is called the "major fractions" method.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, has long urged a somewhat different procedure known as the "equal proportions" formula. He declined to go into details on it, but he said its effect was to protect the representation of the smaller States, and as applied to the 1940 figures the only difference would be that Arkansas would not lose a seat and Michigan would not gain one.

Eccles Proposes Huge British Loan

Urges 2½ Billion Secured by Mortgage On Gold Output

By W. A. Lyon

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Dec. 3.—A proposal that the United States make a $2,500,000,000 loan to the British government and take as security a lien on the British empire's gold production over the next five years was laid before a closed meeting of bankers, industrialists and economists here last week by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, it became known today.

Eccles, who spoke at a meeting of the national industrial conference board here last Thursday night, suggested such a loan as a means of sterilizing part of the gold which could be expected to flow into the United States over the next five years. He addressed himself in general to the problems now posed for the national economy by the "excessively" easy money of recent years.

Would Avert Inflation

Through this type of loan, Eccles is reported by those present to have said, the newly minded British Empire gold could be prevented from inflating the banking system in this country. Under his plan, the funds for the loan to Britain would be raised by sale of securities and the gold set aside as security for the loan. Otherwise, the gold would be bought by the Treasury as it reached this country and the volume of bank reserves thereby increased, making for greater danger of inflation.

While the meeting was closed to the press, those present have been giving wide circulation to the views advanced. These views show Eccles, heretofore, the leading exponent in the Administration of easy money, to be prepared now to recommend stern measures to modify the easy money policy.

The keynote of his remarks was that easy money had been justified in the last few years because of the under-employment and subnormal production marking that period but that it was no longer justified as the country approached a period of larger employment and great productive activity.

Expects Treasury Opposition

Of particular interest was the indication he gave that the Treasury, as the chief beneficiary of the low interest rate policy of recent years, might oppose any effort to raise the cost of money to borrowers in the capital market and that, to prevent the Treasury from upsetting the program which he believed necessary, Congress should clip the Treasury's wings to affect monetary conditions. He outlined a series of steps which he believed should be taken to hold the Treasury within the framework of a policy of less easy money.

Those present reported the Reserve Board chairman as speaking of the undermining of the whole debtor and creditor system of the economy which "excessive" easy money had wrought in recent years, with the price of Government securities inflated, municipal and high grade corporate obligations pushed to heights "beyond all reason," the savings banks and insurance companies vitally affected and very difficult problems raised for the monetary authorities.

Army Allotted $25,000,000 For New Bases

Garrisons, Airfilds Will Rise on Sites Leased From British

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

The Army disclosed yesterday that it had received a $25,000,000 allotment for starting construction of forts, air fields and garrisons on the sites acquired from Great Britain to guard the Atlantic approaches to the United States.

Work has already started on Army bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda, the War Department announcement revealed, while engineers will soon leave to begin preliminary construction at Trinidad, Jamaica, British Guiana, Antigua, the Bahamas and St. Lucia.

The allottment of funds was made from the "blank check" appropriation made to President Roosevelt for emergency defense needs and brings to $75,000,000 the amount allocated to date for development of the British leased bases. Secretary Knox earlier revealed that $50,000,000 had been set aside to start work on Navy bases on the sites.

Bids for Canal Locks

No indication of the total cost of the new chain of bases has been given by official sources, although some authorities have estimated that their full development would run into billions. Yesterday's announcement said that the $25,000,000 would be used for "initial expenditures" for surveys and construction.

Meanwhile, the Government set forth on another major defense project. Bids will be opened here today on the first major contracts for construction of new bombproof locks for the Panama Canal, a project which experts declare will assure that the waterway will be open to quick passage of the Navy in time of war.

Congress has authorized the spending of $99,000,000 on the new locks this year. They will cost about $277,000,000 in all, and provide three sets of the locks at the Isthmus.

Admiral Asks More Men

Other defense developments of the day included:

Rear Admiral Chester M. Nimitz, chief of the Navy Bureau of Navigation, recommended that during the current emergency every combatant ship of the fleet be equipped with 115 per cent of its war complement to permit the training of men for ships now building or which would be pressed into service in time of war.

The War Department announced plans for training radio "hams" as a reservoir from which Army communications personnel may be drawn in na emergency. Radio amateurs, it was said, may communicate with the War Department radio net control station "WAR" for two hours, four nights a week.

The Army transferred $6,500,000 to the Tennessee Valley Authority for the rehabilitation of Nitrate Plant No. 2 at Muscle Shoals, Ala. It will produce ammonia, a basic necessity in the production of explosives.

Offices Set Up

Army engineers will have charge of the development of the military bases on the British leased sites, it was said. Offices have already been set up at St. Johns, Newfoundland, and St. Georges, Bermuda, while others will be established at Trinidad and Jamaica. A vessel of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey is now at Mayaguana in the Bahamas conducting surveys, it was also disclosed.

Newfoundland Plans

War Department plans for garrisoning Newfoundland include a base near St. Johns, a smaller post near Little Placentia Harbor, and an air field in the vicinity of St. Georges Bay in southwestern Newfoundland. Air fields will be constructed near the other two posts.

An Army landing field is being started on Long Bird Island, Bermuda, while coast defense and infantry garrisons will be built on St. Davids Island.

The Army forts and fields are for the protection of naval facilities against air raids and landing parties. Work is also getting started under the $50,000,000 Navy allotment on dredging and construction of wharves, store houses and repair shops to serve patrol forces operating out of the islands.

Draft Calls Halt, Except In the South

Inductions in Army Completed for 1940 In Eight Corps Areas

Further induction of selectees is being halted until after the first of next year, except in several Southern States, officials said yesterday in announcing plans for a second call in January of about 160,000 men.

Quotas under the first call, which brought some 20,000 men into the Army, are about complete in all the nine corps areas except the fourth, where inductions are to continue until December 15. No selectees will be taken anywhere between then and January 1, under War Department.

Postponement of the second call from early this month until next is due to a number of reasons, officials said. One was to avoid conjestion of railroads during the holiday season. Lack of uniforms and housing also were factors. A larger influx of regular 2-year recruits played a part in the decision.

Selective Service Director Dykstra announced plans were going forward to call in some 160,000 selectees in January, pointing out, however, that the actual number would depend upon local Army needs and facilities.

Plans announced several weeks ago by Secretary of War Stimson listed 30,000 men to be called in November, 60,000 on December 2, 60,000 more on January 3, 90,000 on January 15, 160,000 on February 10, 200,000 on March 5, and 200,000 on June 15.

Personnel officers of the nine corps areas are now here studying the results of the first "trial run" with War Department officials. Difficulties which have delayed the second call are being ironed out, it was said, and the program should go forward with speed after the first of the year.

Women Censors Board U. S. Ships At Bermuda

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 3 (AP).—Smartly uniformed women censors, "who seem to know their business," are boarding American ships at Bermuda, Capt. Carroll M. MacGowan, of the liner Siboney, said on arrival today.

He said the Lisbon-New York liner and its 286 passengers underwent a thorough inspection by the women and their male colleagues. Some papers carried by French government officials were confiscated, he said.

Among the passengers—who included 60 Americans—was Hans Habe, 29, Hungarian author, who escaped in September from a German prison camp where he had been taken in June after his capture near Luxembourg.

"There were 2,400 in our regiment," he said. "Eighteen hundred were killed and the remainder were made prisoners."

Court Told Hopson Made Millions Padding Pay Rolls

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Lillian M. Nickl, former stenographer and bookkeeper for Howard C. Hopson, when he was head of the Associated Gas & Electric System, testified in Federal Court today that Hopson profited by $3,525,230 by padding the pay rolls of his employes.

Of that amount, she said, $131,846.53 came from subsidiaries of the A. G. & E. and the remainder from nonsystem companies which he owned or controlled.

She was a witness for the second day in the mail fraud and conspiracy trial of Hopson and two lawyers, Charles M. Travis and Garrett A. Brownback.

Norse Admiral Dies in Oregon

Portland, Oreg., Dec. 3 (AP).—Vice Admiral Christian Sparre, former commander of the Norwegian navy, was found dead of "natural causes" in his room at a hotel today.

Norwegian Consul Emil Slovarp, who took charge of the body, said the consulate at Seattle had been searching for the 81-year-old war refugee who was to have arrived in Sattle by train from Los Angeles last Saturday.

He evidently became ill on the train and stopped off at Portland without notifying anyone of his connections, Slovarp said.

It's better. When you call for Martin's, you definitely come out ahead.

For Martin's is special "liqueur" Scotch—which means the very pick of fine Scotch whiskies. Martin's is also 88 proof instead of the usual 86.8 . . . goes just a little bit farther.

Martin's costs no more than most brands. Call for Martin's and get "liqueur" quality without extra cost.

Pope Urges Truce Over Christmas

Mass to Be Allowed In Afternoon Instead Of at Midnight

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Dec. 3.—Pope Pius XII expressed his hope today for a Christmas truce in the war—lest strife and bloodshed "cover the angelic chorus of peace . . . disturb or miserably extinguish the heavenly joy of that hour."

At the same time he recognized the possibility of a blackout of one of the oldest rites in Christendom—the midnight mass of Christmas Eve—by giving to Catholics in the wartime aerial bombing zones the unprecedented privilege of attending this mass instead of in the afternoon of Christmas Eve.

"It has been established by law in not a few nations in fact," he said in explanation, "that for fear of reciprocal night air raids, lights must be put out or concealed in order that towns and villages will no longer be exposed to such attacks."

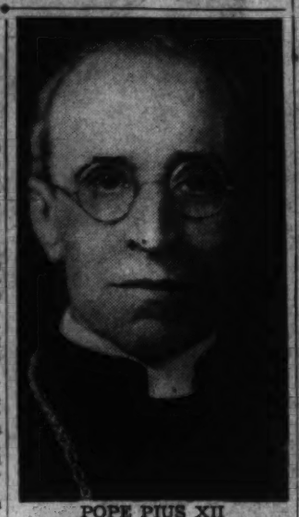
(The first available word from belligerent capitals, while not final, suggested that the Pope's appeal for a Christmas free of fighting would not prevail.

(In Rome, Italian authorities withheld comment, but Italy's compliance was expected in unofficial circles, provided Britain and her allies signified acceptance.

(In London, however, well-informed circles said Prime Minister Churchill's "No, sir!" to a Christmas truce suggestion made in Parliament last week also covered the Pope's proposal.

(Authorized German quarters commented that it never had been the practice of German fighting forces to disturb the Holy Day. They said that last Christmas the Western Front was inactive; that no initiative had been taken by the German army during World War Christmases.

(They implied that they were willing to have an undisturbed day if the British stayed home, willing to fight if their opponents wished it.)



POPE PIUS XII

Text of Appeal By Pope for Truce

By the Associated Press

Following is an unofficial translation of the Latin text of Pope Pius' appeal:

Since the present war is bringing ruin and carnage not only to combatant armies but sometimes even to peaceable citizens, we, inspired by the paternal affection which we cherish toward all peoples, are overlooking nothing that can bring at least spiritual comfort to those who are bearing sorrows and distress of all kinds because of war.

With the approach, meanwhile, of the solemnities of Christmas Eve, we are preoccupied with the thought tha.. in many places, those sacred rites cannot be carried out without difficulty and danger which are customarily celebrated at midnight Christmas Eve with such gentle emotion of Christian sentiment. It has been established by law in not a few nations in fact that for fear of reciprocal night air raids, lights must be put out or concealed in order that towns and villages will no longer be exposed to such attacks.

It is fair to hope and trust that at least on that holy night and on that holy day all belligerents will declare a truce, either spontaneously or by mutual accord, so that the clash of arms shall not cover the angelic chorus of peace which is repeated in the sacred temples and so that new fraternal bloodshed shall not disturb or miserably extinguish the heavenly joy of that hour.

In any event, however moved by a desire that, as we said above, the faithful shall not lack heavenly blessings and comforts, after major deliberation, by virtue of our apostolic authority, we decree and establish by 'motu proprio' as follows:

With the present very sad circumstances continuing, in those regions in which blackout laws are in force, it is permissible for individual ordinaries to concede that in primatical, metropolitan, cathedral, collegiate and parochial mass, which usually is celebrated at Christmas midnight, be celebrated instead the evening of Christmas Eve in such a way, however, that between the end of the sacred rite and the moment in which the above-mentioned laws are enforced there remain some intervals of time. Ordinaries may also concede the above provision to other churches and public oratories—not however to semi-public and private oratories—provided they enjoy by custom of centuries since time immemorial or by apostolic indulgence the privilege of having the Eucharistic sacrifice celebrated on the night of Christmas Eve.

Before the above-mentioned conventual mass is celebrated in the evening, matins may be recited in chorus beginning, if necessary, at noon.

Priests who make use of this concession can celebrate only two masses the following day, observing a natural fast from midnight.

Priests who make use of this privilege must abstain from taking any food or drink whatsoever for four hours before beginning the celebrations of the Holy Mass of Christmas Eve.

Those who piously take part in the Eucharistic Sacrifice the evening of Christmas Eve will fulfill the Holy Day rule for the following day.

Finally, all faithful who take part in the Eucharistic Sacrifice the evening of Christmas Eve may, even if they took Communion in the morning, approach the Holy table provided they are confessed, well disposed and have fasted for four hours. They may not, however, approach the Divine table the following day.

We will and ordain everything established in this motu proprio shall have force and effect, anything to the contrary notwithstanding.

Dodecanese Virtually Cut Off, British Say

Graziani's Campaign Also Claimed Periled By New Crete Base

By the Associated Press

Suda Bay, Island of Crete, Dec. 3. Great Britain and Greece are forging a powerful base out of this strategic island in the eastern Mediterranean, and the British report it already is blockading effectively Italy's fortified Dodecanese Islands.

Almost all Crete teems with British and Greek soldiers.

Heavy antiaircraft guns guard the rim of mountains overlooking the harbor, one of the biggest and deepest in this Mediterranean region.

While transports bring in fresh troops and supplies, some of Britain's crack warships stand watch in the bay, ready to meet any Italian sea or air attack.

Greeks, working alongside the British, are throwing up new fortifications.

Island Becomes War Camp

The Greek inhabitants of this hilly island have turned readily from their goat-herding, wine-pressing and vegetable-farming. Every able-bodied man is enrolled for army service and this whole island has been turned into a war camp.

The British say their men and material are making Crete one of the strongest links in Britain's blockade of Italy's fortified Dodecanese Islands. Not one Italian supply ship, they say, has passed through Kaso Strait to the Dodecanese since the British base was established here.

How strong Britain's land, sea and air forces are is a secret, but officers say they are more than sufficient to cope with any Italian offensive.

While the British fleet roves the Mediterranean and Ionian seas, trying to achieve its first aim—destruction of Italy's naval squadrons—it is said to be constantly pushing forward its second—isolation of the Dodecanese.

Encounter Little Interference

That only sporadic attempts are made to bomb the British fleet and only small air squadrons are used, the British say, is a sign that resources on Rhodes, Lero and other Dodecanese Islands are running low.

This base puts the British 400 miles closer to the scene of action than at Alexandria, Egypt, not only athwart Italy's line to the islands, but also nearer her routes to her African empire.

Britain's naval commanders say their ships have slowed down, if not altogether stopped, Italian attempts to provision and reinforce Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's long-threatening offensive into Egypt.

For weeks now, they say, while Britain's Mediterranean fleet cruises in small formations close to Italy's coasts—the mainland and her islands—no Italian ship has attempted to reach Libya.

Inventors Gather Here to Help U. S. Sift 6,000 Defense Ideas and Coordinate Research

By Edward Ryan

The new National Inventors Council yesterday started through its first full-time workout to pull out of a stack of 6,000 inventions as many ideas as they could find for improving the Nation's armed defenses.

The council, headed by Dr. Charles F. Kettering, inventor of an automobile self-starter and president of General Motors Research Corporation, sent its members into conference with Commerce Department engineers for a preliminary look at their supply of new inventions.

Today and tomorrow the council will meet to decide which inventions can be used in the defense program, and to send the prize ideas along to the Army and Navy.

Fields Parceled Out

While the specific inventions, under law, are kept a closely guarded secret, a suggestion of what ideas they were working on was given with announcement of committee assignments.

Kettering picked himself to look into inventions related to power plants, internal combustion engines, and remote control devices. Fred Zeder, vice chairman of the board of the Chrysler Corporation, was assigned to study land transportation and armored vehicle inventions.

Gen. William T. Tschappat, former chief of ordnance for the War Department, was at work on ordnance and ammunition inventions.

Other assignments included: Dr. William D. Collidge, director of the General Electric Research Laboratories, to study geometrical and optical instruments, and communications; Dr. George F. Baekeland, inventor of bakelite, assigned to aeronautics and aviation problems; Dr. Fin Sparre, director of development for the Dupont Corporation, in charge of chemicals and chemical warfare weapons; Watson Davis, director of Science Service, assigned to sanitation and medical problems; Dr. Frederick M. Felker, dean of the George Washington School of Engineering, in charge of building and camouflage inventions, and Dr. Webster N. Jones, dean of engineering at Carnegie Teech, in charge of metals and metallurgy.

Set Up by Hopkins

The Council was set up by former Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, to serve as a clearing house for voluntary inventions useful in national defense, and to hand out specific defense problems to inventors capable of solving them.

A spokesman for the council declined to estimate how many of the 6,000 inventions received might eventually have practical use for defense.

The meeting yesterday was the council's third.

The first, early in the fall, was for organization, and in the second meeting members went over a few of the inventions, picked at random from the first received. Recently defense inventions have been coming into the council's office at the Commerce Department at the rate of 120 a day, officials said.

Besides their business sessions the council will have a luncheon meeting with liaison officers of the Army and Navy at 1 p. m. today in the Washington Hotel.

Jobs: New civil service exams have been opened for the following jobs: Transportation tariff examiner, $2,300 and $2,000 a year; Interstate Commerce Commission; horizontal sorting machine operator, $1,260 a year; senior bookkeeping machine operator, $1,620 a year; multilith cameraman and platemaker, $1,920 a year; multilith press operator, $1,440; senior and junior blueprint operator, $1,440 and $1,260; photostat operators, $1,440 and $1,260; photographers, $2,000 and $1,620; aircraft motors mechanic, $7.48 to $8.44 a day, at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.; iron chipper and calker, $7.10 to $8.06 a day, Curtis Bay, Md., Coast Guard Depot; electroplater, $7.44 to $8.40 a day, Quantico Marine Barracks; laundry helper, $690 a year, Quartermaster Laundry, at Fort Myer, Va.; also shipfitters, loftsmen, machinists, lens grinders and instrument makers, for appointment in ordnance factories and Navy establishments throughout the country and Hawaii.

Foundling Baby Gets Home With College Men

Welfare Shelter head, holds 3-week-old abandoned baby which Mrs. Bessie Bitting, house mother at University of Pennsylvania men's dormitory, wants to adopt ## Housemother to Adopt Girl Left in Dormitory At Pennsylvania U.

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 3.—A University of Pennsylvania dormitory housing 43 men students appeared destined today for a bit of young feminine influence.

A three-week-old girl was found abandoned in the hallway of the dormitory at 1:40 a. m. last Saturday and Mrs. Bessie Bitting, 49-year-old childless housemother, announced today she would file adoption papers.

"I've always wanted a baby," explained Mrs. Bitting. "Besides," she added, "I've got 43 devils here in this dormitory. They're all good boys and students, but they need a girl around."

Mrs. Bitting, known as "Mom" by the students, described the brown-eyed, brown-haired girl as a "doll."

Frank Norton, of Batavia, N. Y., a senior in the University's Wharton School, found the baby when he returned to the dormitory. He called Mrs. Bitting, who lives next door.

The baby was dressed in an expensively made pink, knitted suit and wrapped in a pink and white blanket.

A note inside the blanket read: "Baby Louise. Please take care of her for me. Don't send her to a home. In due time I will send you money and in time I will come and get her."

Instead of Louise, however, the baby will be named Wanita, if Mrs. Bitting is granted her custody.

Mrs. Bitting's husband, Charles, an employe of the University chemical laboratory, hasn't objected to the adoption plans, she said, adding: "He's fond of children."

And the students—they're all excited, said Mrs. Bitting.

"They're already talking about buying her presents for Christmas."

Christmas Deepens Widow's Despair

stretch out her meager funds as far as possible. She has a part-time job as a telephone operator, but does not make enough to pay the family's expenses. Her frail condition, due to diabetes, makes special foods and medicines necessary for her—but she cannot buy them.

After her husband's death three years ago, her father cared for her family. But now he—her last relative—is dead, and she has nowhere to turn. While her small savings and her father's small insurance were being used up, she frantically sought work, but could find only a small paying job.

She has tried to hide her worry from Jimmy, but he has been noticing her reddened eyes when he comes home from school. And to try to reassure her, he told her that he wouldn't care if they didn't have "a big Christmas tree this year." He doesn't yet realize that there'll be hardly any Christmas at all in this home, unless help comes soon.

With $120, Mrs. S. could be assisted in the payment of rent, and food and clothing for the family, until she is well enough to find and accept full-time work.

Family No. 6

Mr. and Mrs. A. and their seven children are crowded into two basement rooms. One of the rooms, which serves as a kitchen and living room, contains the furnace for the building. Ashes get in the food, and it is impossible to keep the room clean and sanitary. The children have no other place to play, and it is not surprising that the two youngest have been ill.

Mr. A's troubles became too heavy for him when he was arrested for a minor offense and had to pay for bail bond and for attorney's fees which took all his available funds. He had been carrying on a business in which he used a truck, and had been struggling to make a living for his wife and the seven children, ranging from seven years down to three months.

The family is now several weeks behind with the rent. The children need warm clothing and better food. Through The Post's Christmas fund, the family could be helped to move to a more healthful place, and milk and other necessities could be provided, while Mr. A. is being assisted to reestablish his business and to become self-supporting again.

These families are accustomed to being self-supporting; they do not want to become charity cases. Temporary help promises to set them on their feet again.

The families are not eligible for public relief, and the funds of the various social agencies are severely limited, insufficient to meet all the demands made upon them.

Each one of the 50 neediest families was selected by one of the five following agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion welfare department, Salvation Army and Bureau of Rehabilitation. These agencies, which are members of the Community Chest and are supported by Chest funds, carry all costs of administering The Post's fund for the neediest families.

Duraluminum Train Wins Favor in Rome

In a trial run on Italy's State Railways in 1939 a duraluminum train won the approval of railway officials in Rome.

The train consists of six coaches assembled on long frames and mounted on special springs. The coaches are sheathed with a thick plate of duraluminum, which also covers the roof and doors. Each coach weighs only 33 tons, compared with 45 for ordinary ones.

Word comes from London that you are the one person in the world to whom "peace feelers might safely be entrusted. Let me, in the name of humanity, entreat you to further this timely suggestion and use your great power for the benefit of mankind to*

"Stop the War Now

This war may escape the control of man. Disease stalks in the offing—millions of children improperly fed and cared for. The plague of typhus might descend in the wake of wanton destruction and does not discriminate between friend or foe. With our vaunted, rapid modern transportation a worse enemy than yet conceived might be at our door. Every boy after reading his First Caesar dreams of being a World Conqueror—and those who have been in a position to attempt realizing their dreams have harried a world for centuries and brought incalculable woe and despair in spite of many assumed high aims. You are in a position to attempt another World Conquest of a mightier and more heroic nature and evolve a happy and peaceful solution from all the surrounding chaos by stopping the war now. Allow me to offer my services to assist your renewed efforts for peace and save the youth of England and the Continent from further slaughter."

May I suggest your calling a World Conference from representatives of all nations. Your call, while at first causing a furore, should be gratefully accepted by all right-minded humanitarians, and if successful, elevate you to a pedestal as the Hero and idol of all time.

Weather Halts Nazi Raids on Britain

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Dec. 4.—The German Luftwaffe broke off its attacks on London and a western Midlands town shortly before midnight last night in the thick of poor flying conditions.

The Midlands town apparently was the main objective, although the raiders flew over Wales and other provincial areas and paid London fleeting "nuisance" visits, dropping some bombs in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire.

The Midlands raid, of comparatively short duration, was the first on that town in several days. Principal damage reported was to shops and homes.

Several persons were believed trapped under demolished homes.

A dozen incendiary bombs fell on a London movie theater. Sparks and plaster showered the audience, but the auditorium was cleared without incident and firemen quickly extinguished the fire.

Bus Machine-Gunned

In south England, a German plane dived on a bus and attempted to machine-gun it. The driver, previously warned by bombs falling in a nearby field, shepherded his passengers out of the bus into a ditch and a shower of bullets just missed the vehicle. There were no casualties.

The Germans ignored London Monday night, but attacked the city in the morning rush hour and dive-bombed one section of the capital. Several houses were damaged and some injuries were reported after that attack—the first of four daylight raids on London.

Day raiders also attacked an east Anglican town. Observers said they machine-gunned the streets there and bombed them.

The ministry of home security reported that some bombs were dropped at two places in western England during the afternoon, but only slight damage was done.

"At one of the places a few people were injured," the ministry said.

It was in the west—at Bristol—that the Germans Monday night turned on destructive force. They pounded that important western port for six hours in the third big raid in ten days.

Guns' Bag Now 400

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 3.—Antiaircraft guns have, so far, shot down "well over" 300 German planes by day and 100 by night, the ministry of information announced today.

Additionally, it was said that "very many" enemy planes were damaged, which costs the Nazis time and materials while reducing their force of available planes.

The supply of antiaircraft weapons is said to be great and growing, but not unlimited. The guns are said to have proved themselves, and the supply of ammunition is adequate.

Nazis Tell of Bristol Damage

Berlin, Dec. 3.—The attack of the German air force on Bristol last night is described today as having been highly effective.

The raid, reportedly, lasted five hours and was apparently, concentrated on the eastern and the western parts of the city. Pilots report having observed numerous fires covering an area of more than one-square kilometer in each part, in addition to a great number of smaller blazes.

Grain elevators and lumber yards were fired, it is said here. A lumber yard burning briskly close to the Portishead dock, reportedly set fire to a gas work which blew up with a tremendous explosion.

London is reported to have been raided in the course of today by German bombers. Two attacks were made during the forenoon, it is stated here. The Germans report that their planes were able to penetrate British antiaircraft defenses with "striking ease."

German airplanes last night laid an unusually large number of mines at British harbor entrances it is said.

R. A. F. Hammers at Objectives From Norway to East Africa

By Robert P. Post.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 3.—British bombers, continuing their counteroffensive against the Axis despite dirty weather, last night and today struck at enemy objectives from Norway to Italian East Africa.

Cairo dispatches reported long-range bombing attacks on Naples, where a railway junction and oil refineries were successfully attacked. In the same war theater, the air ministry here reported Monday night assaults on "important military objectives" at Valona, one of Italy's three ports in Albania.

The air ministry also revealed the details of the part the R. A. F. played in the capture of Koritza, Albania, by the Greeks.

Nazi Supply Ship Bombed

The Italians were rushing reinforcements up when three British Blenheims responded to the call of the Greek commander. One of them got a bridge while the others, coming down through the clouds, dive-bombed and machine-gunned the Italian troops. Only one of the three planes returned.

As for the British action against Germany, most recent reports show that it was conducted largely by the coastal command which bombed and set fire to several German supply ships.

Both the coastal command and the bombing command scored successes Monday night and early today, according to the air ministry. A patrolling coastal command plane got a direct hit on the stern of an enemy supply ship off the Norwegian coast Monday. Monday night and Tuesday morning there were concerted attacks on enemy ships off the Norwegian coast and raid on wharves at the Feje Islands.

In the latter raid one of the British Hudsons, bombing from 900 feet, apparently touched off a munitions dump, because the explosion following the dropping of the bombs tossed the Hudson around. Another plane reconnoitering over Stavanger Fjord found two German supply ships and reported a hit on one of them.

The coastal command yesterday also contributed a story of how a Hudson bomber found a German U-boat "in its own back yard" and bombed it. The U-boat had no time to submerge when the British plane came screaming down, but replied with antiaircraft fire. At 300 yards the U-boat scored a hit on the British plane, which dropped one bomb on the conning tower of the German and others alongside.

Wives Are Britain's Unsung Heroines of War In Business of Keeping Life Going On

By Sylvia Lucas

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 3.—The business of running a house in Britain is getting more complicated every day. It is not the bombing that bothers housewives so much as the little details—the milkman that doesn't show up, the gas supply that doesn't work, the husband who gets home three hours late for dinner.

This correspondent talked today to three women, picked at random whose job it is to run houses in three different spheres of English life. Their problems and observations are more or less typical.

Unexpected Guests

Margaret Cole, thin and intellectual, lives in a big house on the outskirts of London. She has three children—one at Cambridge and two in public school. She said:

"The blitzkrieg has split our family unit into pieces. My husband has gone to work at Oxford for the duration of the war. Humphrey and Anne who are normally at day school, have both been moved to the country with their schools. Jane is at Cambridge. On the whole the family is much more expensive, separated like this. And the financial situation is not helped which by the frequent visits of friends who have been bombed out.

"Some of these unexpected guests bring their own rations but most of them don't. When I do entertain, my invitation to dinner guests is 'come and bring your tooth brush.'

"I have a large strengthened cellar and a plentiful supply of camp-beds. When the barrage outside is bad, dinner guests stay the night. We have been very lucky out here—only seven windows broken."

Official's Wife

The second housewife, Virginia Foster, 26, is good looking and chic. She took honors in history at Oxford. She now works in a publicity office and is married to a government official. She said:

"I am in my third home since the blitz started. We were bombed out of our Bloomsbury flat and lost nearly everything. Then we moved to my mother's in Highgate and she was bombed out. Now we are living in the basement of an empty house belonging to some friends who have gone to the country.

"We just got two camp-beds for ourselves when our furniture went. As far as meal arrangements go, everything is much the same, except that we cut out luxuries. We never have any drink in the house, no cream, less butter and the usual ration of meat.

"I now do the cooking, which I didn't do before. The whole business of domestic living takes twice as long. Shopping takes twice as long because of standing in queues.

"We save by pooling rations, and doubling up with neighbors at meals. We do much more reading and take much better care of the few clothes we have left now. It is very restful when all nonessentials have fallen away."

In the East End

Ethel Graham, a typical East-End housewife, lives at 12 Maple Avenue, in Upminster. She says:

"We've been lucky. The nearest bombs fell in the next street. Our gas was off for a while, but the milkman has been coming regularly every morning. There is a shortage of some things at Moore's provisions store—eggs have disappeared. onions used to be dear but now the government has regulated the price. Nonrationed foods, like cheese, are scarce.

"Once or twice I couldn't get my bacon ration. Prices have gone up quite a bit—a neighbor said he used to give his wife 30 shillings a week (about $6) for food, but now has to give her 38 (about $7.50)—but we are all managing somehow, and we are not complaining."

5% of Southampton War Industry Lost

3-Week Bombing Destroys Homes Of 25% of Citizens

By H. Taylor Henry
Associated Press Staff Writer

Southampton, England, Dec. 3.—This bomb-wrecked port, familiar to thousands of peacetime American tourists as a terminus of the Atlantic run from New York, worked under difficulties today to restore its essential war industries to normal production.

The cumulative effect of a 3-week rain of bombs, climaxed by the week-end's pounding from waves of German raiders, made the city look as battered as Coventry, but British officials estimated that war industries suffered less than a 5 per cent plant destruction.

Obviously this figure did not include the loss of production suffered as a result of the flight of workers from their razed homes.

The central and slum areas of the city were devastated, and many who worked in the war plants could stay no place near enough for them to report to their jobs.

On a short tour of the city's surrounding areas, a trip made without government supervision, I saw factories which had been bombed out of action. On the other side of the ledger there were many with steam up and workers already back on the job.

From 20 to 25 per cent of the city's 175,000 inhabitants are homeless. They have been billeted within a radius of 30 miles of the city.

Old Bristol a "Ruin"

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—How an ancient part of Bristol, western English port which was bombed heavily again last night, was turned into a "ruin" and many of the city's university buildings swept by fire in a recent German raid was told today in a letter received here.

It was written by Dr. J. S. Spink, a London University lecturer, who moved to Bristol early in the war with other teachers and students.

Dr. Spink watched from the Bristol University tower, commanding a good view of the city.

Here's the story in his own words:

"Two or three big flares floated down, lighting up the whole town. Fires were burning. Suddenly another (a church) started in the center of the city.

"The old town in Bristol is very compact, with narrow, eighteenth century streets. Suddenly, all along the hills on the south side of town, hundreds of little points of light appeared—incendiaries.

"Then, right across the center of Bristol, in a strip about a quarter of a mile wide, lots of lights appeared—hundreds of incendiaries bursting into flame on the roofs of houses. I must admit the spectacle was grandiose.

"Then suddenly they began to fall on us, scores of them whistling down around the tower. Many fell on the buildings, and we rushed downstairs to a flat part of the roof and put out two or three.

Lines of Houses Wrecked

"We then returned to the tower and watched another dozen or so fires start in shops and buildings around the base of the tower.

"It was not till the next day that I saw what happened to the shopping and commercial center of Bristol. It is quite true that nearly all damage was done to shops, houses, offices, theaters, and cinemas rather than docks and railways.

"But eighteenth century Bristol is a ruin.

"The next day there was no water and in some parts no light. Some of the streets no longer existed. Lines of 30 to 40 houses were just rubble.

". . . Bristol really was a stricken town. Luckily, between the second and third belts of incendiaries a wide band was spared from which essential services could be carried on. . . .

"I think Bristol made a rapid recovery and that quite literally the damage, though severe, was not vital—so much consisting, as it did, in shops.

"Another raid on the same scale the following night might have been a finishing blow, but I suppose the Germans thought they would get better results per ton of bombs if they attacked another town.

"The casualty list was short. I saw it but by light of torch. I would say there certainly were not 50 killed."

De Gaulle Changing Attitude Toward Vichy Government

Expresses Belief Some of Petain's Men Are Acting Sincerely but Duped by Nazis; Places His 'Free' Army at 35,000 Troops

By James B. Reston,
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 3.—France's once great army of 5,000,000 men has been reduced to a mere police force of 100,000, Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today in an interview.

Commenting on the weakness of his country, the general said that demobilization in all French colonies under the Vichy government was also being carried out and even the famous French Foreign Legion had been officially disbanded.

It was misleading to believe the German claims about their intentions toward France, Gen. de Gaulle said. Instead of their avowed intention of seeking "collaboration" between Germany and France, the Nazis, he said, were merely seeking the domination of France in order to secure the resources, arms, and especially the navy of the republic for the war against Great Britain.

Gen. de Gaulle is clearly changing his public attitude toward the Vichy government—perhaps at the suggestion of Prime Minister Churchill, whom he has seen several times since returning from Africa.

Until he arrived back here Gen. de Gaulle's attitude has been openly hostile to Vichy and he has tended to accuse French leaders of being in league with the Nazis. All along the British have spoken moderately about Marshal Petain and Gen de Gaulle is evidently coming over to their point of view.

Today, for example, he said, he was willing to believe that some members of the Vichy government sincerely desired only to relieve the burden that had been placed on France. They hoped, undoubtedly, he said, to mitigate the hardships of the prisoners of war in Germany and to reduce the cost of German occupation, but in any conflict between Vichy's desires and Germany's demands, he said, he had no hesitation in choosing the winner.

Gen. de Gaulle's tone on the whole was optimistic. He predicted that the Allies would gain superiority in the air in 1941. The Germans, too, feared this, he said, and would probably try to make a major move in the Mediterranean this winter.

His own forces, he said, had increased to the point where he had 35,000 men under arms and 20 warships, as well as 80 merchant vessels sailing with the British.

Free-French soldiers are now on the Libyan frontier, he said, and would be able to cover the Egyptian flank if an Axis attack came, and he stressed the fact that French technicians were working in Britain, Canada and the United States.

Inside France, he said, there is a definite swing against the Germans. At first his people, he said, were "stupefied by the disaster," but now on the basis of reliable information 90 per cent of them believed in an allied victory and the ideals of free France.

French Planes at Gibraltar

Fun Starts Paris Riot

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 3 (AP).—Two bamboo fishing poles caused a riot between French students and German soldiers in which two persons were killed and many injured near Paris' Arc de Triomphe on Armistice Day, the newspaper La Democratie of Delemont reported tonight.

The French for "two poles" is "deux gaules" (which sounds like the name of the Free French leader, De Gaulle. The riot started when the parading students pointed to the poles they carried and shouted "Vive! Vive!"

2 Warships Hit as Invasion Is Beaten Off, Siam Asserts

'Considerable Number' of French Troops Reported Repelled by Military and Police While Thai Planes Attacked Vessels

By the Associated Press.

Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), Dec. 3.—The Thailand (Siamese) high command announced today that a French effort to seize the southeastern Thai province of Trad had been beaten off yesterday, with damage to one of two French warships, which landed a "considerable number" of troops.

The vessel, it was added, suffered three bomb hits.

The French attempts, the communique added, were frustrated by joint action of the Thailand air and military forces.

The communique said a detachment of French troops landed a few miles from the Thai frontier and penetrated inland a short distance before being repulsed by military and police guards, while Thai aircraft attacked the warships.

The vessel hit was declared to have been struck directly on the turrets and perhaps in the engine room as well. It was said to have retreated.

Another clash was reported on the northeast front near Nagor Banom, where a French landing party was declared repulsed with heavy casualties.

The Thai aviation, the communique said, also carried out retaliatory raids across the frontier, wrecking a French military headquarters at Thakhek.

French Retaliate

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Dec. 3 (AP).—The French colonial government reported today that "severest French retaliations" were taking place along the entire Mekong River Valley along the border where bombings and patrol skirmishes have strained relations between Indo-China and Thailand (Siam).

The Mekong Valley section was isolated from the rest of Indo-China yesterday when alleged Fifth Columnists were said to have severed communications.

The French said the entire border was closed.

This was taken by some observers as an indication there was increasingly widespread fighting on land, sea and in the air along the frontier strip where Thailand has made territorial demands upon Indo-China.

Belief was expressed in some quarters that the original cause of friction, the territorial claims, had been fanned by foreign influences (presumably Japanese) seeking to disturb the status quo in southeastern Asia.

French forces were reported taking severe action against 10,000 natives described as insurrectionists in the vicinity of Mytho.

Communist Ranks Split in So. America

Party Is Undergoing Worst Crisis Because of Latin-American Activities Of Headquarters in New York

By John W. White
Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, Dec. 3.—The Communist movement in South America is undergoing the most serious crisis in its history as a result of the internal strife that has been aroused by Latin-American activities of the New York headquarters of the Communist Party. Many Communists believe that the split which is now taking place is so serious that the party never will be able to recover from it.

Everywhere, except in Chile, party members who still oppose Nazism and Fascism and support the good-neighbor policy, are being purged as Trotskyists. Two years ago Trotskyism in the Communist Party meant the exact opposite of what it means today. But the party has had to change its international policy since the signing of the Berlin-Moscow pact; those who are now being purged as Trotskyists have not been able to change their ideas as quickly as the party has.

Until a short time ago to be a Trotzkyist was to be an extreme leftist in the party. Today it means still holding to a moderate international policy instead of heartily supporting the party's present anti-United States, anti-Britain and pro-neutral policy.

Eugene Gomez, Communist member in the Uruguayan Chamber of Deputies and secretary general for the party in Uruguay, is known locally as the "Little Browder" rather than the "Little Stalin." Gomez is rabidly anti-United States, anti-Britain and wants Uruguay to remain neutral in the European war and to thus not participate in continental defense plans. It was he who successfully brought charges of treason against the leaders who did not agree with him.

The present rift is a direct sequel to the Pan American Communist conference at Santiago de Chile last October, when Moscow and New York tried to persuade South American Communists that the time was ripe for organizing in Soviets the soldiers, workmen and farmers in Chile.

The New York headquarters was represented at that conference by a secret agent from the Latin-American bureau of the New York headquarters who did not appear as a delegate but endeavored to instruct the delegates how to vote.

The Santiago conference failed to set up the Soviets in Chile. Its most serious achievement appears to have been to separate from the party a large number of hitherto valuable leaders who have taken a firm stand against interference by Moscow and New York in the internal affairs of South American countries.

Party leaders who are opposed to the Latin-American activities of the New York headquarters are those who were converted to the good-neighbor policy when the party was supporting that policy. They contend that the party's present policy of fighting the good-neighbor policy is detrimental to South American interests and that they are more interested in the local interests of their respective countries than in the party's international objectives. Which, accordingly, makes them poor Communists.

In Uruguay the purge has been so severe that it has deprived the party of all its leaders, leaving only a bureaucracy of salaried employers to direct party activities.

Reports reaching here are that a serious fight is going on in the party in practically all South American countries for leadership in each country.

Rome Claims British Cruiser Torpedoed, Admits Bombings

Air Raid Damage to Naples and Sicilian Port of Augusta Held 'Unimportant;' Surrender of 5,000 to Greeks Denied

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Rome, Dec. 3.—The torpedoing of a British cruiser by an Italian submarine in the Straits of Sicily was announced today by the Italian high command, which also reported raids by British bombers on Naples and the Sicilian port of Augusta.

Small fires, which were immediately brought under control and which caused unimportant damage, were the only results of the raids, the communique said.

"On the night of November 27-28," the communique reported, "an Italian submarine cruising in the waters of the Sicilian Channel attacked and hit with a torpedo an enemy cruiser, escorted by two destroyers, coming in from Malta."

Of the campaign now raging in the snowstorms of Albania the high command said merely: "There have been Greek attacks and Italian counterattacks on the Ninth and Eleventh army fronts. Our aviation cooperated with the troops bombing communication lines and machine-gunning enemy positions and trucks. Our air squadron bombed the Porto Nuovo in Corfu."

Denials were issued in authoritative quarters today of British radio broadcasts talking of revolt among the Albanians. "Hundreds of valorous deeds are now being performed by our Albanian soldiers," it was said, "and the military authorities report a spirit of true comradeship between the Albanians and our troops."

There was also a denial of a Greek assertion that 5,000 Italians had been taken prisoners.

Most of the Italian press gave prominence today to pictures of exploded dumdum bullets, and it was charged that the Greek soldiers are using them against Italy's troops.

Included in the daily military communique was the declaration that an Italian submarine now returned to its base sank the British cargo carrier Lilian Moller, 4,866 tons, in the Atlantic on November 19.

It also was pointed out that the two British submarines, Rainbow and Triad, which the British Admiralty has admitted losing, were stationed in the Mediterranean and that their sinking must therefore be added to Italian successes.

Hughes Holds Comment On Rumor He'll Resign

Chief Justice Hughes yesterday declined to take any notice of rumors that he contemplated retiring soon.

Through his personal secretary, Wendell W. Mischler, the Chief Justice said that he "did not wish to take any notice of these rumors and will make no comment on them."

One report even had said that Mr. Hughes already has notified President Roosevelt of his intention to leave the Supreme Court.

Rumania Seizes Iron Guard Arms

This reference to suspected members was generally interpreted as a move to oust the thousands of disreputable persons who have flocked to the Iron Guard banner in recent weeks and who are credited with responsibility for the current disorders.

Today's sweeping orders and their prompt enforcement awakened countless rumors in Bucharest. One of these—that 680 Jews have been killed in recent weeks by "irresponsible persons" in various parts of the country—was promptly denied.

Likewise dismissed as "tendentious" rumors by officials was the widespread report here that two of the assassins of Prof. Nicholas Borga, killed in last week's political murders, had been tracked down and slain.

Most sensational of today's reports was that former Premier George Tatarescu with four other former ministers had fled from their sleeping quarters in the ministry of interior and taken refuge in Yugoslavia.

At all events there emerged one unmistakable fact tonight. Well-informed diplomatic and political circles were convinced that "something big is happening in Rumania," that Premier Antonescu is making it happen and that the strength of the premier is increasing almost hourly.

Diplomatic quarters suggest Antonescu has received unqualified assurances in the last three days that he is regarded in Berlin as Rumania's "strong man" and may depend on unlimited assistance to maintain and consolidate his policies.

The Nazi mayor of Vienna, Herman Neubacher, returned to Bucharest yesterday morning and held an extensive conference with Premier Antonescu, to which Vice Premier Horia Sima was also invited. German circles admitted Neubacher's visit was important and "official."

Sima's orders suppressing the Iron Guard Legionary police and other measures concerning the newly enrolled members, has been received with a certain amount of relief.

It is felt that through this measure Antonescu, supported by the generals, has finally obtained for the government the upper hand over the extremist elements in the running of the country.

It is not considered likely, however, that the radical wing group of Iron Guardsmen will accept this change in policy without some resistance. Pamphlets are already being distributed in the darkened streets, slipped under doorways and in letter boxes accusing Horia Sima of being "an ambitious traitor" and playing into Antonescu's hands by ceding the power so hard fought for.

Conservative elements criticizing the inadequacy of the measures point out that by excluding from the party those radical elements that joined in the last three months is practically doing nothing.

TNEC Gets Lower Income Housing Plan

Report Urges Homes Be Constructed for $1,500-a-Year Group

Provision of new houses for more than 9,000,000 American families in the income groups earning less than $1,500 a year is urged in a report submitted yesterday to the Temporary National Economic Committee.

The study calls for increased technical housing research, standardization of materials, simplification of building codes and enforcement of antitrust legislation.

Noting that private enterprise is "ideally" suited to the mammoth building job, the report says that modern industry, however, is geared to build houses primarily for income groups earning $2,000 or more per year.

"The provision of homes today," the study says "is largely dependent upon a haphazard grouping of small, independent units lacking capital, and upon traditions, customs and restraints of one kind or another that are difficult to break."

"Many of the raw materials," it asserts, "are concentrated in a few hands with a controlled and inflexible pricing system."

The report recommends amending the National Housing Act so that lower interest rates would be required and loans on a higher proportion of the valuation guaranteed in return for lower rentals.

Some folks still can't believe their eyes

GOING over Buick dealers' reports on our 1941 models, we find an unusual thing happening.

Time and again cars come in for the usual inspections with an extra note of instructions—"Please check the gas gauge needle."

There's nothing wrong with those gas gauge needles—they work perfectly.

But even after hundreds of miles, people mistrust their eyes when they see the snail-like pace from the Full mark toward Empty—they don't see how it's possible for a car as big as Buick to go so far on so little.

But it does—and for good reasons.

The whole FIREBALL engine was designed and built to get the most good out of modern gasolines.

And the simple secret of Compound Carburetion is that it keeps your engine running on its most frugal diet for all normal driving—and provides full feed only when you need, want and call for the lift of extra wallop.

Meantime even the gears are helping save money—for the regular high gear in a Buick gives you the economy of the so-called "gas-saving" top speeds you hear boosted so enthusiastically.

The big thing is, of course, that this is no small car that's setting these economy figures. There are all the room, size, impressiveness, comfort and downright thrilling performance you expect from a Buick.

Maybe that's why people still hesitate to believe their own eyes.

We assure them, however—and you too—that it isn't because the needle's out of kilter that it goes down so slowly. It's because that needle's in a Buick—a thrifty and thrilling 1941 FIREBALL Buick.

Labor for Defense Sufficient, CIO Says

Union Proposes to Tolan Committee That National Conference Be Held To Solve Mass Unemployment

By James D. Secrest

The Congress of Industrial Organizations has found no evidence of shortages in labor for national defense industries, the House committee investigating interstate migration was told yesterday, and no shortage is anticipated.

Ralph Hetzel, director of the unemployment division of the C. I. O., who made the statement, appeared for Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O. He read a paper for Murray, who suggested a national conference of responsible leaders of labor, industry, agriculture, and the Government to work out a solution to the problem of mass unemployment.

The C. I. O. expected the national defense drive within a year to reduce unemployment by about 2,500,000, Hetzel said. This figure includes an anticipation of 1,000,000 being in the armed services and the normal addition of 500,000 annually to the working population.

Jobs in national defense industries will not be sufficient to wipe out unemployment, Murray stated in his paper, and after the "boom now induced by national defense expenditures, there will undoubtedly be a period in which we will again have to consider those normal measures which are necessary to end unemployment in the Nation."

Great Depression Foreseen

Hetzel agreed with an observation of Representative Osmers (Republican), of New Jersey, that after the war this country will experience its greatest depression and mass migration within 50 years.

He said the C. I. O. is opposed to increasing the work week beyond 40 hours and suggested that where a speed-up in production is needed that three shifts could be used instead of two. England found, he added, that a long work week does not expedite production.

Both efficiency and the health of the workers suffer, Hetzel said, from too long working hours. There can be no excuse for increasing the work week until all available labor is absorbed, he added, and that eventuality is not anticipated.

Earlier the Tolan committee heard Secretary of Labor Perkins and Col. Phillip B. Fleming, administrator of the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department, suggest a broadening of the wage and hour act and certain social security laws to protect "industrialized" agricultural workers.

First Lady to Appear

Chairman Tolan announced that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will appear before the committee next Tuesday, when the subject of economic retardation of migrant workers will be considered. It will be Mrs. Roosevelt's second appearance before a Congressional committee, the first being last spring before a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Among the migrant witnesses heard by the committee was Ben Alter, 36, an athletic and tweed-attired father, of Shamokin, Pa., who recounted without embarrassment his business as a coal "bootlegger."

Alter explained that residents of Shamokin and adjacent coal mining districts were driven to "'bootlegging" coal after most of the mines in the area ceased operation in 1930. Now about 20,000 persons are engaged in the illegal industry.

Company police continue to make arrests, Alter said, and the standard punishment for trespassing is $10 fine or ten days in jail. Alter said he had "taken the ten days numerous times. Alter is a "middle man" in that he hauls the coal mined by another to a third person, who "treats" it.

Miss Perkins Offers Program

Secretary Perkins submitted a 10-point program that covered other fields than migrant workers after discussing the history of transient workers in this country.

Among her recommendations were:

Extension of the coverage of labor and social security laws, both State and Federal, to workers in "industrialized" agriculture and to all workers engaged in processing and packing agricultural products.

Establishment of a farm placement service and an industrial and construction placement service; regulation of labor contractors by State and Federal laws;

Improved housing, health and welfare services, public assistance, educational facilities, and rehabilitation and resettlement programs for migrant citizens.

A central coordinating agency is needed, she said, to assist in planning future study and promoting both study and action.

Fleming Cites Exemptions

Col. Fleming cited exemptions of farm and rural labor under the Wage-Hour Act and said:

"The thing I want to bring to your attention as being intimately related to the migration question is the possibility of extending the act to cover the workers employed in the larger type of agricultural operations."

Extension of wage regulation to the large employers of farm labor, he said, would affect only a minute fraction of all farms but would afford protection to tens of thousands of workers in periods of active seasonal operations.

Steel Industry Moves to Step Up Capacity

Bethlehem Prepares To Boost Ingot Output 850,000 Tons Yearly

A step toward expansion of the Nation's capacity to produce steel, prime ingredient of tanks and guns and battleships, was announced last night by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., industrial materials chief of the Defense Commission.

Some official concern has been felt that the steel production capacity might not be sufficient to care for all civilian and defense needs.

Stettinius, former head of the United States Steel Corporation, said that the Bethlehem Steel Co. had informed the commission it was "ready to make the necessary investment to expand its annual steel ingot capacity by 850,000 tons to meet defense program requirements."

The commissioner said that Bethlehem had filed an application with the Navy Department for a "certificate of necessity" which would entitle it to a tax deduction for amortization over a 5-year period.

Stettinius expressed the opinion that members of the commission would look with favor upon "the installation of desirable emergency facilities in the steel industry."

Bethlehem's proposed plan, the announcement said, would include an increase in its pig iron capacity and also in its coke capacity, with accompanying increase in the production of toluol, used in the manufacture of explosives.

Stettinius said:

"Present ingot capacity of the steel industry is approximately 83,000,000 tons per annum. Production during the week ended November 23 was at the rate of approximately 78,000,000 tons of ingots annually."

He said that some of the emergency facilities should be ready to operate in about six months, but that completion of the entire Bethlehem plant might take a year.

Butler Reelected By D. C. Auto Trade Association

Lee D. Butler has been elected president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association for a second term, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers for the forthcoming year are Benjamin Ourisman, first vice president; Robert L. Lewis, second vice president; F. L. Haller, secretary, and L. S. Jullien, treasurer. Richard J. Murphy is association manager.

Butler declared yesterday that the automobile industry here is enjoying an exceptionally good year, with a 36 per cent increase in new car registrations during 11 months of 1940 over the same period last year. He added that he foresaw no great curtailment in new car production caused by the defense program in the immediate future.

New York Children Taught 'Soviet Slant,' Inquiry Told

Self-Styled Leader in Communist 'Training School' Says They Learned To Waylay and Beat Up Boy Scouts

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—A story of how a New York grammar school child is taught to be a Communist—by beating up Boy Scouts and regarding teachers and policemen as enemies—was told today by a Brooklyn zoologist to a joint legislative committee investigating subversive movements in the city's school system.

Ralph de Sola, the witness, testified he joined the Communist Party and was assigned to the "children's movement"—the Communist "training school" for children from 6 to 14.

"They were taught the 'Soviet slant' on life," he testified. "They were taught their only friends were the defenders of the Soviet system, and their enemies teachers, policemen and others who did not believe as they did."

Tables Sometimes Turned

Part of this program, he added, consisted of waylaying and beating Boy Scouts, although frequently the tables were turned and "other kids would sock them and beat them up."

De Sola in his testimony also said Morris U. Schappes, history instructor at the College of the City of New York, and Mrs. Elizabeth Deward and Miss Yetta Feigenbaum, Brooklyn public school teachers, were members of the Communist Party.

At the opening session yesterday, Dr. Bernard D. N. Grebanier, assistant professor of English at Brooklyn College, testified that he and eight other faculty members joined the party, using aliases to conceal their identity. Seven of those he named denied any connection with the Communist Party and accused him of being "hysterical."

Cast Him $500 Yearly

He continued today that it had cost him approximately $500 a year to belong, some for dues, some for support of the Communist publication, the Daily Worker, and the rest for "the Red Front fund."

"I never knew exactly what that front was," he said.

Grebanier said his testimony "might give a false impression of the situation at Brooklyn College today."

"I believe the Communist influence is now at the vanishing point," he said. "The Young Communist League has lost much influence among the students. What influence it has, has been reduced to members of the organization. I believe the same thing is true for the faculty."

Henry-Haye, Its Mayor, Glad Petain Is Moving to Versailles

By the Associated Press

Gaston Henry-Haye, still Mayor of Versailles as well as French Ambassador to the United States, took some of the credit yesterday for the projected move of Chief of State Henri Petain's headquarters to the famous old city near Paris.

Beaming because his own city had been chosen as a seat of government, Henry-Haye revealed that he had suggested this to Petain last summer.

"I saw Marshal Petain at Clermont-Ferrand and asked him to establish his government at Versailles," Henry-Haye said. Clermont-Ferrand was a temporary seat of government before the officials moved to Vichy.

"Naturally I am happy that he is doing so now," the Ambassador added.

Petain "will be no prisoner" at Versailles, Henry-Haye emphasized, in discussing his move to a city in German-occupied France.

"If Marshal Petain establishes himself there," Henry-Haye continued, "you can be sure that he knows he will have freedom of action. Otherwise, he would not go."

Sure of Weygand's Loyalty

Henry-Haye discounted speculation that Gen. Maxime Weygand, now in French Morocco, was acting independently of the Vichy government in his colonial activities.

"As a soldier, Gen. Weygand obeys orders of Marshal Petain—make no mistake about that," the Ambassador said.

The French Ambassador had his first meeting yesterday with Admiral William D. Leahy, the new United States Ambassador to France.

The admiral told newspapermen he could "get by" in the French language.

Leahy's remark was made in reply to a question based on the reported statement by Marshal Petain, chief of the French state, that he hoped the new Ambassador could speak French, because they would have much to talk about.

Petain's Prestige Enhanced

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 3 (AP).—Chief of State Petain's plan to establish his French government seat at historic Versailles was viewed by political observers today as another shrewd step by the marshal to extend his authority over all France at a time when his prestige is at a high level.

From Versailles, where Petain is expected to use the Trianon Palace, he would be able to take German-occupied northern France at least partly under his wing, and could coordinate with the rest of his government at Vichy the interests of all France.

His public prestige, which was great among the people even when most men considered him only a figurehead, is enormous now.

Travelers from the occupied zone almost all report that the phrase they hear most is that "Papa Petain will see us through, if only he lives to finish the job." He is 84 years old.

House Group To Consider Strike Curbs

Judiciary Committee Requests Agencies' Views on Legislation

The House Judiciary Committee decided yesterday to make a study of the general situation relating to possible legislation to cure strikes in defense industries.

Numerous proposals for such legislative restrictions have been introduced, but the Administration is represented as opposing any new statutes.

Chairman Sumners, of the committee, said "we decided to appoint a group to look into the matter in a general way to see what we might do if the need for legislation should arise."

Sumners described the "whole situation" as "hazy" and said "we want to throw some light on it."

The chairman, who has communicated with several Government agencies and departments, seeking their views on proposals for legislation, said last night he had received replies from Defense Commissioner Edward T. Stettinius, Attorney General Jackson and Secretary of Labor Perkins. He declined to say what views they expressed.

Other committee sources said that following the committee meeting there was a discussion of possible use of the Selective Service law to help enforce strike settlement awards.

It was pointed out in the course of the discussion that President Woodrow Wilson made similar use of the draft machinery in warning strikers at the Remington arms plant at Bridgeport, Conn., in 1918. Wilson wrote:

"I desire that you return to work and abide by the award. If you refuse, each of you will be barred from employment in any war industry in the community in which the strike occurs for a period of one year. During that time the United States Employment Service will decline to obtain employment for you in any war industry elsewhere in the United States, as well as under the War and Navy Departments, the Shipping Board, the Railway Administration, and all other Government agencies, and the draft boards will be instructed to reject any claim of exemption based on your alleged usefulness for war production."

Lee's Appointment Arouses Protest Of Citizens' Group

Appointment of Maj. E. Brooke Lee to the Maryland House of Delegates, of which he formerly was speaker, was protested in a resolution adopted by the Section 4, Chevy Chase Citizens Association, President Elmer Pusey announced yesterday.

The resolution, introduced by W. R. Eyer, urged Maj. Lee to refuse the appointment and submit his candidacy to the electorate. The resolution declared the appointment, "without any attempt to sound out public sentiment," was "opposed to the view of those citizens who have been working for clean, representative government, free from boss rule."

Copies of the resolution, adopted by the association with one dissenting vote, will be sent to Maj. Lee, Gov. O'Conor and to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Aid To Blue Plains

Washington's first reaction to the WPA projects at Blue Plains will be one of appreciation and relief. Any reasonable move to improve conditions in this chamber of horrors officially designated as a Home for the Aged and Infirm would meet with public approval; for the whole community, like Mrs. Roosevelt, has been "shocked and depressed" by the conglomeration of human tragedies which investigations have revealed at Blue Plains.

A committee of doctors investigating this neglected institution a few months ago found conditions "approaching those described in the writings of Charles Dickens." Insane, feeble-minded and epileptic patients were seen to be inadequately housed in quarters indiscriminately assigned also to cripples, deaf-mutes, blind persons, jobless men and released convicts. Instead of being an appropriate home for the aged and infirm, Blue Plains had become the equivalent of an eighteenth-century pauper house.

The mere fact that the WPA considers it necessary to come to the rescue of a public institution in the Nation's Capital is a grave indictment of the haphazard governmental system in effect here. The conditions at Blue Plains should have been corrected by Congress years ago. Even after the exposure following Mrs. Roosevelt's visit to the home, Congress was content to add a few patches without essentially changing the general picture of gross neglect. So the WPA steps in as a last resort to provide additional personnel for proper operation of Blue Plains.

This roundabout means of easing a disgraceful situation illustrates the need for more responsible government in Washington as clearly as it points to the inadequacies of Blue Plains. For WPA assistance at best can be only temporary. There seems to be little hope of establishing model or even reasonably satisfactory public welfare institutions in the District until the people acquire more influence over the local government than they now have.

Using Our Gold

Every so often there is a hue and cry about our "idle gold" buried out at Fort Knox. The argument leaves out of account the fact that our currency and other liabilities are all reared upon the yellow metal in the Kentucky and other vaults. What has really lain idle is the two billion dollar stabilization fund which was set up under the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. Or, rather, nine-tenths of it; for one-tenth stayed in use.

Now the whole fund is to be put to work in shoring up the moneys of "friendly nations" in their relation to the dollar. War and the drastic slump in these nations' exports have dealt severely with our exchange rates, chiefly in Latin-America. For, if goods aren't sold, and gold (as is the case) is unavailable, a currency gradually loses value in the international market. Support will now be forthcoming from a fund which was destined for employment in precisely such an emergency.

It is to our advantage to put this floor under hemispherical moneys for more reasons than the obvious one of stabilizing conditions of trade. The main benefit will be political. The way that instability spreads from a currency to social and political institutions needs no reminder with postwar Germany's example still in mind. We have a stake in hemispherical stability which puts Secretary Morgenthau's department in the role of shield and buckler. For, if the mighty dollar were prevented from being an ally with the nations below the Rio Grande, if the dollar weren't allowed to be a link for Pan America, then the solidarity of this continent would remain largely verbal.

Aside from China, the fund cannot yet be applied to "friendly nations" outside this hemisphere, meaning in particular Great Britain. The Johnson Act and the neutrality statutes stand in the way. Some day these bars will have to be removed. And the British themselves could help to remove them if, instead of lamenting a disappearing war chest (so far unproven), they were to take the American people into their confidence by telling them the size of their American commitments.

Alter Ego To The FBI?

Chairman Dies of the House Committee on un-American Activities has a strange conception of the job to which he was assigned when this investigative body was created. He seems to regard his committee as a sort of super law-enforcement agency charged with the task of running down spies and saboteurs. It is fully evident from his radio address of Monday night that he has forgotten the original objective of his inquiry.

The committee of which Mr. Dies is head may rightly claim credit for exposure of subversive activities on the part of Nazi, Fascist and Communist groups. It has rendered a genuine service in arousing the country to an awareness of the enemies within our gates. If that task had not been completed, Mr. Dies' plea for more funds to keep his committee functioning would undoubtedly meet with a sympathetic response.

But the nature of the problem has completely changed since the Dies Committee was organized. There is no longer any cause for exposure to public view of every plot or overt act of the Fifth Columnists. The present situation demands that aliens working to destroy our Government and undermine our defense efforts be given their walking papers and that citizens engaged in similar activities be closely watched and vigorously prosecuted at the proper time. In other words, the problem is no longer one of mere exposure of subversive elements, but of active law enforcement to protect our national interests.

Mr. Dies' misconception of his assignment was amply revealed in his radio address. He insisted that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is not physically able to cope with the spies and saboteurs at work in this country, and he cited a number of instances in which his committee has brought to light cases of sabotage. His plea was basically that the committee be given a new lease on life so that it could help the FBI track down saboteurs plotting "wholesale acts of treason."

Clearly the irrepressible Texan is trying to horn in on the executive function of enforcing the law. Apparently he can't justify continuation of his inquiry on the ground of collecting evidence for the information of Congress and the public. He wants to make his committee a sort of detective agency—a second FBI that would be free of some of the restraints under which this investigating arm of the Department of Justice works. So the issue is not whether the Dies Committee should be silenced. Rather it is a question of maintaining a proper division of functions between the legislative and executive branches.

If the findings of the Dies Committee have led it to believe that new legislation is essential, it should lose no time in submitting its recommendations to Congress. But the task of running down and prosecuting saboteurs and other lawbreakers must be left to the Department of Justice. It would be a grave mistake for Congress to grant the Dies Committee a new lease on life as a kind of alter ego to the FBI.

Job And The Man

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones, who also holds the post of Secretary of Commerce, is reported to have informed newspapermen that Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Undersecretary of Commerce will be the real Secretary of Commerce. This candor on the part of Mr. Jones is refreshing, but he has merely stated the obvious. It goes without saying that Mr. Jones cannot properly direct the Federal Loan Agency, including the expanded RFC, and actively preside over the Department of Commerce at the same time. The real mystery is why Mr. Taylor was not given the title of Secretary of Commerce along with the work and the responsibility.

Canadian Fix

The giant war effort in Canada has created such a demand upon its resources for outside buying that the Ottawa government has been constrained to restrict its imports of nonessentials. The list is American. To that extent the sufferers will be an imposing line of American manufacturers and producers. As one looks down the list of affected products, one realizes once again the way that the war is making hay of Secretary Hull's trade policy. It seems only yesterday that after immense labors in work and persuasion the Canadians and ourselves signed one of the most important of these agreements. But times have changed and Secretary Hull's pioneering must be relegated to the background as an example for days of peace. In the meantime the United States in examining the new Canadian action will find solace in the knowledge that one market's loss is another market's gain. In other words, the dollars that Canada will save by these restrictions will be spent with the war-making equipment makers of America. But, aside from this material comfort, the United States would have understood and sympathized with the Canadians in a dilemma which they were loath to solve in this arbitrary fashion.

From Greece On

Those who were most doubtful about the ability of the Greeks to stem the Italian invasion are now talking of the chance that the victorious Greeks are affording for a Balkan diversion against the senior as well as the junior partner of the Axis. This change of front is breath-taking. Even after the initial success of the Greeks, many military observers held that the Greeks should be content with possession of the frontier road system inside Albania and should consolidate that position defensively pending the return of the Italians with reinforcements. But the Greeks, apparently, feel that bold measures are the safest. For now, in the center, they are actually threatening the Albanian capital at Tirana, while in the south the sea outlets of the Italian left wing have come under Greco-British threat.

The Greeks are no longer alone in this landward-thrust at the Italians. Albanians as well as British are lending their full cooperation—those Albanians whom the Italians crushed on Good Friday last. The memory of that day hasn't been forgotten by the fierce mountaineers of Albania. King Zog and his consort Geraldine, with her unborn child, were forced to flee over the mountain passes along the very route into Macedonia which the Italians made their point d'appui for Greece. There the royal couple found a refuge. The Albanians are therefore under a special obligation to the Greeks, but the obligation has been doubled by the gift which the Greeks have presented to the Albanians in the shape of an opportunity to turn upon their Italian conquerors.

The Italians, if Athens messages are correct, are now facing a situation which, unless speedily corrected, may mean wholesale withdrawal from Albania. Tirana is in central Albania, within 25 miles by road (there are no railroads in Albania) of the main port of Durazzo. And the Greeks, having got astride the lateral road to Tirana, are said to be near an important junction called Elbansan, which is only 25 miles away from the Albanian capital. To the south the news gives equally good report of Greek success. Arjirocastro was the base of the Italian left-wing attack on Greece, but the invaders went north and then moved along on Albanian spur from Permet, which gave them easier access into Epirus. All this Albanian spur is now in Greek hands. In fact, Athens messages say that the Greeks are actually north of Permet, and are thus well into the Albanian interior. The object of this tactic, however, is doubtless an enveloping movement having as its object Porto Edda, opposite Corfu, which is in the southern corner of Albania. The Greeks already have pushed toward the coast from the road junction at Permet. Thus the Italians may be caught in a trap; for it is in this sector that the British sea and air forces can make their most effective contribution to the Greeks.

How the British could make use of the Greek war as a spearhead for a land attack upon the Axis partners isn't clear. They failed egregiously in the chance which the Germans presented to them for a northern diversion based upon the Scandinavian peninsular. And the difficulties in the south—military and diplomatic—are greater. But the war is moving at such a dizzy pace that nothing can be simply dismissed. We are in what Bismarck used to call "a realm of unponderables." Only yesterday, it seemed, the British were wondering how long Egypt would remain tenable, and whether the preponderance against them in the eastern Mediterranean might not prove crushing. Egypt, however, is still by no means secured, and till this is done the vaulting talk of what might be done from the Balkan foothold must remain a hope.

Human Welfare

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see in the papers that on December 5 the topic "Uprooted Americans" is to be discussed at one of our Washington churches. I think I shall attend and listen to the discussion.

If I do not miss my guess, this topic is a small segment of the subject "Americans in Economic Exile." I am sure that our churches could, if they would, bring about a revocation of the decree of economic exile.

The economic banishment of tens of millions of American citizens has not been accomplished by a single edict of the government. It has been brought about by the deliberate, hard-boiled determination of the government to ignore the simplest elements of the principle of right and wrong in human relations. I know not on what other hypothesis dire destitution on a gigantic scale can be accounted for in a land of plenty.

If such economic banishment were not the result of deliberate governmental policy, as expressed in various pieces of legislation and proposed legislation, then it might, in extenuation, be said that it is the result of reckless, callous, careless indifference to human rights and duties—a servile acceptance of the twin pagan doctrines that might makes right and that the proper place for truth is on the scaffold. Certainly the politicians and the special interests for which they front are not searching for the truth in relation to human welfare.

ERNEST D. MACDOUGALL.
Washington, Dec. 2.

Praises G. W. Team

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I listened to the football game between the Georgetown team, a team that the Washington sports writers and sports casters have practically worshiped all season, and the George Washington team, a team that has almost been ignored, and find that Georgetown was lucky to win at all.

The sports writers were so obsessed by the supposed wonder team that they even printed stories to the effect that Georgetown was two touchdowns better than Cornell. All I have to say to that is that a team that is not two touchdowns better than a practically despised G. W. team cannot possibly be even in the same class with the conquerors of Ohio State.

Therefore, sports writers and sports casters, in the future please be fair and bring our G. W. team a little nearer to a par with Georgetown and sports casters, on a Saturday that Georgetown loses and G. W. wins, as happened on November 16, please do not give quite so much time to telling how Georgetown lost and have at least one or two remarks about how G. W. won.

F. W. SCHUMACHER.

Capitalism Vs. Communism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having noticed an interesting discussion in your columns lately relative to the comparative merits of capitalism and communism, I thought it might be apropos to remind your readers that a capitalist is not necessarily a rich man, but anyone owning real or personal property. If you are the owner of $20 or an old jalopy, you are a capitalist just the same as a millionaire.

Communists like Florence Playton, whose letter you published, have but one argument, and that is based on the "success" of the Russian experiment, and so it all boils down to the question of whether or not the Russians have a successful form of government and whether or not the people are, on the whole, progressive and prosperous. All I ask is that F. P. and other misinformed Red sympathizers read Jacob Rubin's book, "I Live to Tell." An American Communist for many years, Rubin visited Russia twice in order to get first-hand information regarding a theory of government in which he sincerely believed. Needless to say, he returned to America thoroughly disillusioned after viewing raggedly clothed citizens in lines three blocks long waiting to receive food, medicine and other necessities from vicious and corrupt government officials. Need I say that Rubin was glad to return to capitalistic United States? C. R. G.
Washington, Dec. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is the first time we have ever written to any department of any newspaper, but after reading the letter of Florence Playton in The Post of November 29, we can hold out no longer.

Our Communist friend seems to forget that "those few idle" who, she says, "control the wealth of our Nation and the welfare of its people," are not "idle" in the sense of the word; that they are Americans who have worked hard for what they have; that they employ hundreds of thousands of fellow Americans in a country where the highest wages in the world are paid; that they pay millions of dollars in taxes to their Government each year, and therefore earn the right to whatever they have. Actually, the "control" of our Nation, in finances or in any other branch, is not vested in them, but in a greater manager: namely, our Government. They work for and with it as any other citizen does.

Our country was built with and on democratic capitalism; on the right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that if a man makes $100 or $1,000,000 in a lifetime, it is his to do with as he sees fit. Capitalism in this sense is as much a part of our democracy as the Constitution or the Bill of Rights, and therefore can never be outlived or outmoded as our friend states, unless, of course, she would venture to say that the two greatest documents in the world have "outlived their progressive roles."

As for industry, agriculture, education and science in Russia—what little has been done has been achieved by force, greed, hate, murder and corruption, and therefore cannot and will not last. The "revolution" was supposed to give Russia back to the people, but instead it broke their morale, ruined their homes, killed their beliefs, and put in power leaders who for tyranny and ignorance would have put the czars to shame.

The proof of this can be found in any library or bookstore in countless numbers of books and articles written by well-informed people from every nation in the world.

The Soviet nation stands out as the nation which, after having dissected the smallest countries on the continent, says she is at peace with the world and has only honorable intentions.

We only hope our Communist remembers that were she in Russia she would be exiled or shot for expressing any opinion of her own publicly. In this "capitalistic" country she cannot only do this, but many other things, that are taboo, under communistic government.

With all these things in mind, we wonder if she can really believe that such a power-seeking, fear-producing system is better than the system under which she herself is now living!

THOMAS T. HAWKES.
Washington, Nov. 29.

Long Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To all enlisted men now serving with the United States Army, Navy or Marine Corps, whether voluntary or through the draft, I send the following message:

You are all to be congratulated for having successfully passed your physical, mental and moral examinations, that enables you, one and all, to wear the uniform of the United States, in these troublesome times, when we usually hear and read of "bombs, bombs, and more bombs," leaving in their wake nothing but bum shelters, from which the inhabitants that survived were driven into the great unknown.

It is indeed an honor to be permitted to defend the Constitution of the United States and go forth and do combat with its enemies, no matter whomsoever they may be. All of which should make you youngsters stick out your chest, throw your shoulders back and keep your head erect, with your eyes straight to the front, for you are all the envy of all of we oldtimers, who step to the rear and give you-all the genuine old military salute.

Yes, I have served with the colors. Thirty years, in fact, and in that time encountered three wars. All actively. And, while taking life leisurely between wars I met up with an earthquake in Taal, Batangas Province, Philipine Islands; Easter Sunday, 1902, encountered floods of the Kaw River, on hikes from Fort Leavenworth to Fort Riley, Kans.; in the springs of 1903 and 1904. Then, in the way of diversion, happened into San Francisco, Calif., in time to meet the earthquake and fire, on April 18, 1906. There are other incidents I could relate, but they were in the horse and saddle days, and are, therefore, memories of the past.

On the 22d of September last I completed 47 years with the colors, and only regret that I cannot serve 47 years more, for on Saturday, November 30, I have been on the retirement list for 16 years, and do therefore feel priviledged to assure all of you young beginners in the art of service that you have the wholehearted encouragement and a genuine salute from

C. F. SCHOENTHALER,

Loan To Britain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Once bitten, twice shy" should be the policy of the United States regarding loans of money to Britain. Let us not forget, even though the people of England and of the United States both speak the same tongue, that England has not yet paid her World War I debt, nor given us any "naval bases" in payment therefor. That debt represents just that much money that Mr. John Public of the United States has given to England. While I think we should give England all the material aid that we possibly can without impairment to our own defense program, I think we should be shrewder businessmen than to lend England any money. I also think it would be much wiser to have England sell instead of lease the naval bases to the United States.

After we have sunk a lot of money in improving these bases for our protection, it seems to me rather foolish to turn them back to England in that improved state without receiving some recompense for our efforts. Britain in her foreign policy has always had a keen eye for the business advantages to be gained from any particular transaction and it seems to me that Americans, a great many of whom are of British ancestry, would not be living up to their heritage if they let England "put one over on them."

The Surah Of TheMount

SIDI MOHAMMED EL WAZZANI, who taught at the University and who had the privilege of preaching before the Sultan when His Majesty was in Fez, and Sidi Taib, his cousin, were sitting in the garden and discussing the esthetics of garters. Sidi Taib, whose mind was ever intent upon new things, had gone to the Ville Nouvelle and bought a pair of European socks of a flammiferous purple, together with a pair of garters, America's chief contribution to North African civilization. Pleased as a child with these acquisitions, he had hastened to show them to his learned cousin.

Arab etiquette demands that one leave his shoes at the door, and thus there was nothing to conceal the glory of Sidi Taib's silk-encased feet as he approached his cousin. Sidi Mohammed was the soul of courtesy and kindness, and he pretended to ignore his guest's eccentric attire. He had been meditating, he explained, upon the ladder reaching to the gates of heaven, upon which the devils stand and listen to the angels discoursing.

"So we," Sidi Mohammed moralized, "have the privilege of listening to the conversation of wise and holy men, but instead of profiting from this opportunity we turn it to an evil end, just as the devils do." This was a subtle thrust at Sidi Taib, who did not always follow Sidi Mohammed's advice.

Sidi Taib, however, was in no mood for moralizing. With great rudeness, excusable only on the grounds of his impetuous nature, he broke the thread of the conversation abruptly. "What do you think of these coverings for my feet?" he asked.

Sidi Mohammed pretended to notice them for the first time. "They are not Moslem, are they?"

"Oh no, I bought them in the Ville Nouvelle."

"They were brought here by the French," said Sidi Mohammed. That should have closed the conversation.

"But they are very beautiful," insisted Sidi Taib.

"They cover up the foot," said Sidi Mohammed, "which was created by God to be an organ both of utility and of beauty. If God had intended for our feet to be purple and for our legs to be striped with orange bands, do you not think he would have created them so?"

Sidi Taib was saved from further discomfiture by the entrance of Baba, the doorkeeper. "An English gentleman to see my lord," he announced.

"God be praised!" exclaimed Sidi Taib. "I love the English above all other people. They have such resolute minds."

The Englishman who was ushered into the garden was such a one as the two cousins or, for that matter, few other people had ever seen. His face looked as though it had been put on with a palette knife, so thickly was it encrusted with creams, powders and rouge. He wore a flowing cape of purple cloth, lined with orange silk, of exactly the colors of Sidi Taib's footwear.

"My very good friend, His Excellency the English Consul," began the visitor, in a flute-like voice, speaking in French, "has told me that you are a man of great piety and learning, and he has suggested that you might help me in a matter which is very near and very dear to my heart," and the English Gentleman laid his hand in the neighborhood of the organ in question.

"I am greatly flattered," answered Sidi Mohammed, speaking likewise in French, a language which, he held, defiled the tongue of a true believer. "I should be very happy to be of assistance to a friend of His Excellency. In what way can I help you?"

"There is a colony of Englishmen, of whom I am one, living on the Island of Capri—" said the English gentleman.

"Where is the Island of Cabri?" asked Sidi Taib, ever eager to learn new things.

(TYPOGRAPHICAL NOTE: Cabri with a B; there is no P in Arabic and consequently Sidi Taib could not pronounce it.)

"It is an island in the sea, close to Stamboul," his cousin explained impatiently. "Pray continue, Sir."

"We have collected a fund of money with which to build a hospital for donkeys here in Fez."

"Are the donkeys sick?" asked Sidi Taib.

"They are sick through the horrible cruelty of their drivers," said the English gentleman. "Every time I think of those ghastly open sores that their drivers make on their backs and of those brutal goads which the drivers, like fiends, thrust purposely into the sores, it makes me suffer so that I almost faint." Here this visitor shuddered impressively and closed his eyes as though to faint. "So my friends on the Island of Capri, who feel as I do, have made up a fund of money with which to establish a hospital where the donkeys, poor beasts, can be treated until their sores are healed."

Sidi Mohammed meditated a moment, while Sidi Taib gazed in open bewilderment at the English gentleman.

"Your friends on the Island of Capri," said Sidi Mohammed, "must have singularly kind hearts, thus to concern themselves with the donkeys of Fez."

"They have, indeed," agreed the English gentleman.

"And who originated this scheme?"

"I did, if it is not unseemly to claim the credit for so worthy an undertaking."

"Ah, yes," said Sidi Mohammed reflectively, rubbing the sole of his left foot. "And I suppose, when this hospital is built, you will occupy stall No. 1?"

Sidi Mohammed slept very well that night, and the next day, being a Friday, he preached on the text, also from the Surah of the Mount, "Do their dreams bid them this? Or are they an outrageous people?" JOHN T. APPLEBY.

Labor Peace Formula

By Ernest Lindley

Working Agreement

ALTHOUGH fusion of the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. seems to be out of the question for the present, a better working relationship between them is believed by officials in the Administration to be entirely practicable.

A great majority of the rank and file of both organizations are not infected with the fierce hatreds of some of the men near the top. In many localities the relationships between the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions are not unfriendly. Especially in the political field, as during the recent election, they have cooperated effectively and with good spirit. As tolerance, even cordiality in some cases, can be found lower down, the climate of feeling and opinion is not unfavorable to an agreement limiting the conflicts between the two organizations.

The national defense program has increased the interest of both labor and the public in a satisfactory working relationship. The reaction to the Vultee strike indicated that public opinion is not disposed to tolerate long interruptions in the production of the items essential to our defense.

AT THE VULTEE plant the workers had a good case; although, under what savored of Communist influence, the strike was protracted after the case had been won. The public obviously will be very impatient with interruptions due to any cause. A rash of strikes will create a perhaps irresistible demand for compulsory arbitration and the regulation of labor unions.

Both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. have a vital and continuing interest in preventing legislation which would shackle the right to organize and to bargain collectively. The first and more important preventive of such legislation is self-imposed restraint and order in the labor movement. If organized labor conducts itself wisely, standing firmly for its rights but making evident its patriotic concern in the rapid rearmament of this country, it can consolidate and expand. But every sign that it is using the defense emergency for special advantage—or, more important, that it is obstructing or delaying defense—will be seized upon and exploited by the people who are still fundamentally antiunion in their prejudice. There is a point at which the more or less neutral public, composed of people who neither belong to unions nor employ industrial workers, are sure to become thoroughly exasperated. Nothing could be more surely devised to exasperate them than interruptions in production due to hostilities between rival unions.

BOYCOTTS and strikes resulting from union rivalries will certainly whip up a furious demand for stern action. This is recognized by the wiser leaders in both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. Under Sidney Hillman the Labor Policy Committee of the National Defense Commission has been successful until now in averting jurisdictional strikes in defense industries. This committee consists of six labor leaders from the C. I. O., six from the A. F. of L. and four from the Railway Brotherhoods. Its members have also been useful in preventing strikes from other causes in defense industries.

As seen by important officials, the essentials of a working agreement between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. include these:

(1) Both sides will recognize the status quo in industries or individual plants which are already organized. That is, there will be no attempt to raid territory which is already occupied.

(2) In industries or individual plants which are not yet organized, both C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions will be free to use their powers of persuasion, but will agree to abide by the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board as to which units and which unions are the proper representatives of the employes. The NLRB will undertake to expedite all such decisions.

(3) Neither side will accept a union official or member who has been expelled from a union on the other side. This is considered essential to the elimination of irresponsibility. Where there are competing unions, each with arms open to renegades from the other side, discipline becomes extremely difficult. If the local union leaders who call or sanction an unauthorized "quickie" are disciplined, they may simply move into the opposite camp.

SUCH A FORMULA, it is contended, is not only desirable, but feasible, because it is to the advantage of both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

As a further step in protecting the common interest of organized labor and the public, it is proposed that the heads of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions found in the defense industries give pledges that no strikes will be called, for any reason, until adequate notice has been given to the national defense commission, Hillman and his aides, as well as representatives of employers would then have a chance to try to conclude peaceful agreements. These pledges could be given without an accord on the three points mentioned above. But in combination with such an accord they would go far, it is felt in informed quarters, toward preventing strife which can bring no good either to the country or to organized labor.

On Death

THE MOTHER of a friend of mine died the other day. My friend's little daughter was sent away to relatives until the funeral was over. Little Mary, aged 11, must not know about her grandmother's death. Grandma, it was explained to her, had gone away on a trip. The memory of grandmother would slowly recede into the distance. At some future date, Mary may learn of grandma's passing. But meanwhile she must be spared a knowledge that might upset her.

IS THIS NOT characteristic of our society? Are we not producing a people unable to face the most ruthless fact of life, namely, the certainty of death?

We treat death as though it were an outlaw, an aberration, a disease. More and more we cremate our dead and lay their ashes away in urns, on shelves. We abolish mourning. By one means or another we create our peculiar illusion: the illusion of moral immortality. Age approaches, but the beautician, the masseur, the tailor and the dressmaker, the gland specialist and the golf course cooperate to keep alive the illusion. We are not really growing older. "Life begins at forty!"

EITHER ONE believes in the immortality of the soul or one does not. Either faith or clear skepticism would, one thinks, induce a different attitude toward life and death from the current one. For if we are immortal, if the soul and spirit never die, why care so much for this mortal coil? The Christian does not fear death. He fears that he dies "in sin." Important to him, therefore, is how he lives his life, not how much he prolongs it.

Skepticism induces stoicism, not illusion. If there is no other life than this one, then how intensely must we live? Really to live means that one does not mortgage the living present for a senile future. And what is a "lifetime?" Keats died at 26. Did he live a lifetime? That was 120 years ago, and in Rome his epitaph reads, "Here lies one whose name was writ in water." But it was not. The nightingale he heard still sings, and the thing of beauty that he saw is still a joy forever.

Shelley died at 29. Byron laid down his life for a lost cause at Missolonghi at the age of 36. Did they live their lifetimes? Shakespeare died at 52. Did he live his lifetime? Jesus died at 33. Did he live his lifetime?

THE SECRET WEAPON of the revolutionary ideologies of these times, their weapon against the "decadent" democracies, is perhaps this: That they have brought up their youth in the clear realization that they will not live forever. They have substituted a secular religion for the Christian faith and been able to do so only because the religious faith had become dimmed. There is no personal immortality in the Nazis' credo, but the life of the nation, of the race, of the breed, is eternal, and the individual is only a link in an endless chain. Or, in the Russian credo, the upward surge of the working masses goes on, and one lives and dies for a cause that will surely triumph. Thus they induce a contempt for death. And as long as faith in the cause is strong, their people die well. Ernest Hemingway in his play, "The Fifth Column," says this too. "Priests die well. Of course, because they live in God."

BUT IN THE PLEASURE economy and the pleasure world that our democracy has become we live apparently in nothing. For no god, for no vision of the future, in no piety toward the past, for no pride of race or personality, for no passion of indignation or of love. Once we lived for freedom, pledging our "lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." The very words sound high flown. Passion, which means originally suffering and the experience of the soul, is degraded to the description of sexual pleasure.

To be spared suffering of any kind, physical, emotional or mental, becomes the object of life. Therewith, however, the very sense of life vanishes, and "gone is all the mystery of wonder and surprise." We seek security: A seven-hour working day, a car, vitamins, a pension. All right, why not but why does life elude us and vitamins fail to produce commensurate vitality? We escape pain and also all sharp joy. Never having been hungry, we do not know the keen deliciousness of bread; never having been cold, we take no voluptuous comfort in a fire. Unwilling to die for a cause, we die for an extra drink and a careless attempt to pass another car on the road.

ONE IS BORN with five senses—with eyes to see the wonder, beauty, tragedy and terror of this world. Unwilling to contemplate the whole of life, we miss the beauty, too. Who really looks at the sky? We have tongues to taste with, but we dull them with factory-made food, hastily gulped. We can smell, touch and hear. Thoreau thought that the possession of these gifts, plus a mind that can think, was almost enough for any man. Yet the degeneration of the senses is characteristic of the times. Why? Is it not perhaps because of an unconscious desire to avoid all acute experience, since so much of it is painful?

Why love? A consuming passion of the heart tears one to bits. It is not reasonable. "There are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught." Why be too enamoured of that face, that voice, those hands? Comfort is the ideal—physical comfort, emotional comfort, mental comfort. We can stand seeing Hamlet on the stage, at full length, if Hamlet is made into a glamour boy and a wisecracker. But Othello, or Richard III, or King Lear, or Oedipus Rex or Electra? Old-fashioned overstatement. Morbid! All is morbid that is not flat, undifferentiated, and all is morbid that reminds us of the inescapable tragic fact that we die. The happy ending is the illusion that there is no ending, and we translate this in social terms into the concept of infinite progress divorced from will and from effort.

SO IT IS WITH the idea of peace. Peace is not a condition of harmonious relations between man, created by truth, maintained by law, supported by effort. Peace is the absence of war. War may rage over the whole world, out of causes to which we all have contributed. But if we sleep in a bed and not in a shelter, that is enough for us.

Peace does not mean that we live without fear. On the contrary. We are more afraid than the British under bombs. For what we fear is not war but reality.

Reality is beautiful and terrible, tragic and comic. It embraces the whole of life. It is the gamut. Reality is adult. But we try also to avoid adulthood. We prolong youth indefinitely, and keep our children away from work until they are 21 or 22. Then work is translated into a job, and is done, not for the hard joy of creation through self-discipline and work-discipline—the discipline that creates the free personality. It is done for its derivatives: for a flat, a car, the "movies," ice cream. We do in order to buy, and find our highest expression as consumers.

WITHOUT THE consciousness of death, without the serene acceptance of death as the inexorable certainty, we lose all sense of the magic and wonder of life. There is no more reality—and no more romance. For romance is the sublimation of reality.

Since we are unwilling to come to terms with the fact of death, we live in constant unconscious fear. For only when one is no longer afraid to die is one no longer afraid at all. And only when we are no longer afraid do we begin to live—to live in every experience, painful or joyous, to live in gratitude for every moment; to live abundantly, and with the constant extension of one's physical, mental and spiritual means. To be free means simply to be unafraid, and to be unafraid in the fullest and most inclusive awareness. And that inclusive awareness must encompass the recognition of death.

Without that recognition, men choose the safety of the mediocre herd—to be destroyed by other herds whose herd instinct has been trained to accept death. The fear of life and the fear of death are completely integrated. Those who know nothing they are willing to die for live without purpose, without direction, and without joy. Their bodies are hastily removed, and their lives as hastily forgotten.

Money In Tomato Cans

(J. W. Nichols, president of a Chicago bank, has urged all depositors to take their savings out and bury them in a tomato can. Government monetary policies have made it impossible to find investment opportunities, or for a bank to pay satisfactory interest, he told them."—News item).

Dear Mr. Nichols:

I have read your letter to bank depositors urging that they bury savings in tomato cans out in the back yard, and I think you have something there, except that people don't even expect interest any more and are so used to it that they wouldn't be surprised if the banks began charging them for depositing their dough. And as for finding investments, they gave that up long ago. An investment has become unconstitutional or something. It can go very hard with anybody in this country today who makes an investment.

But I am not so sure about this tomato can suggestion. Looked at from all angles, it seems in some ways as good as most other suggestions for treating money these days. Study the yield from a tomato can, and it is just as high as the yield from anything I have run across lately. What is more important, the SEC is not making any war on cans, and no government agency is trying to regulate the burying of tin cans as yet.

Still, I have my doubts, and do not feel any too safe about taking my savings and depositing them in a tomato can out behind the hencoop. I am very much afraid there is an F. F. C. C. hovering around somewhere. (A Federal Tomato Can Commission, I mean.)

Its duty would be to take this tomato can situation in hand and regulate it, so nobody could bury money in one of 'em without proper supervision. As I say, I never heard of such a commission, but I suspect there is one.

And could you look it up and assure me that there is no H. H. D. A. (Home Hole Digging Administration)? I mean, a commission that has complete jurisdiction over holes. I have a hunch nobody can go around digging holes for tomato cans into which money may be put without Government control. And I wouldn't want to put my few hundred dollars away in this manner and then get hauled on the carpet charged with digging a hole against a Federal statute and burying a tin can in violation of Section 8, Paragraph 103.

As a matter of fact, are you sure it is okay for me to dig a hole? And if so am I within my rights in possessing a tomato can? Let me hear from you. Yours in a muddle.

An Economic Pain

IF PRESIDENT Roosevelt absents himself from the impending dinner of the Gridiron Club—and "impending" is the correct word to suggest the approaching of one of these elegant pheasant-rendings—he will favor the Gridiron Club as much as his own convenience and political pique. The Gridiron dinners have become too important for the good of the club itself, too expensive for most of the members, and too tough on the nerves and arteries of practically all concerned.

The Gridiron Club is 55 years old, and is a distinguished organization in the stuffy sense of the word, which is to say, that while it is composed of first-class journalists of the Washington corps, its dinners have become grim political occasions.

Circumstances beyond the club's control have been responsible for this unintentional change in the character of an occasion which began in fun. In the last ten years or so the Gridiron dinners, of which there are two each year, have gotten out of hand. The club is exclusive and selective, though not snobbish, and its members nowadays are under great pressure from their respective publishers to allot their invitations to advertisers and political and industrial big shots without regard for their own social preferences.

LONG BEFORE the date of a dinner the scheming and wire-pulling begins to obtain bids for men who feel that the souvenir program with the printed seating arrangement is a diploma certifying their importance, and it is well known that some of the members have had to yield the position of host to become, in a manner of speaking, ticket boosters for their employers.

The presidency of the Gridiron, while still a social and, to a less degree, a professional honor, is an economic pain in the neck to any member except a few who draw large salaries. Not only must the president dig up the price of invitations or tickets for an extra quota of guests, but recent custom requires him to hire a hall and heave a hangover party on the Sunday afternoon following the dinner at which several hundred ladies and gentlemen stand around absorbing sedatives and snapping at little patches of toast lathered with mayonnaise and other goo, which runs into money fast.

EMINENT PHYSICISTS in the Government service have given repeated warnings that it all the souvenirs of the helling-around, which always follows a Gridiron dinner until along toward dawn, were to do their shaking in unison at one of those gawd-how-I-suffer parties, they would whip the needle of the Georgetown seismograph right out of the building. Even shaking free-style they once swayed a stout old hotel building a foot out of plumb.

Mrs. Roosevelt also has complicated the social problem of the Gridiron by one of her bright ideas. She gives a thing called a Gridiron Widow's party which appears to be a development of an old-fashioned taffy pull and masquerade by the inmates of an exclusive young ladies' boarding school. But invitations are available only to out-of-town women who are legally married to out-of-town gentlemen who are the dinner guests and also the house guests of active members of the Gridiron.

You can imagine what complications that causes because, candidly, there are some Gridiron widows who are not very folksy with Mrs. R., and who, therefore, have to go into hiding for the duration of the emergency, so that they will not be required to put in for White House bids for out-of-town females whom they have never met.

AND IT SURELY is not indelicate to say that many ladies nowadays get very, very puny out on a social evening if they have to spend four or five hours without an occasional dish of grog, but Mrs. R. never breaks out anything which would be likely to steal away the brain or corrupt the morals of any lady guests, and consequently some of the babes, and particularly the old ones, are likely to choke by the time they escape. Then they go tearing down the long walk and across that park and, off in all directions to the saloons where they collapse in quivering heaps and pant weakly for double scotches and, as life returns, remark that they have never seen anything like it in all their born days.

In the little matter of getting hunk with the dirty Republicans Mrs. Roosevelt has easily run up the highest individual score of the whole Administration with her girlish get-togethers, but it has been noticed that there is never any lack of new victims, because there are so many who will endure anything once, just so they can say they bit meat in the White House.

These parties must be really something.

Breathing Spell For Taxpayers

ALTHOUGH BUSINESS will probably end by paying the bills, as usual the recent White House conference on taxes produced several remarkable indications of a desire to conciliate businessmen. This was hinted when Senator Pat Harrison later announced there would be no retroactive taxation on business profits for the year 1940. But the background, atmosphere and other decisions of the conference were decidedly more significant than the Harrison announcement.

The Treasury's pre-conference activities must be classed as background. They began with a study of the general tax picture by Assistant Secretary John Sullivan, who is now the first tax lieutenant of Secretary Henry Morgenthau jr. Although he is an old crony of the New Dealers and served Thomas G. Corcoran faithfully in the early stages of the third term movement, Sullivan is a practical lawyer by training and a moderate in fiscal questions by inclination.

HIS INVESTIGATIONS led him to two conclusions:

1. That after taking two pretty serious tax bills this year, business ought to be allowed a period of reasonable calm, during which the effects of the existing tax structure might be studied more rewardingly.

2. That fear of retroactive taxes during the next sessions of Congress was leading many corporations to withhold current profits from dividends, in order to build up a reserve against the possible evil day to come.

Having reached his conclusions, Sullivan flew to Miami, met Secretary Morgenthau returning from a Caribbean cruise, and told his story to his chief. Morgenthau, who is also a fiscal moderate when the President allows him to be, was not overly difficult to convince.

When he reached Washington he bustled off to the White House to pass on Sullivan's arguments to the President, with additions of his own. There was reason to expect an unamiable response, since a powerful faction in the Administration has been advocating punishing war profits taxes to prove to labor that business is not benefiting from the national emergency. Instead, however, Morgenthau found the President entirely receptive. Thus the main decisions were already reached when the White House tax conference was called last Friday.

THOSE INVITED to the conference were Senators Harrison of Mississippi and Walter George of Georgia, Representatives Robert Doughton and Jere Cooper, Budget Director Harold Smith and Morgenthau and Sullivan.

After the usual family dinner the little party retired to the President's oval study upstairs, where the effect of the advance work of Morgenthau and Sullivan promptly became manifest.

Agreement was immediately reached on the need for some such declaration against retroactive taxes, as was later contained in the Harrison announcement. Sullivan's second conclusion was debated more fully, but accepted in the end. The decision was to regard no tax proposals as final until after March 15, and to do nothing about a tax program until that date except to hold preliminary hearings, investigate such programs as might be independently offered, and in general clear away the underbrush.

THE PRESIDENT then wound up the meeting with a general disquisition on the budget, in which he disclosed a fascinating new version of his budgetary theory. It will be remembered how he used to divide Government expenditures into the "regular budget," which was always "balanced," and the "emergency budget," composed of spending for such things as relief, which was never balanced. Now there is a new division, under which the old "emergency budget" becomes "regular," along with most other ordinary spending, while the "defense budget" is the unbalanced one. As all Army and Navy appropriations, including those customarily made in the past, are lumped under this unbalanced "defense budget," it is possible for the President to say that his "regular budget" for this fiscal year will be only $438,000,000 out of balance, and will be fully balanced thereafter. He most likely will say just that in his budget message next month.

WHAT IMPRESSED those present at the conference, however, was not so much the President's agility with budgetary theory, or anything else he said, so much as what he omitted to say. Usually, at these tax conferences, he demands flatly that business be taxed in this way or that, and grounds his demand on business' high crimes and misdemeanors. There was none of this last Friday. Instead, his tone was cheerful, almost gay. He was emphatic as to the unwisdom of acting in haste, even on the problem of tax-exempt securities which should have been amply investigated by now. And he plainly intimated that he wished to make no specific recommendations to his Congressional tax leaders.

As has been said, despite all these hopeful signs business will probably pay the bills in the end. Both the President and the Treasury are bitterly opposed to sales taxes. Neither desires great increases in income taxation in the really low brackets. Taxes on businness profits are the only ones proposed which promise sizable yield. Yet even so, business will apparently be taxed in a kindly manner, politely, without war whoops. As a tomahawk and a loincloth of scalps used to be the standard uniform of the New Deal tax planners, the approach is at least to be different. And that, no doubt, is something.

New Jersey Vote Hearings Put Off Until Next Year

The Senate investigation into alleged election irregularities in New Jersey will be continued next year with hearings in Washington, Chairman Gillette of the special Campaign Investigating Committee indicated yesterday.

At a committee meeting late in the afternoon, it was decided to ask the Senate for authority to prolong the investigation into 1941, and to hold no further hearings during the present year. No additional appropriation will be required.

A subcommittee of the full committee, composed of Senators Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, and Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, recently held hearings in New Jersey, at which Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, and Senator Tobey got into bitter arguments. Under the new arrangement, the full five-man committee will conduct the hearings.

NOT A SCHOOLBOY'S CARICATURE OF TEACHER but a hand-drawn illustration of the blood's circulation from an Arabic medical manuscript, written four years before the discovery of America, which has been acquired by the Army Medical Library

Ancient Medical Books Bought From England

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

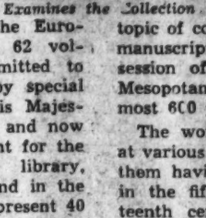
Proud as a father announcing the arrival of twins, the Army Medical Library yesterday revealed the acquisition of not two but 62 precious items.



DR. MAYER
Examines the Collection

They are medical manuscripts, most of them in Arabic but a few in Turkish and Persian, dating from the nineteenth century back to 1094 A. D.

Literally refugees from the European wars, the 62 volumes were permitted to leave England by special permission of His Majesty's government and now have been bought for the famous Army library, largest of its kind in the world. They represent 40 years of arduous, painstaking collecting on the part of their former owner, an unnamed scholar who bargained for them with sultans, sheiks and tribesmen from North Africa to Suez and beyond.

Acquisition of what has been termed "the rarest and most interesting collection of medical manuscripts dealing with Arabic medicine" has been approved by Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Army surgeon general.

The specialty of the Briton who collected the books is Arabic manuscripts, whatever the subject. Altogether he acquired 4,000 items but only a little more than 100 were on medicine, which gives an idea of the relative scarcity of Arabic medical manuscripts.

According to Col. Harold W. Jones, Army medical librarian, and Dr. Claudius F. Mayer, assistant librarian and skilled translator, not more than a dozen comparable manuscripts of any great importance have been sold on the open market since 1920.

But for the war's outbreak in September, 1939, the collection probably would never have come to America, they said. It was on the verge of being sold abroad when hostilities began, breaking off negotiations. Valuable books and paintings are an extremely poor risk today in bomb-pocked Europe.

All the books are handwritten. "Dean" of the collection and most precious of all is the chief work of Razi or Rhazes, the "Arabic Hippocrates," which was written in 1094, when the Battle of Hastings was still a topic of conversation. This manuscript was in possession of one family in Mesopotamia (Iraq) almost 600 years.

The works were copied at various periods, most of them having been penned in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Authors represented include Ibn Rushd, of the twelfth century, and Ibn Nafis, discoverer of the lesser blood circulation, thirteenth century.

Arabic medicine greatly influenced the development of modern medical sciences, flourishing from the 11th to the fifteenth century. Then it began slowly to decline but survived in the Orient until the nineteenth century.

Some of the manuscripts are illustrated, a very rare feature, since Arabic writers never cared much for pictures.

"The collection is a definite gain for the scholars of this country," said the Army Medical Library, "since it is not only the largest manuscript collection of Arabic physicians in the United States but also it is one of the few in the world that contains unique copies and works unknown to modern bibliographers. It is possibly the largest and most important collection of its kind to be found anywhere in the world."

The only regret expressed by the library was that the Army was unable, for the time being at least, to buy the remaining 35 or 40 medical manuscripts in the anonymous seller's collection.

When National Guardsmen from the District, Maryland and Virginia go into Federal service next month, all of them will enter school. Most will start work in the hard school of the soldier, in marching, fighting and manning the machines with which men make war today.

Some of them, though, will matriculate in classes more neutrally tinged, in classes which teach the peaceful pursuits as necessary to peace as to fighting. Included among these will be the cooks and bakers and mess sergeants whose task it will be to feed the troops in garrison and in the field.

Two of them, both privates first class in headquarters company, 121st Engineers, already have entered the Cooks and Bakers School at Fort George G. Meade, Md., where they will serve with their regiment upon induction into Federal service. They are Alex Azany, of 226 Eighth Street Southwest, and George J. Baur, jr., of 138 E Street Southeast.

Baur, a clerk in the Federal Housing Administration, got into cooking on maneuvers last summer by accident; Azany, a clerk in the Department of Agriculture, is an army cook because he chose to be. After they complete their courses December 31, both will be as fully accomplished in army cooking as an Army school can make them.

Their company will be delighted to have them back.

Byrd Again to Seek Senate Defense Quiz

Will Revive Move For Check on Plans In New Congress

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, yesterday decided to renew his request for a Senate investigation of national defense progress in the interest of expediting the program and checking up on expenditures.

Byrd will reintroduce in the next Congress his resolution for a nine-man Senate special committee to investigate "the manner in which the national defense program authorized by the Congress is being executed."

The Virginia Democrat, who has supported every national defense appropriation but has urged strict economy in nonmilitary spending, believes Congress needs more information to legislate for defense, and the investigation will help to get it.

He said a dozen other Senators have urged him to press for action next session on the inquiry.

The nine-man committee proposed in the Byrd resolution would include three members of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee and three from the Senate Military Affairs group.

It would be empowered to obtain weekly reports on "expedition and other matters" from all departments handling defense work and from the National Defense Commission.

It would be further authorized "to make recommendations to the Senate in the form of proposed legislation or otherwise for action designed to expedite the execution" of the program.

The committee would sit jointly with a House committee, should the other chamber appoint a similar group.

Byrd told reporters that information elicited by the committee would be important not only in determining the course of future defense legislation but in giving Congressmen and Senators concrete facts. He said he thought there was a lot of needless confusion in the minds of many legislators about the defense program, due to lack of information.

The Virginian, one of the first to propose economy cuts in nonmilitary appropriations to make way for defense needs, estimated Congress could effect a minimum reduction of $500,000,000 under this year's outlays in nondefense items.

Girl Meets Father She Never Knew

"You are beautiful!," he said.

But they still stood back from one another as though bewildered at the meeting and dumbfounded at last to be together.

What Lola said were quiet words that barely would have been audible had they not be amplified. But she was pleased with her father and met him as if it were some reality after a long dream.

The audience reacted with more tension than the actors seemed to feel, once they had pulled themselves together. It was over quickly. King reached out and embraced his stranger-daughter and the tension broke. The house went wild for them.

King and Lola did not meet until reaching the center of the stage, under the eyes of the audience. Both had been in New York since Sunday, but were kept well apart. They reached the theater, to appear on the "We the People" program at different hours. Neither had the remotest notion of what to say when the center of the stage was to be reached.

The audience, told that father and his daughter, complete strangers to each other, were soon to meet for the first time, adopted the hushed manner that people assume when a secret is about to be let out or in a moment of some high expectation. The audience poised itself in the manner of people who might catch themselves inadvertently at eavesdropping or intruding on something too personal for other eyes and ears.

And it wasn't their hushed bearing that appeared to stifle words in the father and his stranger-daughter nor even their appearance at all at the prearranged rendezvous. It appeared rather the sight of each that took words from King and his daughter, the sudden reality that was too much.

But when they embraced the tension broke. And then they left, with Mrs. King, who had accompanied her husband here, for a midnight snack at a good hotel, for some family talk across the beefsteak.

Leaves Studio Moist-Eyed

So Lola had made a date with her dad, flunge very small resource she had toward its keeping and walked from the studio, arm in arm with her father, moist-eyed.

She was back in the city where she was born, done with a meeting which for five years had been only a dream, before her eyes. She could no more describe how she felt than might any person whose happiness has become so terrible that joy and shock take almost identical faces.

Lola arrived here Sunday and the radio people turned sociable somersaults to lighten her experience of waiting to see her father. But, withal, she wandered about the streets, knowing her father was here, studying the faces she passed.

She went to her hotel room, alone, and got to wondering what she would say. Reporters called on her three hours before the broadcast. She talked then with so much poise it was remarked on. It was, simply, like this: Her mind had been set, for five years, on finding her father. She knew he was born in Page County, Va., and she had written to Luray's chief of police, E. L. Moses, enlisting hir help. The chief found King, letters were exchanged, and here she was in New York, with a three hour wait on the years-long hope.

She was apprehensive, lest she burst out crying before the microphone. Something was turning about in her mind which she couldn't quite express; which questions couldn't dislodge. Did she really feel a hungry love for a parent she never had seen, was the blood-tie so strong between persons as to persist, mysteriously, when persons of the same blood had never seen or heard about one another. The answer is in Lola if anyone ever can bring it out. Just what she was feeling wasn't made clear. But she gave an A-1 demonstration that the blood-tie binds a load of some manner of hunger.

She threw little light on the question, again, if it is possible, terribly to love a person one never has seen or known.

"I felt before my recent marriage like I was living in a nothingness. My mother died when I was 4 years old and I later felt cut off, like a person with no one. Now I feel I have some security." She seemed aware the word security was a wrong one. But, later, she accepted the embrace of her father and gave her own in a none too subtle understanding of family affection. The love of daughter for father had certainly struck in the shock of sudden meeting, in exchange of glances and words. Blood ran to blood more startlingly than water.

Her father arrived here on Sunday, too. He had been made aware that he wouldn't see Lola until the broadcast, so he didn't walk the streets searching faces. Rather, he went on one of Macy's escorted tours and saw a few old friends. But he was bedeviled by thoughts of her and asked reporters where she was staying.

His anxiety still was to forget the years of their separation and to induce Lola to forget it, too. He married Lola's mother in New York; they were separated 45 days after the wedding. Lola's mother went to Denver shortly after the birth of the baby. King had been little more than just aware that he had a daughter. Lola's mother had remarried; King had done likewise. And then, five years ago, Lola had learned that her stepfather was not her real father and had begun her search for King, vaguely on the basis of some family data left by her maternal grandmother.

FCC Closes Two-Day Hearings On Its Radio Monoply Report

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday concluded a two-day hearing of legal arguments on its monopoly report after hearing Louis G. Caldwell, counsel for Mutual Broadcasting System, express the opinion that it has authority to enact regulations governing chain broadcasting.

Caldwell, one-time general counsel of the Federal Radio Commission, said that Mutual favored network regulation but thought some of the "suggested" regulations are too drastic.

Counsel for the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System previously opposed any chain regulations and challenged the power of the FCC to promulgate them under present law.

Caldwell, who reviewed the history of radio legislation, offered a plan of special regulations dealing with chain broadcasting.

He insisted that affiliated stations should be kept free of network or contractual restraints.

Chairman James L. Fly suggested that attorneys for all the networks file supplementary briefs covering the question of opportunity for network competition. He said he wanted the lawyers to point out the public can get the most out the industry in terms of healthy competition.

No one can contend, he said, that network operations make for perfect competition within the industry. Briefs were requested by December 16.

Ben S. Fisher, representing the Association of Radio Transcription Producers of Hollywood, Inc., urged further modification of FCC regulations respecting transcription announcements by omitting announcement at beginning of transcribed programs.

Transcriptions, Fisher said, are the life blood of small radio stations and their only remedy against competition from networks and larger stations.

Martin Gang, of Independent Artists Representatives, asked the commission to take steps to keep the networks from destroying free competition in the artists' agency field.

He declared that the establishment of artists' bureaus by the networks constituted unfair competition and threatened to destroy the independent bureaus.

Waddill Catchings, chairman of the Board of Associated Music Publishers, Inc., commended the monopoly report but expressed the opinion that it does not go far enough. He admitted that chain broadcasting was performing a good service, but he contended that because it is dominated by N. B. C. and C. B. S. it constitutes a monopoly.

The two networks, he charged, have a stranglehold on the industry by being able to make a "package offer" of talent and time or transcriptions. He argued that the FCC should not allow broadcasters to engage in the transcription business.

Utility Firms Charged With 'Slush Fund'

Two Companies, Three Officials Indicted By U. S. Grand Jury

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 3.—A Federal grand jury today indicted two utilities companies and three executives on charges of conspiring to make political contributions in violation of the Public Utility Holding Company Act and the conspiracy provisions of the Federal criminal code.

The indictment, containing five counts, was returned against the Illinois Iowa Power Co. and the Missouri Power & Light Co.

The individuals named were Henry L. Hanley, vice president of the Illinois Iowa Power Co.; James D. Mortimer, former president of the North American Co., huge holding system with which both indicted firms are affiliated, and Aura C. Hall, also a vice president of the Illinois Iowa Power Co.

The indictment charged that a "secret slush fund" was distributed to candidates for public office by the Illinois Iowa Power Co., and that it amounted to $77,000.

Named with Hanley, Mortimer and Hall as conspirators, but not as defendants, were the late James E. Johnson, former vice president of the Illinois Iowa Power Co. and a member of its board of directors; Frank G. Sutherland, secretary of Illinois Iowa; Glen D. Walley, of Peoria, alleged in the indictment to have handled most of the cash which it was charged was distributed to Illinois politicians, and Edward E. Pendray. The latter two are employes of Illinois Iowa.

Named as recipients of political contributions were State Representative Lew Wallace, of Mattoon; State Representative Oral P. Tuttle, of Harrisburg; State Representative Harry M. McCaskrin, of Rock Island; H. D. Tindall, of Murphysboro; the late Herschel V. Tell, of Rushville; the late William Stratoon, a former Illinois secretary of State, of Waukegan; C. H. Mullen, of Knoxville, Ill., and Mark A. Saunders, of Kewanee.

Government attorneys said those named as recipients were not subject to prosecution under the indictment.

O. John Rogge, Assistant Attorney General who presented the Government's evidence to the grand jury, said the investigation also had uncovered evidence of illegal activity on the part of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri.

Rogge said this information would be turned over to U. S. District Attorney Harry Blanton in St. Louis for presentation to a Federal grand jury which will convene in St. Louis early in January.

Frank J. Boehm, former executive vice president of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri, was convicted of perjury recently in connection with an investigation of Union Electric's activities by the Securities and Exchange Commission and sentenced to five years in prison.

Rally Told Mission Shows Unity of Protestantism

100 Key Workers for Local Meeting, To Be Held Feb. 2, Hear Reports of Enthusiastic Turnouts in Other Cities

The coming National Christian Mission here will demonstrate Protestanism's united front and that Christ has the answer to modern-day problems, 100 key workers were told here yesterday.

Assembled for a luncheon rally at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, the lay and clerical leaders of local churches were spurred by heartening reports of enthusiastic mission meetings in other cities, and heard further plans announced for the local mission—February 2-9, 1941.

Declaring that the mission will spiritually parallel anything being done in the way of national defense, and that it will launch a new era for Christianity here, Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, local general chairman and pastor of National City Christian Church, called for the support of every minister and layman.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, spoke of the importance of the seminars, Bible discussions, youth meetings, women's sessions, breakfast meetings and other programs to be held in various communities throughout the Washington metropolitan area.

Describing his participation in the 1936-7 preaching mission, when he spoke in two-thirds of the cities visited, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, declared that the project "has ceased to be an experiment," and said he was "thrilled" with anticipation at the present mission, which began last September in 22 major cities. Baltimore was visited last week.

Dr. W. L. Darby, who retired last Saturday as executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches and who will serve as executive secretary of the local mission until March 1, pleaded for the support of pastors and people and the use of every available agency to insure the project's success.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches and First Baptist pastor, said his experience in addressing the missions in Houston and Oklahoma City had convinced him that adequate preparation is essential for its success. Dr. William S Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor and local vice chairman, also spoke briefly.

Disease Costs Twice as Many Lives Here Per Capita as Bombs Take in England, Merlo Pusey Tells Women Voters

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Neglect of public health in Washington is producing twice as many casualties per capita as the rain of bombs in England, Merlo Pusey, associate editor of The Post, told members of the League of Women Voters last night. Addressing a dinner meeting of the league at the Y. W. C. A. on "our Un-American Capital," Mr. Pusey discussed the health situation as but one of the deplorable conditions allowed to exist in the city.

"Only two of the 26 largest cities in the United States have worse health records than the District of Columbia," said Mr. Pusey. "The death rate for ten years, ended in 1937, for these cities was 11.7 per 1,000. For the District it was 14.8. What does that mean in terms of human life? Merely that even the average death rate for the District would have saved 18,000 lives in ten years. With Detroit's rate, 35,000 would have been saved."

Mr. Pusey cited the improvement in the local situation under the administration of Dr. George C. Ruhland with the expenditure for public health increased from 97 cents to $1.37 per capita—the price of two movie tickets. Public health may be purchased, he said.

Among other conditions in need of correction is the small loan racket, he said, characterizing the small loans law as "merely a barricade for sharks."

Although interest is limited to 1 per cent per month, other charges are unlimited—"it puts a premium on "illegitimate business," he declared.

Crime is another problem, he said, with Washington twelfth in size but sixth in grand larcenies, eighth in robberies and tenth in burglaries and auto thefts. Just before the outbreak of the crime wave last year the White House took 20 of the best Metropolitan Police—"the Federal interests protected while citizens are robbed or even murdered," said Mr. Pusey. "Citizens are less secure in this great Capital than in other cities where they manage their own affairs."

The greatest obstacle to progress is inertia in the District, Mr. Pusey declared. Although Washington must remain the National Capital, with a Government suited to that function, he expressed the opinion that the granting of a municipal charter similiar to that granted by States to their capital cities would give local citizens an opportunity to solve their problems.

Mrs. Joseph Low, chairman of the department of government and its operation which was in charge of the dinner, presided. She opened the program with a review of the league's stand on reorganization of the District government.

Y. W. C. A. Asks Funds for Use In War Services

An appeal to continue aid for the work of the Y. W. C. A. in unoccupied France and to assist the British Y. W. C. A. with funds for its service to the many women engaged in war services for the British forces as well as to women and girl refugees or those interned in Great Britain was made in reports presented at the executive meeting of the World's Y. W. C. A., just closed.

The 21 representatives here for the committee meeting have been in session for three days at the newly opened offices in the N. E. A. Building on Sixteenth Street.

A report was read of the work for the fiscal year, May 1, 1939, to April 30, 1940, sent by Miss Ruth Woodsmall, general secretary. Miss Woodsmall, who until recently has been at the headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, is now in the Near East.

Much attention was given to the war emergency services of the Y. W. C. A. in many countries and to the heavy drain on resources. The world emergency fund, established for the China Y. W. C. A. has been continued in operation ever since, as needs of women and girls have arisen in Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, Rumania, Hungary, Belgium and France. In each of these the Y. W. C. A. has been called on for help for the refugees from neighboring countries or evacuees from other parts of their own land.

It was pointed out that the Y. W. C. A. services are not for food and material relief but a program planned to build morale and strengthen courage.

Miss Ruth Rouse, the president of the World's Y. W. C. A., will remain in Washington for a few days to get under way the program accepted by the committee. Mrs. Harrie Chamberlin, vice president for this country, and other members of the national board have gone to New York for the meeting of the board there today.

Hadassah Holds Education Day

The seven study groups of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah yesterday observed National Education Day with a series of demonstration programs at the Jewish Community Center, showing the work being done. About 300 members attended the morning and afternoon sessions, a feature of which was the afternoon address of Rabbi Samuel M. Blumenfield, director of youth and education for the Zionist Movement.

"Zionism as a positive factor in Jewish life has its place in the American Democracy," said Rabbi Blumenfield, "a democracy which means that each people and religion has a right and duty to express itself in order to enrich our common civilization. Beside the struggle abroad, which has now moved to the Mediterranean, where Jews are standing firmly on their own soil, defending the rights of humanity, we have a struggle to retain our stake in the past here in America."

"Modern American Zionism must revivify Jewish education and the Jewish home," he said. "Self-education is necessary for the adult, for the child: pictures, symbols, memories to cling to are important. Jewish learning based on the Bible ties the Jew of today to a long past of suffering and triumph. Although he realizes the suffering of the moment, he awaits a triumphant future. Thus he contributes hope and buoyancy to American democracy at a crucial moment."

Mrs. Moe Offenberg opened the meeting with a short talk on the role of education in Hadassah. Past education chairmen were honor guests at the meetings and noon luncheon.

Last of 6 Lecture Programs Presented on Latin America

Necessity for Cultural Cooperation Among Western Republics Stressed; Dr. Duggan One of Final Speakers

One of the most successful projects in which Washington women's organizations have ever cooperated closed yesterday when the final lecture program of the series of six on Latin-America was presented at the Shoreham Hotel. Necessity for cultural as well as economic, political and military cooperation in the Western Hemisphere was emphasized throughout the series. Mrs. Henry Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, was general chairman.

Dr. Stephen Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, one of the principal speakers on yesterday's program, declared that "good relations with our Latin-American neighbors come not primarily from political or financial activities but from education in its broadest sense, which brings understanding."

Dr. Duggan urged not only an exchange of students and professors but of musicians and artists and a reform in the teaching of modern languages in the schools of this country "so Americans can at least carry on an ordinary conversation with each other."

"Despite the differences in race and language the peoples of North and South America have much in common," he said.

Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, was introduced by Mrs. Raymond Clapper, chairman of the day, and presided during the program. The Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos, as the first speaker, stressed the value of the exchange of students, declaring that those who have had their education in the United States are bona fide propagandists in their own countries for good neighborliness. He also paid tribute to the influence of the modern woman in the development of friendly relations.

Dr. Carleton Sprague Smith, adviser on the music program for the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, described his recent "musical survey" of the Latin-American countries.

"By knowing the music of a country you come to understand its psychology," he said, adding that North Americans have much to learn from the folk music, popular and art music of the Latin countries. "And it is important that we go there in a spirit of humility," he asserted.

Dr. Robert G. Caldwell, chairman of the cultural program for the coordinator of commercial and cultural relations, urged the emphasis of points of similarity between the people of the American Republics instead of the differences that have loomed large in the past.

At the close of the program, Senorita Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, paid tribute to the women who had sponsored the lecture series.

A broadcast to South America in English, Spanish and Portuguese was given at the luncheon following the lecture, by four South American students. They were Senhorita Beatriz M. de Sauza, of Brazil, who was sent here by her Government to study at American University; Enrique Echeverria, of Chile, a student at Catholic University; Francisco Linares, of Guatemala, from Georgetown Foreign Service School, and Manuel Menendez, son of the dean of the University of Panama, who is a student at George Washington University. Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington, presided, and William S. Culbertson, former United States Ambassador to Chile, and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, president of the Junior League, both spoke.

FATHERS as well as mothers in the membership of District Congress of Parents and Teachers take an active interest in its work and make their contribution to it.

Because so many of the projects are carried on by the women members of the organization, the fact that there are men also is sometimes almost overlooked, but that is a mistake. An example of the sort of things they do is the plan to Edwin Uhtoff, whose wife is president of the Gage P.-T. A., to take colored motion pictures of the student aid work. These will follow the project from the appeal for aid to the outfitting of children from head to foot in the student aid rooms. As is customary in such pictures the backs of the children will be photographed, so their faces will not show and they cannot be identified.

Mr. Uhtoff will prepare a lecture to accompany the film and will show it to other Parent-Teacher groups or to other organizations that are interested in this phase of the Parent-Teacher work.

TO VISIT GADSBY'S—Members of the Lieut. John Shaw Society, Children of the American Revolution, on Sunday will make an historical pilgrimage to Gadsby's Tavern, in Alexandria, where they will be received by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, past national president of the C. A. R. and Virginia State regent of the D. A. R., with Mrs. Robert M. Reese, who is one of the members of the board of governors of the tavern.

On Saturday afternoon the regular meeting of the society will be held at 2707 P Street with June and Nancy Adams and Barbara Milburn as hostesses. Letitia Earl, junior president, will preside.

Miss Mary Poole, social service director of Children's Hospital, will speak and will receive toys from members of the society, presented by Mrs. F. E. Hornaday, senior president.

WINTER WARMTH: The American Knitters will have a style show of children's garments, which they have been making for needy children in the District, this morning at the Hay-Adams House, where they work each Wednesday. It will be for members of the group only, so all may see the little garments which have been made.

Children who will model them include Donald Gross, 4; Edward Gobbett, 7, and Nina Reckhard, 3.

In addition to knitting for the needy in the District, many members of this group work also for the Red Cross.

JOINT MEETING: Alpha and Beta Chapters of Delta Gamma Society, composed of prominent Washington teachers, will hold their regular monthly meeting at the Cairo Hotel tonight at 8.

The program committee, composed of Dr. Ruth Coyner, chairman; Roberta Shewmaker, Edna Simmons, Louise Viehmeyer and Marie Deneche, has planned a Christmas party featuring friendly rivalry between the two chapters.

Capitol Hill Club Today

The Capitol Hill History Club will meet today at 12:30 at the Kenesaw. Mrs. Wilmer Souder and Mrs. Charles E. Ferguson hostesses. After the luncheon and business meeting, papers will be presented by Mrs. J. Clyde Hemphill and Mrs. Phillip Martin. Subject for roll call will be "Origin of Christmas Decorations."

Girl and Man Drift Apart Because He Can't Afford Marriage and She Will Not Make Moral Compromise; She Wonders if Her Stand Is Really Wise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is similar to that of many young persons, I am sure. Therefore, I would like some advice from your interested readers, as well as your own opinions. I am a girl in my early twenties, in love with a young man the same age. Although he loves me, he is financially unable to marry me. Loving each other as we do, it seems only natural to both of us that our love be consummated.

However, my early training, my deportment until now and my belief in chastity before marriage, all prevent me from compromising. Consequently, the man, seeing my unwillingness, decided it would be best for us to stay apart as much as possible, until he can marry me. This means that I go out with other men, and he with other girls. Even so, our paths cross frequently.

I realize that illicit intimacy between unmarried persons—even when discreetly and protectively conducted, and for reasons such as ours—is not the choice of a person of character. Yet, we are just as unhappy now as we were before we agreed on the present arrangement. When we see each other, he rarely smiles and has little to say. Long working hours and unwise diversions are weakening his health and morale. In addition, conflict with his parents is further stifling a normal expression of his intelligence, talents and essentially healthy nature.

I try, with cheerful encouragement, to break through the crust of his despondency, but to no avail. In the company of other men, usually I can muster some semblance of contentment. But sometimes I am involuntarily inconsiderate of those who are kind to me. The word "discomfit" understates my reaction when I see him with other girls who may not share my views. Neither a pleasant home, congenial work, social recreations nor the study of art brings me surcease from wretchedness.

So, I ask you: Are we acting intelligently and constructively in staying apart? What suggestions can you give us? Your consideration will be deeply appreciated.

FLEUR.

Man's Intentions Are Strictly Dishonorable

DEAR FLEUR: Your young man's behavior isn't the behavior of a man in love. It's the behavior of a thwarted sensualist. His staying away from you isn't a protective gesture. It's at once a sour rejection of the not-easily-attainable—and a vindictive gesture, intended to punish you for resisting his dishonorable address. If he loved you, it would be his pleasure to make you happy in such ways as he could; and he would be continuously occupied with devising ways and means of adding to your innocent enjoyment of life in his company, and with working to make marriage possible.

Judging from your descriptive remarks, he's a boneheaded and a crybaby—whose parents are doing their best, but failing, to discipline him into socially acceptable shape. You speak of "long working hours and unwise diversions weakening his health and morale." Also, you mention "conflict with his parents." You give his age as "the early twenties."

One gets a picture of a headstrong whippersnapper, who—while doubtless pursuing a daytime routine of inconsequential labor—has no purpose in life beyond enjoyment of the present hour. And "enjoyment," for him, means senseless merry-making (of the "wine, women and song" variety) when working hours are done. That sort of male (one could hardly call him man), never will be financially in a position to marry—until the desire to marry so completely obsesses him that he discovers the necessity of working steadfastly to make his dream come true.

This chap's alleged financial inability to marry you is a flimsy camouflage of his nonmarrying intent toward you. And the long face he pulls, when you run afoul of him, socially, is more indicative of sulkiness than valid despondency. He would selfishly incorporate you, as paramour, into his repertory of "unwise diversions"—if such could be arranged with no promissory notes attached. But he isn't sufficiently interested in you to wish to trade his present hand-to-mouth way of living (socially and emotionally) for the steadfast performance which characterizes the man who is genuinely in love and morally responsive to love's high dictates.

All things considered, you personally are "acting intelligently and constructively," in letting the man go one way while you go another. But you are making a mistake in attaching any meritorious significance to his performance. To speak in the vernacular, he's a "false alarm." Instead of toying with the idea of compromising (which would be a literal enactment of "casting pearls before swine") you should be glad you've been true to your convictions thus far. And it should be your "increasing purpose," henceforth, to completely outgrow his sordid influence upon your thoughts and feelings. M. H.

Every Woman's Christmas Credo

That she isn't going to do any shopping to speak of—just cut everything to the bone and have a really simple and sensible celebration for once.

That she's not going to be influenced in the slightest by what all her friends and neighbors (who of course have lots more money than herself) plan or do.

That this year she's going to be real hard-boiled and not make the children soft by getting them the bicycles, electric trains, movie cameras and other expensive things they say other children are getting and that the family simply cannot afford.

That she's never going to go downtown without a list and that she's never going to shop around after she's tired, but rather go straight home and rest, even if somebody is entirely forgotten.

That she's going to refuse all luncheon and other invitations and not go to a single committee meeting until after the holidays.

That she's not going to work at the church bazaar or help pack the club baskets for the poor families. (Let some of the women who never do anything take their turn this time.)

That's she's going to explain Santa Claus in a beautiful and truthful way to the youngest child just a soon as she can get around to it.

That she's going to be very firm about having a neat, small tree instead of a big one with its attendant mess.

That if she does give in and have a big tree it's not going to be trimmed with any glass ornaments that will break and get into the carpet, and that positively not a single box of artificial snow shall be brought into her house this year.

That there's only going to be hard candy in the house this time and not a single cherry-centered chocolate, and that all cracked nuts will have to be kept in the nut bowl.

That all the wheeled toys and chemical sets and airplane building outfits will be kept out of the living room.

That she's going to cut down some way on the number of Christmas dinner guests and not invite a single relative that you have to be careful how you handle.

That she's really going to have a simple dinner so everybody won't feel drowsy and stuffed all afternoon.

That no matter what happens, she's not going to get panicky and rush out and get cards for people who she had forgotten existed—or merely forgotten — until their handsome 25-cent greeting cards arrived.

That she's going to get every present bought and wrapped, every card mailed and the house all ready for Santa far, far in advance this year so that for once in her life she can enjoy the music and the lights and the fellowship and can find some time to be alone with herself—and the spirit of Christmas.

That even if she doesn't get around to doing all these things this year (and it begins already to look as if she won't), she'll have sense enough to start in December 26 getting ready for next year.

Technique in Tooth Brushing Aids 'Million Dollar' Smile

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BUREAU of missing teeth states that by the age of 25 we average four teeth lost; by the age of 30, the number has increased to seven, and at 40 it is up to ten! But the worst of it is, we appear to have a hand in these losses—we brush our teeth the way we did as children, and it's all wrong.

Dr. M. H. Zummerman, instructor at the School of Dentistry, New York University, explains it this way:

The simple rotary method of brushing is all right for a child. He is going to lose his teeth anyway. But the grown-up has to learn better. A 'good brushing' doesn't mean scrubbing vigorously over the surface. It includes massage of the gums and allows the brush to penetrate the crevices between the teeth."

How It's Done

Here's the technique, as explained by our instructor:

First, buy a good stiff brush—the stiffest you can find. But don't have it too large. You can work better with a fairly small brush. As to dentifrice—unless you have some dental condition which demands a special paste or powder—any good brand will do.

Now, for the brushing: Place the brush on the gums at an angle of about 45 degrees, and brush with a "shimmy motion," down from the upper teeth, and up from the lowers. Repeat the strokes two or three times until you feel that you have had a thorough brushing on the outside, then transfer your activities to the inside of the teeth and repeat.

How many times a day should you brush? Dr. Zimmerman believes in brushing the teeth after every meal, but he doesn't expect anyone to do it more than twice a day. If those two times are made to count as they should, they will suffice.

Diet Is Important

It will really pay you to take the time to learn and practice the correct brushing technique, for we are given to understand that the old rotary brushing not only fails to clean the crevices between the teeth, but that it may actually cause the gums to recede from the teeth.

If you are having any serious trouble with tooth or bone structure, your dentist has probably already queried you as to your diet. Frequently, Dr. Zimmerman finds, the patient is "letting up on the vegetables with green and yellow coloring matter, or is failing to drink his milk." If you are one of those people who can't tolerate milk, there are plenty of good substitutes on the market which will assure you of your calcium and phosphorus intake.

Our instructor agrees with the dentist who said that "being in love is good for the teeth" because psychological factors have their effect on all parts of the body—although the teeth may be the first to show these effects. Worry has a bad influence on the nervous system and interferes with assimilation of food—and the teeth suffer.

But in spite of the average person's tendency to worry and to continue to brush his teeth like a child, he is better off than his grandfather. He is paying more attention to his diet, visiting his dentist more regularly, and, when replacements do become necessary, they are not so easily spotted as "store teeth."

Leftover Food No Problem To Grace Smith

EVER housewife knows how leftovers can accumulate when you're cooking for a family of three or four. Just picture how they pile up when you serve 4,000 meals daily as does Grace Smith, new president of the National Restaurant Association, who is in town this week for a regional conference. Proprietress of a large cafeteria in Toledo, Ohio, Miss Smith admits that she used to be swamped by leftovers; by using her imagination, however, she's worked out several "second-day" dishes which rival the originals in popularity.

Grace Smith

"If we have orange or cinnamon rolls left, for instance, we make orange or cinnamon bread pudding, with a dab of orange marmalade on top," she says. "One of our most popular desserts is based on leftover cake; we crumb it, roll a ball of ice cream in it and serve it with sauce as a sundae. My particular favorite is a vegetable casserole, made from odds and ends of cooked vegetables mixed with thick cream sauce; we always add a little fresh celery for flavor." She is justly proud of an achievement most cooks would call impossible—a dish made from leftover souffle. "We cut it in squares or strips, dip in egg and crumbs, fry and serve with tomato or cheese sauce," she says. "I think it's better than the souffle itself."

A Washington couple negotiating for an appearance on the program, "We the People," had occasion to telephone the New York studio. Since they did not know the number of the radio station, they merely gave the Manhattan operator the name of the program. She took several moments to look up the number, then said, "All we have for that listing is Willkie headquarters. You don't want THAT, do you?"

The twentieth anniversary of women's suffrage is the fortieth anniversary of Mrs. Nellie Somerville's first vote. The mother of Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, Mrs. Somerville was living in Greenville, Miss., in 1900. Local crops were suffering from the appetite of passing cattle, so a special election was held to decide whether to fence the gardens or the stock. Mrs. Somerville, who later became the first woman to serve in the Mississippi legislature, discovered that "property owners" could vote in the election. Since no mention of sex restriction was made, she accompanied her father to the polls. Thus, she points out, she voted "when cows were running" many years before she could vote for men.

Changes Aplenty Noted In 1941 Social Register

War, Elections and Divorce Courts Account for Many; 14 of Every 1,000 Capital Residents Listed, to Set National Record

By Hope Ridings Miller

A 1941 EDITION copy of that little black book of the blue bloods—the Washington Social Register—hit my desk yesterday and I must say the war, elections and the divorce court have wrought plenty of changes in its content.

Hope Ridings Miller

Each year, when the book comes out, I patiently thumb through the pages, noting carefully names that have been added since the last edition, as well as those that have been dropped. This time it took longer than usual.

Washington, of course, has a higher percentage of eligibles than any other city in which upper-crusters are socially registered. The President, Vice President, the Supreme Court and Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps and all United States Senators are listed automatically. In contrast with New York, where approximately 30,000 persons—or four in every thousand—are in society, 14 out of every thousand are socially registered in the Nation's Capital.

The book continues to be bound in the same black and red cover and has the same typographical make-up that has distinguished it since 1887. I note that marriages among the Capital creme de la creme have increased slightly the past year, the current edition listing 172 married this year as compared with 165 the year before. Deaths have dropped from 85 to 82, of which 33 were women and 49 men.

An air of secret inquisition long has surrounded the Social Register. The most enlightening account I have ever read on its whys and wherefores appears in Dixon Wecter's "The Saga of American Society." Tracing the register's progress from the beginning—back in the elegant eighties—the author sums up some of his findings as follows:

"Among society's more naive members, various superstitions exist about the Social Register. Its august tribunal is thought to meet and examine testimony gained from a terrifyingly unknown espionage, whereas its chief source is the newspapers."

OCCASIONALLY—though this does not apply to Washington—some ludicrous inclusions have been noted in the Register's pages, according to Wecter. A case in point is the fact that Mrs. George L. K. Morris (Estelle C. Frelinghuysen), of New York, included the name of her 4-year-old Pekingese, Rose, in the "Summer Register" for 1936. "Insult was added to injury," Wecter commented, "because Rose was unpedigreed."

Well, that has never happened here, and the Washington Register carries, with a few rather amazing exceptions, names of most of the persons who are Society with a capital "S." At least, inclusion in the book is black-and-white proof of a certain degree of social assurance.

IT IS a well-known fact that while the Social Register is a profit-making project (annual profit to the Social Register Association is estimated at around $50,000) nobody can buy his way into its pages. On the other hand, it is fairly noticeable that most Eastern city residents who have had money in the family for at least one generation have no difficulty in being listed—provided, of course, that no scandal has blotted the escutcheon.

A preface to a former edition of the Register described its eligibles as "those families who by descent or social standing, or from other qualifications, are naturally included in the best society of any particular city or cities." Certainly that statement is both vague and elastic, as the policy demands. And it is well to bear in mind that no city farther south than Washington and Baltimore has an authentic Social Register today.

PICKED UP IN PASSING: J. Edgar Hoover may be G-Man Number One to the United States as a whole, but to a certain local group he has been Santa Claus for a number of years. In other words, for more Christmases than he can count on one hand, he has sent boxes of candy to the ladies—ladies of the Baptist Home of Washington . . . Mrs. J. Ronald McCrindle, better known as Susan Ertz of literary fame, who has been the guest of Mrs. Arthur Wood, left yesterday for New York. She expects to return to Washington for another brief stay before sailing for England shortly after Christmas . . . At a recent tea party Mrs. George Barnett spent a good deal of time explaining to friends that the Duchess de Crussol, who visited her a few weeks ago, is NOT the Marquise de Crussol mentioned in a recent series of magazine articles about former French government leaders and their lady friends.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Donna Julia Brambilla will entertain at a luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club on Saturday . . . the former Rumanian Financial Counselor and Mme. Boncesco will gather in a few friends for cocktails on Saturday . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jeon Delattre-Seguy will give a similar party on Sunday . . . And still another cocktail-time fete for this week-end is George Renchard's party on Friday.

THE MINISTER of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais will go to Baltimore today to be guests of Theodore Marburg, former United States Minister to Belgium, and Mrs. Marburg. This evening they will attend the performance of Mr. Marburg's play, "The Story of a Soul," to be presented by the Johns Hopkins University Players at the Baltimore Museum of Art.

While Mr. Marburg was envoy at Brussels he devoted much time to following events in the neighboring Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and was inspired to write in blank verse the play, which has for its subject the tragic story of the late Grand Duchess Marie-Adelaide of Luxembourg.

They were on hand yesterday to assist at the bazaar of the local Holland Sailors Christmas Committee, which opened yesterday at 1739 Connecticut Avenue. Since many Dutch seamen have been virtually interned in the United States due to their ships being tied up in American waters, this project has been launched to give the nautical lads a real old-fashioned home Christmas

About the Town

Just arrived in the Capital is the new Military Attache, Gen. Auguste Bonavita. His un-French sounding name means he's of Corsican origin. During the last war the general, who replaces Col. Emmanuel Lombard, was a member of the Inter Allied Commission in London. He remained in the British capital until after the Armistice.

He has had many colorful posts, the most isolated having been the Sahara Desert. Several years ago the general taught officers of the Czecho-Slovakian army as a professor at the war school in Prague. Then he was for three years Military Attache in Peking, and followed in Manchuria the early course of the Sino-Japanese war. Later he commanded a Senegalese regiment in Toulon. His wife and three children are still there.

LADY BAILEY, wife of Vice Admiral Bailey, of the British Navy, hopes to leave in January to return to England. She is remaining here to celebrate Christmas with her daughter, who is at Foxcroft, and her son, a student in Canada. Meanwhile Lady Bailey is taking no less than four different courses in first aid and war work. With her mother, Mrs. Charles Bromwell, of Washington, she is living at the Wardman Park.

Among the hardest workers at the the Red Cross is Nancy Leiter. Somehow during her career as a North Shore skipper and Washington debutante she has found time to become an expert typist, and is putting in an eight-hour day as stenographer and receptionist for Mrs. Dwight Davis. Adelaide Whitehouse, of Newport, a full fledged secretary, also works as a volunteer for Mrs. Davis.

ONE OF the weirdest election bets I've heard about has just been paid off. Lady Lewis (Roosevelt) bet the Snowden Fahnestocks (Willkie) 100 ducks on the outcome. As the loser, Mr. Fahnestock went to no end of trouble to round up the ducks. Rather than have the animals delivered at the Lewis home on Massachusetts Avenue, he consulted a farm and found that 100 baby ducks would cost $68.50. So he has sent the winner a check for that amount.

Caseys, Closes Give Dinners

Two dinners at which table-talk was flavored with broad "a's" and clipped British accents took place last evening. Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, was honor guest at the one given by the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close. Informal, unofficial and off-the-record was the dinner given by the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey.

Attending the fete for Lord Lothian were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Stimson, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Draper.

Still others there were Canadian Naval Attache, Commodore Victor G. Brodeur and Mrs. Brodeur; Brigadier John Holthouse, the new Air and Military Attache of the South African Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Houghton, Lady Broderick, Miss Anne Randolph and former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Donald Downses Give Second Tea Of Informal Series

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs entertained yesterday afternoon at the second in a series of informal teas they have been giving since their return from New York. As usual with parties at Downsecrest, this one was "upstairs and downstairs," with the guests gathering in the dining room and library on the first floor and the attractive play room in the basement.

The hostess, who has adopted a becoming new hair-do this season, wore a black crepe frock with a satin panel in front. Her mother, Mrs. Russell Bennett, poured tea, dressed in black with a French blue hat trimmed with vari-colored ribbons. The table was centered with red roses and bowls of chrysanthemums in autumn shades were placed here and there throughout the house.

Most of those present had motored out from Washington, though there were a few neighbors from around McLean. Black seemed to be very much a favorite, judging by the dresses seen. Mrs. Aldace Walker and Miss Cecelia vom Rath had both chosen this shade.

Others present included Julian Chetwynd, of the British Embassy, with Mrs. Chetwynd; Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mrs. Sims Snow, Mrs. William T. Mann, John Stonborough, Harry Coxen, Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson and Lieut. Victor Sutro.

AT HER COLONIAL house on Kalorama Circle, Mrs. George Maurice Morris has been entertaining a most charming house guest, the Honorable Mrs. Christopher Freemantle, of London. Mrs. Freemantle returned yesterday to New York, where she lives with her two small boys and works at the British Consulate. Young and attractive, Mrs. Freemantle has to her credit achievements that would be envied by many workers in the fields of politics and literature.

After attending Oxford, where she was a fellow student of Angus Malcolm of the British Embassy, and of Elizabeth Houghton, daughter of former Ambassador and Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, Mrs. Freemantle "stood" for Parliament as a member of the Labor Party. The British "standing" for a political office always seems a bit more dignified and far more restful than the American "running" for a similar prize.) She also wrote for British newspapers, among them the London Times and the Manchester Guardian, and did some broadcasting.

ON RETURNING to New York, Mrs. Freemantle will take time off from her work at the consulate to polish up a novel. She wrote the book in the record time of three weeks in order that she might submit it in a competition and, though not winning the prize, she did find a publisher.

Mrs. Morris entertained at luncheon for Mrs. Freemantle, among her guests being Mrs. McFarlane Reid, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Angus Malcolm and John Foster of the British Embassy, and Povl Bang-Jensen, of the Danish Legation. Also present were Patricia Morris, pretty elder daughter of the house, who had come down from Vassar for the George Garretts' dance, and Carroll Perry.

Mrs. McFarlane Reid, the former Leslie Wright, of Washington, whose husband, a high-ranking officer in the Royal Air Force, was at one time Air Attache at the British Embassy here, also gave a party for Mrs. Freemantle. The affair was a cocktail party, which took place at the home of Mrs. Frederick Atherton, on Massachusetts Avenue, and was largely attended by the Capital's British colony. Mrs. Reid is staying with Mrs. Atherton this winter.

BARON JAMES BAEYENS, First Secretary of the French Embassy, has returned to Washington from a trip to California, where he and Baroness Baeyens visited the latter's family. Baroness Baeyens will arrive about the fifteenth of the month, in time to prepare for the family Christmas.

Baron Baeyens ran into Count Andre de Limur, who is on a visit to the West Coast, where he is a guest of the Crockers, Countess de Limur's family. He also saw Roger Gaucheron, who was at the French Embassy here for a number of years and was transferred to San Francisco.

DR. ROBERTO DE MENDOZA asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon at his house in Georgetown to meet his cousin, Luis de Mendoza, of Havana. Dr. de Mendoza has a most fascinating house, which he has "done" himself. He considers his chef d'oeuvre the long drawing room, which he describes as "Cuban Victorian."

Wallpaper in a gold and gray pattern makes a background for superb crystal candle brackets, a gift from Dr. de Mendoza's mother. The furniture is Victorian, from his home in Havana, and has been painted gray and upholstered in tufted satin of solid colors in jewel tones. The tables are black, inlaid in designs in mother of pearl, and the long windows are curtained with classically draped satin in colors to match the upholstery. But the bone of contention in decorating the room was the rugs, which Dr. Mendoza had made in New York. In spite of the fact that his mother and all his friends advised against his choice, and it does sound wild, the effect is stunning. Black rugs, printed in huge red roses, are edged with a coarse white fringe. And there you have the limit of what a man can do in house decoration when left to himself.

Miss Tarbett is a graduate of Marjorie Webster Junior College and the University of Maryland. She is a member of the faculty of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Mr. Walther attended American and George Washington Universities and studied aviation at Randolph Field, Texas.

Experts to Study Food in Defense

Research Council Appoints Committee On Nutrition to Disseminate Latest Diet Discoveries to 45,000,000 Underfed

The National Research Council yesterday announced the formation of a committee on food and nutrition to advise on nutritional aspects of national defense. Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic, is chairman.

Constituting a veritable "Who's Who" in the science of nutrition, the committee will have men and women members from all sections of the country. Their job, generally speaking, will be to disseminate the latest developments on diet and emphasize the importance of balanced foods.

A separate committee of the National Research Council is already the Army and Navy on this subject. Several of its members are affiliated with the newly appointed group.

To Serve With Wilder

Among those who will serve with Chairman Wilder are the following: Cullen Thomas, General Mills Corporation; Dr. John N. Black, Harvard University; Dr. F. G. Boudreau, Milbank Memorial Fund; Dr. Joseph S. Davis, Stanford University; Dr. John B. Youmans, Vanderbilt University; Dr. Lois Mecy Hoobler, Children's Funds of Michigan.

Also included are Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, Massachusetts State College; Dr. Lydia J. Roberts, University of Chicago; Dr. R. R. Williams, Bell Telephone Laboratories; Dr. George R. Cowgill, Yale University; Dr. C. A. Elvehjem, University of Wisconsin; Dr. Norman Jolliffe, New York University; Dr. Henry Borsook, California Institute of Technology; Dr. Charles Glenn King, University of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Philip C. Jeans, Iowa State University.

In contrast with 1917-18, it is the quality of food—not the quantity—which is the chief concern today, according to the committee. Miss Harriet Elliott, head of the consumer division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, stressed this point in asking the N. R. C. to name the committee.

45,000,000 Eat Improperly

She pointed out that an estimated 45,000,000 Americans are now living on inadequate diets and consequently suffering various degrees of malnutrition.

Serving on the committee as liaison representatives from the American Red Cross and Federal bureaus are Dr. W. H. Sebrell, Public Health Service nutritionist; Dr. William DeKleine, American Red Cross medical director; Dr. Louise Stanley, Department of Agriculture; Col. Paul E. Howe and Commander Charles S. Stephenson.

British Captain's 'Uneventful' Trip Raises Eyebrows

Boston, (AP).—The British freighter Swinburne arrived here recently from Cardiff, Wales, via South American ports.

"No news, boys. Uneventful voyage," her skipper told inquiring waterfront newsmen.

She escaped a rain of Nazi bombs while leaving Cardiff in a convoy.

She passed a flaming passenger liner, apparently the target of a bomber.

Her well-worn engines broke down three times en route to Rio de Janeiro, forcing her to drop out of convoy.

Her dynamo gave out, leaving the ship in darkness most of voyage, except for light from crude wax candles made by crew.

Woodward's' Plans $43,000 Yule Bonus

Gifts to Store's Employes Based on Length of Service

Approximately 5,000 employes of Woodward & Lothrop, department store, will receive bonuses totaling $43,000 on Christmas Eve, it was announced yesterday.

The bonus will bring to $83,750 the total of gifts distributed to store employes in November and December. On November 20, 2,223 employes received Thanksgiving bonuses totaling $50,750. Distribution of both bonuses is based on length of service, the requirements of the first bonus being considerably higher than the second.

Distribution of the Christmas bonus will be as follows: Employes serving ten years and over will receive $20; five years and less than ten, $15; three years and less than five, $10; one year and less than three, $7.50; employed prior to November 1, 1940, and less than one year, $5; employed on or after November 1, $2.50.

Insurance Man In Fallen Span Is Arrested

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Dec. 3.—Hallett S. French, prominent insurance man, was arrested today on a complaint charging that he embezzled $1,217.88 in premiums paid to him for insurance on the Tacoma Narrows Bridge, which collapsed recently.

Chief Deputy Prosecutor Charles C. Ralls said French was accused of taking about $70,000 from the Merchants Fire Assurance Corporation of New York during the past several years.

He said French wrote $800,000 in policies on the bridge, retained the premiums and failed to report the policies to his company.

As a result, Ralls adds, the company had no opportunity for the customary redistribution of some of the amount among other insurance firms and hence was liable for the entire sum.

Ralls said that French told him he would "have been in the clear" if the Narrows Bridge had stood another week. It collapsed in a high wind November 7.

"The brokers had notified me the State considered the bridge so safe they were going to reduce the insurance to the amount of the bond issue," Ralls quoted him. "They were going to cancel the insurance in another week and write new insurance."

French said he had deeded the company his new house, his automobile, all his cash and other belongings.

The complaint against him was signed by George F. Warth, New York, company vice president, who came West to investigate.

In New York, Walter F. Brady, vice president and secretary of the company, said:

"Of course, we shall honor the policy and pay off on it. We would not have taken this policy had it been submitted in advance.

"Come what may, our loss should not exceed $300,000, which is a relatively small amount of our assets of $17,500,000. Reinsurance brings our loss down to that figure, even though the claim amounts to $800,000, which I consider very unlikely."

Carrington Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Maj. Frank de L. Carrington, U. S. A., retired, career soldier, Indian fighter and Spanish War veteran, who died Monday in Walter Reed Hospital, will be at noon tomorrow in the Fort Myer Chapel. He was 85.

Maj. Carrington lived in Washington during the winters from 1910, when he retired, until his death. His summers were spent in Milledgeville, Ga., with a sister. In Washington he made his home at 1431 Manchester Lane Northwest.

A native of Milledgeville, he was graduated from West Point in 1878. He fought the Sioux in the Dakotas and Nebraska in 1890, and was with the Eighth California Infantry during the Spanish-American War. He served in the Philippine Insurrection and remained from 1905 to 1907 to work for the Philippine civil authorities in various capacities. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club.

Y.; three brothers, Dr. Paul Carrington, of San Diego, Calif.; Dr. Scott Carrington, of Miami, Fla., and Edward C. Carrington, of Birmingham, Ala., and two sisters, Mrs. Lee McKinley and Miss Emma Carrington, both of Milledgeville.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Boy Dies as Car Rushing Him To Hospital Upsets

Three persons were injured and Luke Willett, 15, of Nanjemoy, Md., died of loss of blood in the delay when the car rushing him to the hospital overturned near La Plata yesterday. The machine struck a soft shoulder of the road.

The most seriously injured was Luke's brother, Chester, 17, who suffered a skull fracture. Also injured were Andrew Keyser, 647 F Street Northeast, and Franklin Harris, of the 1200 block of I Street Northeast.

Luke Willett was dead when he was finally brought to the La Plata Hospital. Keyser, also taken there, was found to be suffering from fractures of the knee and both ankles. Harris was cut and suffering from shock.

Waitresses Learn to Serve Psychology as Well as Food

That Smile You Get With Your Hamburger Is Music on the Cash Register, Training Course at Restaurateurs' Parley Reveals

The next time the waitress suggests the $2 steak dinner instead of the Blueplate Special, don't laugh—she just noticed your new tie and is applying psychology with a capital PS.

And if she spills soup in your lap and then smiles sweetly, that is merely more of the same.

This inside dope was gleaned from the waitress training courses where Mrs. Sylvia Willgus will graduate 16 lunch salesmen today at 2:30 p. m. at the National Restaurant Association regional convention in the Mayflower.

Psychology is very important, Mrs. Willgus revealed yesterday. Aids in methods of getting the cash customers to order a second helping and keeping them happy when the toast is burned, change from time to time and the hired help should be kept informed, she added.

Personality, she explained, is that beautiful smile you get with your hamburger. Salesmanship is that helpful suggestion that the regular dinner costs only a dime more. And psychology is, briefly, what the waitress uses to keep you ordering steak a week after pay day.

Also, there is no reason for feeling guilty when you use the tablecloth for simple arithmetic—the waitress loves it. That means that you are engrossed in something and will probably stay there indefinitely, and incidentally keep ordering indefinitely.

Other features at the convention yesterday included an exhibit of restaurant gadgets that do everything but brush your teeth. One takes a practically raw steer in one end and emits a large number of hamburgers from the other.

Another converts a block of ice into cylindrical ice cubes that fit nicely into the glass. And one scientific contraption measures the consistency of dishwater by means of electricity. A bachelor's night mare is the weird-looking exhibit which can be made into a stove, an oven, a broiler, or a barbecue pit.

A food display highlighted the convention last night. Typical menus in each price class from various Washington restaurants were exhibited and judges selected the most appetizing—by sight, not by taste.

The 3,000 restauranteurs will close their convention today with 10 scheduled discussions, presentation of merchandise prizes, and a banquet at 8 p. m., where "Washington's best dinner" will be served in the Mayflower ballroom.

Villa Rosa Estate Bought for Site Of Junior High

The District government yesterday purchased the Villa Rosa estate, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, as the site for a new junior high school.

The famous estate, which contains the familiar pink stucco villa, consists of five and a third acres of land with an approximately 700-foot frontage on Massachusetts Avenue. The Italian-style villa was originally built for Henry St. George Tucker, former Congressman from Virginia.

Although no purchase price was mentioned, it is believed to have been in the neighborhood of $75,000.

The property was sold for Dr. and Mrs. Oscar B. Hunter through J. Rupert Mohler, jr., a local real estate dealer. At one time, the villa was occupied by Judge and Mrs. William B. Lamar.

7-Story Fall Victim Declared Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued late yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an investigation of the death of James A. George, 55, who was killed in a plunge from the seventh floor of Emergency Hospital early yesterday.

George, who lived at 1 Second Street Northeast, headquarters of the American Vindicators, occupied a semiprivate room at the front of the hospital and was recuperating from an operation.

A nurse, Bonnie Keys, heard the man's body strike the terrace about 1:20 a. m., and he was dead when an interne reached him. Detective Sergt. John Wise, homicide squad, said a screen at the window had been cut with a knife.

D. C. Maps Campaign On Traffic Problems

Judges, Officials Meet With Young to Swap Improvement Ideas

A coordinated attack on Washington traffic problems, embracing all branches of the city's highway control system, was mapped yesterday at a special meeting of court, police and traffic department authorities in the office of Commissioner J. Russell Young.

The conference was called by the Commissioners to seek improvement "suggestions" from officials charged with planning and enforcement of local traffic regulations. Young said. Although no definite recommendations were adopted, each official present was asked to report back to the Commissioners his specific ideas on changes that might relieve aggravating problems.

A special study of the District's method of suspending drivers' permits for speed offenses is expected to result from yesterday's session. Judge John P. McMahon, presiding judge of Police Court, assailed the practice of suspending permits against persons whose livelihood depends upon driving a vehicle, it was reported.

In other States, it was pointed out, drivers are not deprived of their commercial operating privileges for minor offenses, but are prohibited from driving for pleasure for certain periods of time after a conviction.

Action is expected to be taken also on the problem of out-of-town motorists who come here, obtain jobs, but fail to take out local permits or license plates. A method of notifying holders of foreign tags to apply for District registration within 30 days after arrival was suggested.

Postlude

By Kay C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Sergei Rakhmaninov in a piano recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Variations on a Theme of Schubert (Tausig), Prelude and Fugue in A minor (Bach-Liszt), Rondo Capriccioso (Mendelssohn), Sonata in F minor, Op. 57 (Beethoven), Nocturne in D flat major, Two Mazurkas (Chopin), Humoresque, Moment Musical, Etude-Tableau in E flat major (Rachmaninov), Sonetto del Petrarca in A flat major, Hungarian Rhapsody No. 11 (Liszt).

Playing the same program which he used in Carnegie Hall last month, Sergei Rakhmaninov made his second local appearance of the season last evening in Constitution Hall before an audience as enthusiastic as it was numerous. Enthusiasm was fully justified by one of the finest displays of artistic pianism that one could hope to enjoy from any performer now living, for the eminent virtuoso was never more mellow in his proficiency. His maturity of technique at 67 was suffused with an ingratiating tonal quality and an emotional warmth ordinarily associated with youth.

Ray C. B. Brown

He began with a composition practically unknown to the present generation of concert-goers—the "Variations on a Theme of Schubert" by Liszt's favorite pupil, Karl Tausig, who is said to have surpassed his master in flawless technique. Liszt was wont to call him "Tausig the infallible, with fingers of steel." While at the height of his renown and popularity, he died from typhoid fever at the age of 30. The Schubert variations, both tender with feeling and coruscating with brilliance, constitute one of his few original compositions for piano, as most of his works were transcriptions of such difficult music as the "Walkuerenritt." Rakhmaninov etched these figurations with the delicacy and charm befitting their romantic elegance.

His next offering was Liszt's transcription of Bach's A minor organ prelude and fugue in the Siloti version. The architectural proportions of the music were impressively set forth and the sonorities of tone were as close to organ timbres as the piano can come. Some of the heavy left-hand dynamics were carried over into the next number, Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso," but there were compensating lightnesses of touch in rapid passage work, and the lyric andante was made to sing with entrancing loveliness.

On the side of interpretation, Rakhmaninov reached the apex of his program in his eloquent reading of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata. Therein he sought, found and disclosed the spiritual values of the music, and his performance was notable for the care with which technical skill was made subservient to artistry. In the first movement, for example, the thematic subjects were not hurried and blurred by precipitate speed, as they so often are by excited readers, but were uttered at a tempo which allowed them full expression. The andante was played with nobility and profound emotional penetration.

Among the shorter pieces of the program, the Chopin D flat nocturne stood out by virtue of the sensitiveness with which the flowing phrases were moulded, and two mazurkas were imaginatively treated. Rakhmaninov is always too modest with the number of his own compositions and he confined himself to three: the Etude-Tableau in E flat and revised versions of the Humoresque and Moment Musical.

At the end Liszt was given a place with the A flat Sonetto del Petrarca, which Rakhmaninov made tonally glamorous by the lyricism of his touch, and the eleventh Hungarian Rhapsody, which was scintillantly performed, and at the same time transformed from tinsel into radiance of light.

Senator King Honored By Voteless Citizens

Northwest Citizens Council Sponsors Tribute in Recognition of Senator's Efforts to Secure Vote for District Folk

William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, was honored last night by nearly 200 Washingtonians on his approaching retirement from public office.

The testimonial dinner was tendered Senator and Mrs. King at the Columbia Country Club, under suspices of the Northwest Citizens' Council.

Paying tribute to the Senator's efforts for disenfranchised Washington during a quarter century were more than a score of Government officials and heads of citizens' associations.

Senator King talked briefly of his years in the House and Senate, of his belief in the right of Washingtonians to the privileges of citizens.

"The District Committees of the House and Senate should be forums for the people of the District," he declared.

He emphasized that "Washingtonians cannot be isolationists . . . I don't know what the future may have in store . . . But on the heights of the new world we have peace . . . The world looks on this country to vindicate democracy."

His legislative accomplishments Senator King attributed to hard work. "My exercise is acting as pall bearer for my friends who played golf," he said.

Henry Quinn, former president of the District Bar Association, said in commending the work of the Utahan, that Senator King plans to remain a resident of Washington and practice law here.

United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran, Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, and John Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, all paid tribute to Senator King.

Representatives of the citizens associations who spoke included Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation; James E. Maxwell, of American University Park Association; Robert J. Hellmuth, Anacostia; Joseph P. Quinn, Brookland; Wilbur Finch, Burroughs; Culver B. Chamberlain, Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park; Godfrey L. Munter, Chevy Chase.

O. P. Solem, Chillum Heights; Walter D. Cunyas, Conduit Road; J. Louis Gelbman, Congress Heights; Harry C. Grove, Connecticut Avenue; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; L. M. Beisenring, Dupont Circle; Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, Forest Hills; A. J. Driscoll, Mid-City; Fred S. Walker, Park View.

Ernest F. Henry, Petworth; Capt. G. Leyburn Shorey, Piney Branch; G. Emerson Pray, Randle Highlands; John L. Fowler, Rhode Island Avenue and William Malo, of the Southeast Citizens' Association.

Dr. George C. Havenner, toastmaster, was introduced by H. L. Colman.

Columbia Heights

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night commended the work of the Dies Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities and assailed labor tie-ups impeding national defense.

In their resolution commending the committee's work, members also urged appropriations of $1,000,000 for continuance of the unit's investgiations for two years more.

The association also approved a resolution, offered by Mrs. Marie F. Maddox, denouncing the practice of charging fees as a prerequisite to employment on a defense project. Besides being detrimental to the Nation's rearmament, the practice interfered with reemployment, it was said.

Former Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal addressed the meeting, urging taxation of property now exempt, as a means of raising funds for the Government's operation.

He also proposed creation of a citizens advisory board, with members elected from voting precincts in which he suggested the city be divided. The board would make recommendations regarding the District government to the Commissioners, as well as to Congress.

D. C. Seeks Sewer Funds

The Commissioners yesterday disclosed they have requested Budget Bureau approval for a $160,000 deficiency appropriation for construction of service sewers to keep abreast with building activity.

Two months ago the Commissioners were told the fund for construction of the service sewers, $275,000, would be depleted shortly after the first of the year if building activity continued at the pace it had set at that time. The $275,000 was appropriated by Congress in expectation the WPA would continue to supply workers and funds amounting to $221,000 for the work. Most of these men, however, were withdrawn from this type of work and placed on defense programs at Bolling Field, Gravelly Point Airport and other Federal projects.

Service sewers are the small lines which connect homes with main sewer lines. Rather than hamper building activity at the time, the Commissioners decided to spend what money was available and then seek a deficiency appropriation. Building activity for the first five months of this fiscal year amounted to $23,587,825 as compared with $16,212,575 in the previous year.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., said yesterday it may be necessary to increase the deficiency appropriation to as high as $250,000. The bill will come before Congress in January. Col. McCoach believes the money left in the fund will carry on the work until February 1, if no more WPA workers are withdrawn.

Enlargement of Payne School Is Aim of Southeast League

Members of Civic Organization Have Been Working for 15 Years For Better Educational Facilities

This is the sixty-sixth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia.

Enlargement of Payne School, at Fifteenth and C Streets Southeast, is first on the agenda of the Southeast Civic League this season.

EDELIN

Members have been working for 15 years to obtain better educational facilities for colored children in the Southeast area, according to League President John A. Edelin, a coal dealer at 1640 E Street Southeast.

Besides extension of classroom facilities, they hope to obtain a better playground for the Payne School. Their interest in this school in the past has resulted in frequent contributions from the league treasury to keep needy children in attendance, Edelin reported.

"Better playgrounds for colored children are needed not only at Payne, but also throughout the section," the president said yesterday. Lack of adequate recreational facilities is a serious handicap in our neighborhood."

The civic association's stated aims of promoting "better home life, better child life, better school life and better community life" are advanced at monthly meetings held on third Mondays in the Giddings School, Fourth and G Streets Southwest.

Officers elected at the November meeting include Edelin, Edward J. Quander, first vice president; the Rev. Paul J. Moore, second vice president; Mrs. Blanche C. Knorl, secretary, and J. W. Herdwick, sergeant at arms. Delegates to the Federation of Civic Associations include President Edelin, Quander, Mrs. Knorl and Miss Helen Capers.

Other officers will be elected at the league's next meeting, December 16.

Area served by the Southwest organization is bounded by East Capitol Street on the north, South Capitol Street on the west, Seventeenth Street on the east and the Anacostia River on the south. Boundaries have been unchanged since the league's formation in 1923, according to President Edelin.

21 More D.C. Selects Get Assignments

Leave Fort Meade Today for Transport, Quartermaster Duty At Camp Holabird

Selectees from the Capital, Maryland and Virginia counties, numbering 21, yesterday were assigned to duty at the large Army transport center at Camp Holabird, Md.

The recruits are among 171 new men who will leave Fort George G. Meade, Md., today for permanent posts at Holabird, where extensive development of motorized equipment is in progress.

Nine of the men who entered the Army at the local induction center last Wednesday and Thursday will go to Company E, Twenty-third Quartermaster Regiment (trucks), while nine others are assigned to the Motor Transport School, and three will take up stations with the Detachment Quartermaster Corps.

At Fort Meade personnel officers prepared further marching orders for two score unassigned Washington inductees at the reception center, five local registrants were named as replacements for a like number who failed physical examinations at the Capital induction station. All are volunteers.

Five Named as Replacements

They are John Wesley Campbell, 27, of 3700 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, who registered in Needles, Calif., but was placed in Class 1-A by Washington selection board No. 6, on his return here a few days later. A professional musician with 13 years' experience, Campbell played with bands on ocean liners, including the Normandie and Ile de France, and later, with several orchestras on the West Coast and in this city. He attended the University of Maryland one year.

Clarence LeRoy Money, 21-year-old taxi driver, of 621 East Capitol Street. Money, a native of Greenwich, Va., and former student at the Washington School for Secretaries, said he volunteered to get his Army training out of the way rather than suffer interruption to his college career later. He is from Board No. 15.

Raymond Francis Smith, 25, of 1502 D Street Southeast. A native of Washington and an upholsterer by trade, the registrant was classified by Board No. 23.

James G. Lynch-Patrick, 27, of 1241 Twelfth Street Northwest. He is a native of Pittsburgh, and is now unemployed.

Turney David Smith, jr., 35, of 1823 S Street Northwest. A native of Chicago, Smith is an employe of the Public Works Administration. The registrant from Board No. 10 studied at the University of Chicago Medical School and the University of Illinois.

Induction Set for Friday

The five replacements are scheduled for induction Friday.

At the same time, local selective service headquarters announced two replacements in the local draft set-up.

Culver B. Chamberlain, 40-year-old attorney, of 2737 Cathedral Avenue Northwest, was appointed Government Appeal agent with Board No. 18, replacing E. Cortlandt Parker, resigned.

Chamberlain, a former American consul in Manchuria, is president of the Cathedral Heights Citizens Association, founder of the Northwest Citizens Council, and a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Dr. Richard F. Shaw, 36, of 1324 Michigan Avenue Northeast, was named one of two examining physicians with Board No. 20. He replaces Dr. Richard Murray, Reserve officer in the Army Medical Corps, who has been called to active duty.

Dr. Shaw, native Washingtonian, is a graduate of Georgetown University and its medical school and is a member of the District Medical Society.

Meanwhile, local boards continued to shift from their headquarters in local schools to offices where upkeep is less expensive. It is expected all but one or two boards will take up new offices before the week-end. Those that had moved last night and their new headquarters are:

No. 2, Cathedral Mansions Apartments; No. 3, 3500 Nebraska Avenue Northwest; No. 4, Takoma Theater Building, Fourth and Butternut Streets Northwest; No. 6, Tenth Police Precinct Station, 750 Park Road Northwest; No. 9, 710 Fourteenth Street Northwest; No. 13, Burlington Hotel, 1120 Vermont Avenue Northwest; No. 15, 616 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast; No. 18, Maryland Avenue Northeast; No. 20, 1202 Monroe Street Northeast.

$135,810 Project Must Be Approved By the President

A $135,810 project for the rehabilitation of the District's Home for the Aged and Infirm was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners and Paul Edwards, WPA administrator. The project must await approval of the National WPA headquarters and signature by the President.

Adversely criticized by Mrs. Roosevelt in a statement which led to a Congressional investigation of all local welfare institutions, the Home for the Aged would receive $75,000 in structural improvements and $60,000 to increase the personnel and services, under the project.

The work would be divided into two projects, new construction work, and added personnel and extension of activities for the inmates. Of the total cost, the District would supply some $42,000 and the WPA the remainder.

Commissioner John Russell Young said he was gratified over the availability of the workers for this project but pointed out the Commissioners are seeking a permanent solution for the inadequate quarters of the welfare institutions in their proposed welfare home in nearby Virginia or Maryland. The 1942 budget contains estimates for establishment of a welfare tract for four welfare institutions, including a new Home for the Aged and Infirm.

Services of 65 WPA workers would be provided the "neglected aged in the home," according to Edwards.

Fifty-one other workmen would be employed in rehabilitating the old, delapidated and "dangerous" buildings in which the aged, many of whom are bedfast, are housed. Their first task would be to provide fire escapes. At present, according to officials, there is only one double-door exit for 65-year-old men who sleep in one dormitory.

Floors which have sunk and are in dangerous condition would be strengthened and replaced where necessary. Additional toilet facilities would be provided, for both men and women. It was said at present 65 white women use two bath tubs, 250 colored women use four bath tubs, 182 white men use four bath tubs.

Extension of the bake shop, improvement of the kitchen and general rehabilitation of the buildings would follow this primary work, Commissioner Young said. Of prime importance, he said, is the plan to provide a dietitian and an adequate staff of kitchen attendants, waiters, charwomen, attendants, orderlies, nurses and janitors to improve conditions. He said food served inmates often is ill-prepared and more poorly served.

Farces Aren't Written, They're Mostly Rewritten

Picking Up Some Cuts on 'Off the Record;' Little Smashes Records With 'Baker's Wife;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS A COURAGEOUS UNDERTAKING that John Shubert has shouldered in bringing "Off the Record," this week's item at the National, to the boards. On the presumable assumption that the time is ripe for laughter, rational or not, he has harked back through the decades for a type of non compos mentis farce that hasn't been seen on a local theater stage in years. To find its counterpart in fantastic structure it is necessary to backtrack to the remote days of "Baby Mine," "Up in Mabel's Room," "Getting Gertie's Garter" and the like—not that the present number is very much like any of them.

BELL

The point is that Mr. Shubert has dared take a chance with a risky form of entertainment that cannot be appraised on any basis of logic, plausibility or decorum. Its sole function is to get laughs. "Off the Record" got a lot of laughs on Monday night and, as we were saying in yesterday's review before a paucity of space necessitated its deletion, would have gotten many more if Parke Levy and Alan Lipscott had not pressed so hard in dragging obviously planted "gags" in by the scruffs of their necks. If the nature of the story were permitted to take its course, the effect would be infinitely more spontaneous on both sides of the footlights.

What we also were saying for the benefit of the junk box, as it turned out, was that Joseph Sweeney, Richard S. Bishop, William Foran, Frank Tweddell and Elmer Jerome are the standouts among the players supporting Bruce Cabot, Betty Furness, Mary Brian, Hugh O'Connell and Dennie Moore. Exaggeratedly grotesque all of them, but by no means grim.

Like musical comedy books, farces aren't written. they are rewritten. That is probably what will happen to "Off the Record." There is enough intrinsic merit in its basic idea to justify it. After all, "Charley's Aunt" came back to score a hit on the Main Stem.

At Monday's luncheon at the Carlton with the producer and stars of the National's insanity, it came out that the youngest of the Shuberts, Bruce Cabot and Dennie Moore entertain widely divergent viewpoints with regard to Hollywood. Bruce loves it—except when he is not working and his friends are and so have to bound out of the hay at 6:30 a. m., the middle of his night. That's why when not on call he usually is in the East. Mr. Shubert got off on the wrong foot in the film colony by reason of having been taken out to the West Coast as an assistant director by a powerful figure in the industry who shunted him from one picture to another at intervals of about three weeks. John immediately was tagged as a spy for Eastern banking interests, snooping around the studios for no good. He was almost as popular as a mild attack of the bubonic plague. The disarmingly "dumb" Miss Moore has assimilated her fill of celluloid and now has her heart set on Broadway in a play and ether waves in the circumambient—which is by way of being slang for radio.

Poor, abused, little Mary Brian, on such occasions, always has a joust with the Year Books and the Who's Who'ses. No two of them accredit her with the same birth date. The popular legend is that she played the role of Wendy in "Peter Pan" on the screen at the age of 14. She confides that it was 13. "And anyhow," she says, "if you think I'm going to tell you how old I am, you're crazy!" Personally, I don't see that it makes any arguable amount of difference. Nine or 90, Mary is still a grand girl and a sterling trouper.

As an added feature of the bill with the eighth week of "The Baker's Wife," starring Raimu, the incomparable French comedian, the Little Theater will present a 20-minute short subject featuring Jan Ignace Paderewski. The gelatin is the essence of "Moonlight Sonata," the short-reeler that topped the request lists for the Little's International Cinema Festival last year.

With "The Baker's Wife" entering its eighth week today, the Little, incidentally, lays a claim to having broken all continuous run records for a single house in the entire District. It tops "Snow White's" seven week's, at RKO-Keith's, and "Gone With the Wind's" ditto, at Loew's Palace. It's brought in the most people, it's given the theater its fattest day, week and month—in terms of cash register clatter—and now outdistances "Ballerina," the object of the Little's earlier pointing with pride. And we said five weeks, 'way back yonder!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 3.

Two and a half years ago Michele Morgan, who charged her name from Roussel because she loves American names, made a picture with one of France's greatest leading men, Jean Gabin, called "Port of Shadows." RKO finally got around to seeing the picture—had a combination brain wave and hysterical fit over Michele—imported her through Lisbon, Portugal, to the fair shores of this country—thence to movieland—and the other day threw a swank party for her.

HOPPER

With her classic face and quiet speech Michele made quite a hit, even though she flew into a mild rage everytime one of those flashlight bulbs went off—which was every minute. She isn't used to them yet—but she'll learn. She did a swell French picture with Charles Boyer.

I wish they'd introduce her in this country the same way. And if her studio can't get Boyer, there's an opportunity for Walter Wanger to do another "Algiers" and put over a foreign star, as he did Hedy Lamarr. But maybe Walter is tired of playing a philanthropist. I don't believe he'd be able to borrow Hedy now for love or money.

Producer Lucien Hubbard plans to send a camera crew down to Florida to get background shots for a sequel to "Youth Will Be Served," and when asked why he didn't take the shots in California, he said. "Because if we shot California, the public would know it fornia orange groves in the picwas phoney, because their oranges aren't so big down Florida way."

John Barrymore is so crazy about the work of Oscar Homolka, the character actor who swipes practically every scene he gets his nose in, that John wants to do a play with him on Broadway. I'd even fly on to see that one, wouldn't you? . . .

Patsy Kelly swears that the coyotes near her Coldwater Canyon home have scared her Doberman Pinscher into curly hair.

Training Leads To Movie Fame

If the boy next door annoys you with his saxophone tootling try and bear with him—for he may be a potential Fred MacMurray or a Bing Crosby.

A Hollywood survey reveals that many a youthful yearning for expression which took the form of saxophoning, guitar playing or even blowing into a brass pipe, has turned out to be the wedge that eventually opened the gates of the film capital.

Because Fred MacMurray learned to play a saxophone he found a sorely needed job in a Broadway show. It was from this show that Paramount signed him.

Paul Whiteman would not have been enough impressed by the frog-like crooning alone of a duo named Bing Crosby and Harry Barris to hire them if it hadn't been for the Crosby guitar accompaniment.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3 (INS).—David Selznick's first official act, after returning to Hollywood a few days ago, was to agree to loan Ingrid Bergman to M-G-M to costar with Robert Montgomery in "Rage in Heaven." We can only guess by this that David has no immediate production plans for himself, since Miss Bergman is the third of his top femme stars to go visiting to other studios. Joan Fontaine is on the Columbia lot to do. "And Now Goodbye," with Brian Aherne; Vivien Leigh is making "Lady Hamilton," with Alexander Korda, and now the Swedish actress, Ingrid, is the third to go on leave from the Selznick banner.

PARSONS

Ruth Hussey's best Christmas gift is that new contract M-G-M just handed her. This girl, who came to Los Angeles as a member of a second-rate stock company, has certainly done well for herself in the movies. Since "Susan And God" she has made "The Philadelphia Story" and has the femme lead in "Flight Command," with Bob Taylor. Ruth's first on the new deal, with a salary raise, will be "The Vanishing Virginian," Rebecca Yancey Williams' amusing novel of a tempestuous Southern family. Frank Morgan is the star.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Congratulations to the Pandro Bermans, who welcomed a 5-pound 5-ounce girl yesterday morning; Rudy Vallee and Betty Grable have discovered each other. They've appeared two nights in a row at Victor Hugo's; cutest romance in town is that of Dick Tibbett (Lawrence's son) and Olympe Bradna. Young Dick, who wants to be a singer, is studying with Dr. Lippe, Nelson Eddy's coach; reports are that all is not so well with the June Lang-Johnny Rosselli marriage and that June is going to make another try at a career.

The Lloyd Nolans have named their debutante Melinda Joyce; John Shelton and Carol Gallagher, who planned a February merging, have changed their minds and now say it won't be until summer; even the shocking bomb headlines from London aren't influencing Alexander Korda's decision to spend the Christmas holidays with his son, Peter. The boy is in the ambulance corps; Lana Turner, the original sweater gal, looking at a whole window filled with them and getting Tony Martin's advice about which she should buy.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Blackfriars' Guild Presents 'Safe Crossing'

Premiere of Drama By Courtenay Savage Reveals Unusual Story

By Richard L. Coe.

That interest in miracles and their acceptance by faith, so much the motivating force of the contemporary Roman Catholic drama, is again evinced in Courtenay Savage's "Safe Crossing," which had its premiere last evening in St. Paul's Auditorium by the Blackfriars' Guild.

Radio Writer Savage has chosen sharp contrast to tell his story. His central character needs saving, doesn't want it. He's a "con" man in Chicago's strictest meaning of the word. Down on his scheming, he's looking for a new racket when the Furies of Motor Traffic plump one in his lap. Near the respectable Church of St. Mary there is a dangerous crossing at which many pedestrians have been killed. Chance finds the "con" gent in the adjoining churchyard when a young boy narrowly escapes fatal injuries as a truck lumbers by.

Alert to any opportunity to earn a dishonest fortune, "Con" Man Proctor claims he saw the hand of St. Christopher, the travelers' protector, reach from heaven and sweep the youth from death. He suggests a shrine to the saint, enthuses the trusting and, with pals from the past, a husband-wife team takes past, a husband-wife team, takes racket

An Engrossing Plot

With this unusual skeleton on which to improvise, Savage has written a consistently engrossing drama. His first act is comparatively brief, situation-setting. In the second there are many climaxes, the rise and fall of which are so numerous as to vitiate the effect which the third and final act would possess were the net not tightened so early around Proctor's scheme. To be sure, this is an enlivening fault and one which the audience doubtless finds absorbing, but the general result is that coming events cast their shadow too quickly beforehand.

His denouement is brought about by a daughter of Proctor, who has not seen her father since his crooked ways broke up their home when she was a child. This character, coming dangerously close to a deus ex machina, might well be more credible, in the script and in the playing.

The Pollards Score

Both the Blackfriars and Mr. Savage have been fortunate in the casting of the central role. Robert Pollard, known the country over for his work with student and semi-professional companies, his life profession, is the conniving Proctor whose material greed falls before his conscience. His easy conviction communicates itself to his younger associates in the same manner employed by Father Gilbert Hartke for his Catholic University productions. Mrs. Cleone Pollard, similarly makes her small role of a parishoner outstanding.

Nell Fleming, of the Blackfriars' resident players, is effective as the wife who urges her faltering husband to stick to the ambitious Proctor. Anthony Messuri does not always achieve the humor inherent in his role of the husband, while Henry Dominioni's priest is piously acceptable.

Helen C. Hickey directed, assisted by Adah May Brady. The balance of the cast includes Barbara Von Wald, Leon J. Norris, Thomas Markham, Eleanore Mitchell, Roland Firzpatrick, Edith Reynolds, E. Francis McDevitt, and Herbert Lupton.

"Safe Crossing" will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in the auditorium at 1421 V Street Northwest.

Many Notables Will Appear On New 'Town Hall' Program

The Town Hall of Washington announced its program for the 1941 season yesterday. This will be the seventh year in which a series of lecture discussions on vital subjects of the day has been presented to the people of Washington.

As in the past, noted lecturers and authorities on national and international affairs comprise the roster of Town Hall's speakers. In addition, two dramatic presentations will be offered; Cornelia Otis Skinner in her monologue, "Mansion on the Hudson," and Elissa Landi in dramatic impersonations.

The program is divided into seven Sunday evening events, which begin January 5 at 8 p. m., and six Friday morning lectures, beginning February 7 at 11 a. m. All meetings will be held in the new ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, director, 3212 Reservoir Road Northwest, is in charge of season tickets.

The complete program is as follows: January 5, Archduke Otto, of Austria, "Christianity and War"; January 12, Thomas Mann, "This War and Democracy"; January 19, Cornelia Otis Skinner, "Mansion on the Hudson"; January 26, Alexander Kerensky, "Who Will Win—Stalin or Hitler?"; February 12, Admiral H. # Mexico Seeks End To Rift With Britain

Interest in Renewing Relations Expressed By Foreign Minister

By Jack O'Brine

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Mexico City, Dec. 3.—Mexico moved tonight to mend her ruptured relations with Great Britain and thus fortify United States efforts to do everything short of war to insure British victory over Germany.

In his first conference with United States correspondents, Presidents, Manuel Avila Camacho's minister of foreign affairs, Ezequiel Padilla, disclosed willingness of the new Mexican government to restore relations which were severed with England at the height of the dispute over the Cardenas administration's expropriation of British oil properties 2½ years ago.

Terse though his statement was, Padilla paved the way for the immediate opening of negotiations to restore British and Mexican relations. He said: "We will consider with interest all possibilities of renewing the interrupted relations with England."

Reconsideration Possible

His emphasis that "all possibilities" would be explored roused speculation over the likelihood that Avila Camacho would reexamine the oil expropriations, which caused the diplomatic rift.

President Cardenas, before turning the government over to Avila Camacho on Sunday, had often expressed his desire to renew Mexico's relations with Great Britain, but had pointedly refused to reconsider the seizure of approximately $200,000,000 worth of British Dutch Shell oil properties.

It also is considered important that Padilla intimated that an attempt would be made to restore relations with Spain, which have been severed since the Franco victory. This seemed particularly significant in view of the treaty reported signed today between England and Spain.

He announced that Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera would return as Mexico's ambassador to the United States, a post he has held for the last six years. Dr. Castillo Najera recently was elected vice president of the Pan-American Union.

The chamber of deputies today was the scene of attacks on all ambassadors and ministers who represented Mexico during President Cardenas' administration with the single exception of Castillo Najera.

Flourishing sentiments of good will between the United States and Mexico were quickened further today when Avila Camacho, at a reception in his honor in the American embassy, pledged himself to share with President Roosevelt the responsibility of strengthening democracy in this hemisphere.

'You'd Be Surprised'

WEE BONNIE BAKER,
whose songs, "Oh, Johnny," and "You'd Be Surprised," have made her famous, will not marry Orrin Tucker, her bandmaster-fiance, according to Columnist Louella O. Parsons. Bonnie and Orin have broken their engagement, it is reported. Said Bonnie, "I don't want a husband who bosses men." Said Orrin, "It was all a mistake"

D.C. Grand Jury Clears Deputy U. S. Marshal

The District grand jury yesterday cleared Deputy United States Marshal James A. Quinn, 33, of blame in connection with a shooting October 8 in which Kermit H. Sherman, 32, was wounded seriously. At the same time, Sherman was indicted for felonious assault upon the deputy.

Quinn shot Sherman allegedly in self-defense when the latter advanced upon him with a drawn knife in the 1600 block of H Street Northwest. The bullet passed through Sherman's body and lodged in the leg of Mrs. Mary Lewis, 60, a telephone operator, of the 2500 block of Thirteenth Street Northwest, who was passing by.

Quinn had gone to an H Street cafe in search of a fugitive. The shooting was said to have followed an altercation with Sherman. Quinn was suspended pending investigation of the affair, but will be reinstated immediately, it was reported at the courthouse yesterday.

The grand jury returned 57 indictments. They included:

Eugene L. Norris, joyriding (six counts); Joseph H. Davis, joyriding; Walter M. Brown, alias Walter M. Harris, joyriding; Enos N. Bowen, joyriding; Simon Milloff, grand larceny (five counts); Sigmund Milloff, grand larceny (four counts); George E. Poindexter, housebreaking and larceny (ten counts) and housebreaking (one count).

Nathaniel King, William Ferguson and Joseph King, housebreaking and larceny; Leroy King, housebreaking and larceny; Curt Gilbert Bondrake, jr., housebreaking; Toyd D. Hyatt, housebreaking and larceny; Melvin M. Anderson, Oscar W. Lonesome, Gilbert M. Horn and Samuel N. Harper, housebreaking and larceny.

James H. Little, housebreaking and larceny; Elmer Maddox, John P. Stout, Bonnie O'Connor and Dorothy Morgan, housebreaking and larceny; Jeremiah Wilkins, housebreaking and larceny; George C. McCormick, robbery, housebreaking and larceny; Harris Butler and Lloyd Robinson, housebreaking and larceny; David G. Coleman, robbery; William T. Guice, Earl Childress, Harry G. Guice, Theodore S. Swikiel and Margaret L. Cwikiel, robbery.

William F. Leishear, robbery; Theodore Grant and Harold L. Berg, robbery; Alfred Jones, violation of Liquor Tax Act of 1934; Eugene S. Hawkins, assault with dangerous weapon; Kermit H. Sherman, assault with dangerous weapon; Joseph Eierbee, assault with intent to rape; Percy Green, assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge; Doyle H. Moore, manslaughter; William Clark and Henry Smith, first-degree murder.

Contract Bridge

No rubber-bridge player would be pleased to go down one at a grand-slam contract, yet at a recent duplicate champinnship Russell J. Baldwin, chief tournament director of the American Contract Bridge League, won "top on the board" by just such a strange "break." The answer to the riddle was that every other South player, though only reaching a contract of six, was set two tricks.

Here are the cards:

|---|---|---|
| | ♠ A 8 5♡ A J 9 8 4◇ A Q 9 8 4♣ None | |
| ♠ Q 9 7 2♡ 10 7 5 3◇ 7 2♣ 9 6 5 | NORTHWEST EASTSOUTH | ♠ 6 4♡ Q 6◇ J 10 5 3♣ J 10 7 4 2 |
| | ♠ K J 10 3♡ K 2◇ K 6♣ A K Q 8 3 | |

Due to a favorable heart lead, Director Baldwin had a chance to win the grand slam, but he misjudged the situation and went down one when the diamond suit failed to break.

By guessing the location of the two opposing queens correctly, South could win 13 tricks by a squeeze play on East in diamonds and clubs, even with an unfavorable club or diamond lead. He would win three spades, three hearts and either four diamonds and three clubs or three diamonds and four clubs. Two discards will crush the East hand.

Symphony Sets Needs for Season At $107,600

A minimum budget of $107,600 is necessary to maintain the National Symphony Orchestra during the 1941-1942 season, L. Corrin Strong, president of the Board of Directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, said yesterday.

Strong pointed out that in accordance with the two-year contract signed between the association and the Musicians' Protective Union, $107,600 is the minimum goal which must be reached if Washington is to have a symphony orchestra next year.

He said the amount provides for a 20-week season, the shortest which the union will approve. If a larger amount is raised, the season will be increased in accordance with a sliding-pay scale arrangement with the members of the orchestra, it was stated.

A campaign committee will be announced shortly, Strong said.

76 Take Oath Of Citizenship In Washington

Seventy-six naturalized citizens swore allegiance to the United States yesterday and were admonished by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of District Court, that their newly assumed responsibilities include "unswerving devotion to the laws of our country."

Justice Wheat, referring to conflict abroad, also warned the new citizens they would be expected to become loyal supporters of the United States in all its undertakings.

The chief justice also reviewed briefly the recent Presidential campaign, explaining that whatever "bitterness" may have developed, "it is all over as soon as the returns have been counted."

"After the election," said Justice Wheat, "the people settle down to their ordinary walks of life and become whole-hearted Americans, giving their true faith and allegiance to the Government of the United States."

Senate Plans Police Inquiry In 'Sniper' Case

Half a dozen District police officers may be called to testify at Senate hearings next week on the alleged use of a dictograph in Washington's "sniper" case. Chairman Stewart of the Wire-Tapping Investigation Committee indicated yesterday.

Senator Stewart said his interest had been aroused by reports that police had planted a dictograph in a room in which a local attorney conferred with John E. Eklund, 25, accused of killing three colored men.

Committee investigators, the Senator said, will interview within the next few days a number of officers who may be asked to testify when the public hearings begin December 11.

Among the police named are Supt. Ernest W. Brown, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, Capt. Walter Storm, Lieut. Robert J. Barrett, Detective Sergts. Aubrey Tolson and Jeremiah Flaherty and Detective Lester W. Rank.

Senator Stewart yesterday conferred with James R. Kirkland, who became attorney for Eklund after the alleged dictograph incident.

N. C. Democrats To Fete Broughton

Gov.-elect J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina will be honor guest of the North Carolina Democratic Club, of Washington, at a victory meeting of the organization at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow, at the Willard Hotel. He is scheduled to speak.

Receiving the Governor to be and his wife at a reception following the meeting will be members of the North Carolina Congressional delegaiton and their wives, headed by Senator and Mrs. Josiah William Bailey and Senator Robert R. Reynolds.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

FIRST "WOODEN SOLDIER." Emil Boreo, creator of the famous "March of the Wooden Soldiers" skit in the first "Chauve Souris," will open at Troika tomorrow night. He's an international artist of true renown, has played in many Cliff Fisher and Earl Carroll productions, was seen last in Washington as the humorous and bedeviled innkeeper of that screen masterpiece, "The Lady Vanishes." He comes direct from New York's St. Moritz, will be at Troika for just ten days before taking off for Miami. Boreo's elegant funmaking and singing are even more effective viewed in close-up from a ringside table than on the stage or screen. He does a string of highly varied character impressions, using as his only make-up a bunch of hats stranger than those in the Connecticut Avenue show windows.

Ned Young, brother of the redoubtable Paul and Dave Young, has just arrived from Hollywood and will be the new operator of the Romany Room. He recently closed in an important role in "Zero Hour" produced by the Hollywood Theater Alliance, has also played many character parts in the movies. Like his sisters, Ned is young, dark, handsome and handy. Dancers Alice and Hyatt opened in Romany last night and there'll be an all new show there next Tuesday.

NEW CAPRICE MUSIC. Don Carper's Foursome, from New York's Hurricane Club, will open in the Cafe Caprice tomorrow evening. Versatile is the word for the group. Leader Don alternates between the vibraharp and solovox. The other boys do tricks on the trumpet, French horn, string bass, steel guitar and piano. And they all sing like barytone nightingales. Their melody is in the newest Manhattan motif—sweet but mighty tricky. N. B.—Tonight's your last to hear Bert Stevens and his sleek trio. Au 'voir, boys, and may Lady Luck continue as your dear pal.

"BEAVER." Anyone playing "Beaver" would have done well in the Anchor Room the other eve. Artist Brian Brown looked like a Latin statesman with his brunette Van Dyke beard, and played a spot of Bach much to Matt Windsor's awe. And Norman Lambeth (who promised his wife he wouldn't shave until he returned to Colorado) sported a blonde beard a la the House of David.

NEW COSMOS MELODISTS. Here are tiny tintypes of Bob Simpson's new band opening in Carlton's Cosmos Room tomorrow eve. Grace Shannon, ringleader of the "sing section," pianist and vibraharpist, also composed the unit's theme music. Singer Linda Carroll is a former John Powers model. Paul Inbody, (violin-sax-piano) and Bill Green (drums) used to be with Bob Sylvester. Eddie Finckel (pianist-arranger) comes from Charlie Spivak's Band. Al Alviti (guitar-violin) has made Columbia and Brunswick records, played with Jan Savitt. Carroll Hartman (bass) is an ex-Ipana Troubadour. Meyer Ratner (violin-trombone) and Lee Mason (trumpeter-arranger) have been featured with the N. B. C. studio band.

Marcia Neil, cute canary of the Metronome Room, wears the 1940-41 college uniform in daytime—sweater, jacket, short plaid skirt, socks, oxfords and no hat.

DEEP SEA DISTURBANCE. A tidal wave of excitment is sweeping the Neptune Room. Between readying for the arrival of Milt Herth's crew on Saturday, the Four

BOB SIMPSON,
whose new orchestra with "sing section" opens in the Carlton's Cosmos Room on Thursday

Men of Note and Evelyn Tyner saying a million good-bys, pretty little girls inquiring how to get a Herth audition, the place is in an uproar. Topping it off was Gene Archer's luncheon of arroz con pollo, prepared delectably by his own fair hands and the yearly award of the Neptune Trophy for the biggest fish caught in Chesapeake Bay. Father Neptune is getting dizzy!

"CONGA REVUE." Casino Royal's new show, is packed w[ith] a sultry señoritas. Jack Schafer has a new song that's definitely torrid zone. Better bring your fans! And Jack Lane's trained birds are not canaries, as we said. They're love birds! Besides being torchy the "Conga Revue" is bright, handsome, brand new, will go to Miami's Club Harrington for a season's engagement after leaving W[ash]ington.

MELODERMICS. The sunshine version of "California, Here I Come," that Dick Koons' Band played for Mayor Rossi, of San Francisco, when he recently visited the Mayflower Lounge . . . Burrus Williams' boys at La Salle Versailles adding decoration to Kate Smith's tune, "The Last Time I Saw Paris" . . . "That's All" as given the final tricky touch by Carr and Don at the Madrillon . . . "My Mother Would Have Loved You, Incidentally, So Would I" when Jimmie Nichols lacquers it at the Lounge Riviera . . . "Roll With the Brewers," theme song of Heurich's basketball team, being played by Bill Strickland's Lotus Band.

Grace Drysdale, chic girl pupeteer at the Shoreham, used to be a certified public accountant. Bored to tears by computing machines, she went to a children's puppet show, received the inspiration that has made her one of the country's most successful creators of sophisticated marioneties.

"RAISIN' KAIN" is Mayfair's new and jolly diversion. Paul Kain's new fivesome is going over like the Chicago fire. Patrons dote especially on the trio vocals of Paul, Adele Van and Ken Foy. But all the specialties have the glitter of fireworks. Leader Paul admits he was "weaned on a clarinet," since his father was a musician who played many instruments.

NIGHTINGALE HISTORY. Probably not one in a thousand of the folks who dance to Rodd Raffell's music at the Nightingale suspect it, but the place is built on part of George Washington's estate.

VITAMENTIONS. Hi Hat's Jimmy Summerville has received many pats on the back for keeping his music so soft that it doesn't interfere with conversation . . . The Silver Fox has wired music in the afternoons, novachord and guitar from 9 until closing . . . The Harrington Tavern is always populous with young business men at luncheon time . . . Beverly Stull of Burt's Trans-Lux doesn't wear her heart on her sleeve, but one of her frocks is decorated with six diamante hearts . . . Singer Ralph Cannon, of the Rainbow Room has run up 1,500 miles on his new car in two weeks, can't imagine how he did it . . . Oscar and Gustav Heinz recently completed two years at the New Bavarian . . . Mrs. Puryear, mother of Owner "Laddie" Puryear of the Robin Hood, designed the fetching costumes worn by the spot's waitresses.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Look now, because the next time you see your Saturday heroes they'll be unveiled as pros. For all future football purposes they'll be plucked off the campus next week by the National Professional League. You may not feel a draft, but the college seniors who have been starring on the gridiron will. Their names—approximately 300 of 'em—will go up on the pros' big draft board.

The professional coaches will make something of a rush, firstly, for the backs. They can't resist the temptation to grab those backs who have been making college football headlines, because the idea, after all, is to take that ball places. When the ten pro teams take their first round of choices, eight of the first ten draftees will be backs, if precedent is followed.

After the frenzy to acquire backfield men, the choosing will level off into a grab for ends, tackles, centers and guards. Only one thing is certain. The coaches will pass up the guards until they've exhausted the supply of better ends, tackles and centers. Somehow, guards are not regarded as vital in the same measure as other players. Remember when a new kid used to come around your lot and wanted to play on your football team? And you used to say "sure, get in there at right guard," on the theory that he could do less harm at that spot than any other?

Sometimes the pro coaches will make an exception in the case of a good running guard, but they are a rare type. The coaches prefer to load up with good tackles on the theory that a smart tackle can almost always be converted into at least a good guard.

What sort of backfield men will the coaches be looking for? John Kimbrough, the Texas A. & M. giant, probably typifies better than anybody else now playing college football the kind of lad the pro coaches like to dream of signing. We asked an important pro coach to describe the ideal college back for pro purposes, and this is what he told us:

"I'd say the ideal fellow would be Kimbrough. He's big . . . 218 pounds . . . and fast. We like 'em the bigger the better in this league, as long as they can handle themselves. You hear it said that weight above 200 pounds is a liability, but in certain cases that isn't true. Sometimes a big fellow will come along who has speed and agility as well as weight, and that's your best football player in this league. We take the good big man over the good little man."

There are exceptions, of course, as he pointed out. He said the best player in the pro league was Ace Parker, who weighs only 165. And Dick Todd hovers around the same figure. But they are apart from the common herd of small men because of their exceptional toughness. The good big man is still his choice.

"There never was anything wrong with Bronko Nagurski," he was saying, "and the Bronk would hit 234 pounds when he was in best condition. He was just a big guy who had everything including speed and you know what kind of a football player he was. Look at that Johnny Drake, who came out of Purdue and is now with Cleveland. Weighs 215 pounds and handles himself like a 150-pounder. He's one of the great backs of our league."

The coaches will have their eyes on those nice big boys now playing college football. Tommy Harmon, Michigan's 200-pounder, will be perfectly acceptable of course. And they'll go for Norman Standlee, Stanford's 215-pounder, who gets around nicely. And Don Scott, who does all those things in the Ohio State backfield despite his 215 pounds.

The Philadelphia Eagles, with first choice, will probably grab up Harmon in reference to his tremendous fame which will certainly prove a gate attraction, and he is tabbed as sure-fire stuff as a pro. But the great bulk of the coaches would prefer Kimbrough on the theory that he simply is big and fast and better equipped to contest with the pros. A team like the Eagles, needing a stimulant at the gate, would naturally prefer Harmon. A team like the Bears or Redskins, which has no financial worries, would go for the man they think is the best football player.

It's the rich teams of the league which will be more inclined, also, to overlook the ball carriers and go for that good blocking back. Forrest Evashevski of Michigan will make no all-American teams, but the pro teams which are not compelled to grab the headliners will want him as a blocking back and signal caller. The same talents will probably land Henry Toczylowski of Boston College high in the draft list.

If there is any club which might be disposed to overlook the 158 pounds of Harley O'Rourke, Boston College's tricky passer, runner and punter it figured to be the Chicago Bears. The Bears are normally give to bigness in their backfield, but O'Rourke would fit in nicely into the clever ball handling behind the line which they feature, as in that style of play he would have less blocking duties wherein his weight would handicap him.

The pro coaches will know something about the lads they're drafting, of course. They'll be interested in the injuries a fellow might have suffered. A broken leg or a broken arm won't deter the pro coach from grabbing a player. Breaks and fractures usually knit nicely. The item the pro coaches will be wary of is wrenched knees and dislocated ankles or shoulders. They don't want much traffic with college boys who have been hurt in the joints. They usually stay hurt.

On the Line

CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 3.—It can happen here department—Ace Parker, the greatest all around football player we ever saw, could have been elected to any public office in Brooklyn after he almost singlehandedly whipped the Giants last Sunday to clinch second place. He was mobbed on the way to the locker room and chased into the subway by a band of hysterical Brooklyn rooters, who nearly succeeded in edging him into the path of an approaching train, so eager were they to get his autograph or grab at his coat. The car he sat in, on the subway, was jammed with his Brooklyn well-wishers, all of whom got off in a body when Ace fought his way off at 125th Street. There has'nt been a Brooklyn hero like that since Babe Herman.

So what? So next season, if Ace learns how to swat that No. 2 pitch, he will be playing baseball with the Pirates. He will come back to the same ballyard where he made 'em love him this season as a gridman. Perhaps, as a Pirate, he will stalk up to the plate some day in one of those 13-inning games that leave Brooklyn's fans a mass of raw, scraped nerves. Perhaps the score will be tied. And perhaps Ace will bust one on the snout, knock the ball over the wall, and beat the Dodgers.

And if he does, our Brooklyn football hero will be run right out of Ebbets Field by those same fervid fans!

One of the most abused football officials of the 1940 season was Paul Swaffield, who refereed the Boston College-Georgetown game. There was much comment on the fact that he called a fourth down a pass-interference penalty no Georgetown in the end zone. The decision gave Boston College the ball on Georgetown's 1-yard line, and from that point Mike Holovak bucked it over for what eventually proved to be the winning touchdown. The decision put Boston in the Sugar Bowl, kept Georgetown out.

Georgetown's complaint was that Swaffield called the play from 30 or 35 yards away, while three other officials, closer to the play, didn't call it. We met Swaffield at the Hearst cooperation luncheon the other day and he gave us his version. "Sure it was a tough one to call," he agreed, "but I'd call it again this minute if I saw it. The Georgetown boy first pushed the Boston college receiver and then hooked an arm under the receivers arm, accidentally or not, keeping him from reaching out for the ball.

"I saw the infraction very plainly. And I wasn't 30 some yards away, as was claimed. I was even with the Boston backfield. When it shifted to the right, I shifted over to the left.

"On the play they sent three decoys down the field to end zone, to the right and O'Rourke made a beautiful feint as if to throw to them. Then he crossed everybody up and threw the other way to a lone receiver. I wasn't more than 10 or 15 yards from the play, with an unobstructed view of what happened."

Swaffield, who is a prominent advertising man who has been officiating football games for 20 years said it was the best game he ever saw. "I've been watching them all for 20 years," he said, "but I never saw two teams which crossed up the form books more than Boston and Georgetown. They had plays I don't think I ever saw before—line plays—and a brilliant way of using them." Swaffield, incidentally, keeps track of downs with a rubber band. He places it around his wrist. On first down he pulls it up over his index finger, then moves it to his middle finger on second down, etc. He says its an infallible system, but agreed that it would be bad in the case of Three-Fingered Brown.

At the same luncheon, Frank McCormick, the New York boy who made good in the small city of Cincinnati good-naturedly recalled that Yankee Boss, Ed Barrow—who was sitting right in front of him—once could have had him for $500. "I would even have taken a check too," the National League's most valuable player laughed.

Eagles Beat Olympics, 6 to 4, at Riverside

Veteran Ice Hockey Star Scores Twice; Ross Knipfel Hurt In Door Collision

By Jack Munhall

Crafty, old Len Burrage, who ordinarily spends most of his evenings on the ice helping teammates score, departed from that role last night to lead the Washington Eagles to a 6-4 victory over the Boston Olympics in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match at Riverside Stadium.

As an audience of 2,578 paying customers cheered him on, the "Old Fox" chalked up a pair of goals and an assist to help the Eagles extend their league lead to two full games over the New York Rovers.

The cellar-dwelling Boston club, losing its third game in as many starts with the locals, made it an interesting match all the way, but they were never able to take the lead. In sharp contrast to last week's rough and tumble match between the Eagles and Orioles was last night's exhibition of fast, clean hockey at its best.

Furious Pace

The passing and shooting of both teams was on edge and the pace was furious at all times, with a minimum of rough stuff but with plenty of legal, jarring body checks.

Ross Knipfel, big blond Washington defenseman, who usually is in the center of things when the going is tough, was injured in the last period. He ran into an open door, believe it or not. Skating down the sidelines, Knipfel was knocked off his feet when the door to the penalty box mysteriously swung open. He was carried from the ice and preliminary reports indicated he had received a badly bruised hip.

Ninth Washington Victory

Washington, holding 3-2 lead, was hard pressed in the last period by the persistent Olympics but after Boston invaders had narrowed the deficit to 4-3, Burrage came through with his second goal for Washington to clinch the match. The final Washington point was registered by Paul Courteau, who thereby continued his recent fast scoring pace.

Buddy Foster was Boston's leading scorer with a pair of goals.

Goalie Foils Eagles

Superb goal-tending by Vic Polich held the Eagles scoreless in the first period, which they dominated throughout in a succession of rushes into Boston territory.

Polich made a total of 15 saves during the initial 20 minutes, including exceptionally fine stops at the expense of McCurry, Dewey and Courteau.

On the other hand, Les Colvin, goalie for the Eagles, had a comparatively easy time of it, being called upon to stop only six shots by the Olympics, who were usually thwarted before they reached the nets by Burrage, McCurry, Knipfel and McTeer. The period was unusual in that not a single penalty was called.

Scoring Splurge

Things began to pop in the second period as the Eagles scored twice in little more than a minute, and then Boston tallied one and the Eagles a third before the fourth minute had expired. The upshot of it all was a 4-2 lead for Washington as another unusually clean period ended. Only two penalties were dished out, one to Boston's Desrosiers for tripping, the other to Washington's Knipfel for cross checking.

Mailley knocked in the game's first goal in exactly 22 seconds, assisted by the ever-reliable Burrage and Mailley. About 50 seconds later Burns, the league's leading goal scorer executed one of his copyrighted unassisted charges through the entire Boston team to make it 2-0 for the Eagles.

Boston interrupted the Washington scoring parade at that point while Desrosiers counted on a neat solo dash. Grabbing a loose puck, he got away by himself and as he approached the Washington nets he feinted to his right, drawing Goalie Colvin out of position, and then backhanded one in from left.

Burrage Shines

The third unassisted goal of the period followed about four seconds later when Knipfel burst through Yourkerwicz and Spain, lost the puck temporarily in collision but regained it and banged in a waist-high shot.

Stubbs made Boston's second goal on another long spectacular heave while guarded closely by McTeer. The shot, screened by McTeer took Goalie Colvin by surprise.

The score stood at 3 to 2 until the final six seconds of the session, when Burrage was on the scoring end of one of the smoothest scoring plays seen here all year. Nursing the puck until his teammates were in position, Burrage passed to Dewey on the run in the right lane, and then skated down the middle to take a return pass and shoot squarely through Goalie Polich.

| Olympics | Position | Eagles |
| Polich | Goal | Colvin |
| Anderson | L.D. | Burrage |

Orange Bowl Bid Routs Happy Georgetown Players From Beds

Georgetown University players and students tumbled out of bed last night when the news came that the Hoyas had accepted an invitation to meet Mississippi State in the Orange Bowl at Miami. Jules Koshlap (center) holds a trophy awarded him as outstanding player

New Year's Date Finally Made Official

Declining of Bid By Texas A. and M. Gives G. U. Chance; High Scorers Meet

Georgetown University last night accepted an official invitation to meet Mississippi State's football team in the Orange Bowl game at Miami on New Years Day.

"The game is definitely scheduled," said H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of Georgetown. His statement was corroborated by an Associated Press dispatch from Miami announcing that Orange Bowl officials had finally selected Georgetown as the opponent of Mississippi State.

The invitation to Mississippi State to compete in the Orange Bowl was extended last Saturday by the Miami game officials and acceptance was made immediately. The invitation to Georgetown followed reports that Texas A. & M. had declined a bid.

State Unbeaten

The once-beaten Georgetown team will be meeting in Mississippi State one of the Nation's few unbeaten major teams. The only blot on the record of the Maroons is a 7-7 tie by Auburn in midseason.

In ten games, Mississippi State has amassed 230 points to its opponents' 51. The Maroons defeated Florida, 25-7; Southwestern of Louisiana, 20-0; tied Auburn, 7-7; defeated Howard, 40-7; North Carolina State, 26-10; Southwestern of Memphis, 13-0; Louisiana State, 22-7; Millsaps, 46-13; Mississippi, 10-0, and Alabama, 13-0.

Selection of Georgetown as Mississippi State's opponent keeps intact the Orange Bowl's unbroken policy of making its game a North versus South affair, Georgetown as the second Washington football team to apppear in the Orange Bowl game. Three years ago, Catholic University won a stirring Orange Bowl game from the University of Mississippi.

The Orange Bowl game will be a clash of high-scoring teams, with Georgetown having piled up 273 points in nine games. The Hoyas yielded only 41 points, with their lone defeat being at the hands of unbeaten Boston College, 19 to 18.

Happy for Team

Graduate Manager Murphy declared Georgetown was "highly pleased" at the invitation to compete in the Orange Bowl, adding, "It makes us happy particularly that our squad, which has lost only one game in three years, has been honored."

Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty is expected to order his squad into training again this afternoon. The Hoyas broke training with the end of the regular season ten days ago, but the lapse is not expected to prove a handicap in the preparation for the New Year's Day game.

Mississippi State, which graduated Bruiser Kinard, star tackle, into professional ranks two years ago, is now coached by Allyn McKeen and operated this year with virtually a veteran team. Eighteen veterans were on the squad at the outset of the season.

Golden Bears Hit By 'Flu' Epidemic

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 (AP).—Ten members of the Southern California football squad, including three regulars, were placed in the hospital tonight and fear was expressed that they were suffering from influenza.

Team spokesmen said none was believed stricken seriously.

Halfback Jack Banta, Guard Ben Sohn and Tackle Don Willer, first-string players, were included in the group.

The development curbed hard scrimmage for the approaching Notre Dame game, but Coach Howard Jones sent the team through "dummy drills," and concentrated on aerial tactics.

Chet Benefiel, Coach at Tulsa, Resigns Post

'Criticism' of Policies Given as Reason For Mentor's Action

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Dec. 3.—Chet Benefiel, first Tulsa University grid star to become its coach, resigned today because of "criticism."

Mentioned as possible successors were Leo (Dutch) Meyer, of Texas Christian University; Fred Thomsen, of the University of Arkansas; Francis Schmidt, of Ohio State, and Elmer C. (Gloomy Gus) Henderson, the latter two both former Tulsa coaches.

There was no indication, however, that the university athletic board had approached any of the four.

In Fayetteville, Thomsen declined comment. He has served two years of a three-year contract.

Benefiel's team this season won the Missouri Valley Conference championship. It was the second successive year that the coach of the conference champions quit soon after annexing the title. Jimmy Conzelman, of Washington University, St. Louis, resigned after his squad captured the loop title.

Backfield Coach Out

The athletic board also notified Backfield Coach Harold Wickersham, also a former Tulsa star, that his contract would not be renewed when it expired December 31 along with Benefiel's.

The board did not accept the resignation of Barton (Botchy) Koch, line coach. Koch first submitted his resignation two weeks ago. It was not accepted then nor today.

In a statement after submitting his resignation, Benefiel said:

"I realize the criticism of the program and I feel that the board should have a free hand in its choice of a coach for next year. I believe this action to be to the best interest of all parties concerned."

While Benefiel declined to elaborate concerning "criticism" of the football program, Wickersham declared that midseason break between Benefiel and Koch may have been the starting point of the shakeup.

Summarizing the differences, Wickersham said Koch took an inactive part in the coaching after a game with St. Louis University, October 19; that Koch disagreed with Benefiel in primary principles of coaching, in selection of certain starting linemen and in game substitutions.

The athletic board named as basketball coach Jack Sterrett, assistant coach and chief foootball scout under Benefiel.

Benefiel had taken over basketball coaching duties about the middle of last season.

Aggies Invited To Meet Duquesne In Charity Game

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3.—The powerful Texas A. & M. football team was invited today to meet Duquesne University in Pittsburgh on New Year's Day in a charity game to be known as the Dapper Dan Bowl.

Coach Homer Norton replied tonight that he would give an answer tomorrow.

Officials of the Dapper Dan Club, who staged a $10,000 Open golf tournament for charity here in 1939, and Coach Buff Donelli of Duquesne, have been conferring for some time about a post-season game. Duquesne lost but one game this year, to Mississippi State, and went undefeated last year.

The Aggies were considered a likely Rose Bowl contestant until they suffered their first defeat of the season at the hands of Texas, 7 to 0. They had won 19 straight games.

Eric Seelig Kayoed

'Skins Show New Life During Signal Drills

First Eleven Halts Bear Plays; Second Period Unit Drills

By Al Hailey

If practice field performances mean anything, then you'd better rush right and pick up some of those odds that are floating around on the Chicago Bears to win the world's pro championship here Sunday.

They looked like the Redskins of old yesterday at Griffith Stadium in a two-hour signal drill—more that half of which was spent on defense against the Bears' deceptive man-in-motion plays from the time-worn "T" formation.

The Bear passing and running plays—as performed by the Redskins' second-period eleven augmented by reserves—were stopped cold—that is, as "cold" as you can stop a play in dummy scrimmage. The Skins had the pep, however, and were on top of every pass receiver and runner.

'Skins Get Bear Plays

Coach Ray Flaherty, with a sheaf of cards bearing carefully diagrammed plays of the Western Division champions, went over the formations the Chicagoans used most effectively in moving down to the Redskins' 1-foot line in the final seconds of play three weeks ago, and from the looks of things the Redskins had things down pat.

Flaherty had a slightly altered first-period backfield on defense the greater part of the time, with Dick Todd in the fullback position in place of Jimmy Johnston. With Todd in the secondary were Sammy Baugh and Max Krause, while Halfback Ed Justice and Center Bob Titchenal backing up the line.

Charley Malone and Bob Masterson were at the ends, Rookie Bob Fisher and Willie Wilkin at tackles, and Steve Slivinski and Dick Farman were at the guard positions in the six-man line.

This is probably the eleven which will take the field in a drive for an early touchdown parade Sunday against the Bears. Johnston may start at fullback instead of Todd, and either Bo Russell or Mickey Parks may start at right tackle in place of Fisher.

Todd may run in the second

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 3.—Al Masters, Stanford's graduate manager of athletics, said tonight only 15,000 tickets to the Stanford-Nebraska Rose Bowl game would be sold to the general public.

The line forms in front of the Rose Bowl ticket office at 8:30 a. m. December 11, Masters said, and it will be a case of first come, first served.

The Rose Bowl seats 90,000. Alumni of Stanford and Nebraska and their relatives will get 75,000 tickets. The University of Nebraska and Stanford will get about $100,000 each from the New Year's Day game.

Pooley Hubert Retained

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Dec. 3.—The V. M. I. Athletic Council tonight renewed the contract of Allison T. S. (Pooly) Hubert as head coach for a two-year period.

Hubert's five assistants received the customary one-year renewals of their contracts.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 3.—The Boston Bruins climbed to third place in the National Hockey League by drubbing the New York Americans, 6-2, before 7,500 fans in Boston Garden tonight for their first home triumph in five attempts.

The Bruins, undefeated in five road games, took a 1-0 lead at 11:34 of the first period on a goal by Bill Cowley and never were in danger. They added five tallies in the second period with Cowley bagging a second marker. Lorne Carr and Norman Larson counted for the outclassed Americans in the third period.

Squee Allen, rookie American winger, suffered a bad eye cut midway through the final period when he was accidentally struck by Desse Smith's stick.

Tom Harmon Says:

By Bob Considine

Tommy Harmon being swamped by young fans at Philadelphia

(This is the third in a series of interviews in which Tommy Harmon, of Michigan, America's No. 1 gridiron star of 1940, tells behind-the-scenes anecdotes about the outstanding games of the season in which he played.)

Rarely in the history of football has a team concentrated more on a single adversary than Illinois concentrated on Tommy Harmon, before the October 20 game at Ann Arbor.

Harmon told me that Bob Zuppke, Illinois coach, made dramatic use of Red Grange's old No. 77 jersey, now enshrined at the University of Illinois, to add fervor to Illinois' already great determination to stop Harmon.

Harmon was told that Zuppke seized Grange's old jersey, held it before the faces of his gridmen, and cried, "are we going to let a fellow named Harmon drag the memory of this through the dirt? Are we going to let him break Grange's record."

Illinois had two or three men on

Browns Buy Ostermueller and Galehouse From Red Sox

St. Louis Amazes by Cash Deal

$25,000 Reputedly Paid for Pitchers; Other Deals Expected

BULLETIN

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—The Boston Red Sox tonight announced the outright sale of Pitchers Dennis Galehouse and Fritz Ostermueller to the St. Louis Browns for an unannounced sum. It was believed to be around $25,000.

Galehouse, a right-hander, broke even last year, winning six games and losing six. Ostermueller, a southpaw, won five and lost nine.

The Red Sox sale was believed to be a forerunner of other deals. Boston's Manager Joe Cronin has said he hopes to strengthen his pitching staff for next year's race.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3.—The two major League champions, the Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds, are quite likely to go to the post next April with the same clubs they exhibited in the World Series last October, interviews with club officials of the titleholders revealed today on the eve of the thirty-ninth annual minor league convention.

The situation is this: The Tigers can't trade and the Reds probably won't. The American League's no-trade rule put in the books last year to shackle the Yankees will hold over and put the squeeze on the Tigers.

Although baseball grapevine circuit had whispered the that Reds were angling for reinforcements to offset Brooklyn's acquisition of Kirby Higbe, potential 20-game winner, from the Phillies, investigation proved the rumors groundless.

Leaders Deny Deals

General Manager Warren C. Giles and Manager Bill McKechnie, of the World Champion Reds denied they had any deals on the fire, and didn't expect to do any trading at the minor league meeting.

"Unless we are sure that we'll be helping our club we are going to stand pat," Giles said. "We certainly aren't going to make any deals just for the sake of making them. We are pretty well satisfied with our club as it is.

"We might make a minor deal, for instance, trade a right-handed hitting outfielder for a left-handed hitting outfielder. But you can say positively that the Reds are not interested in Shortstop Eddie Miller of the Bees or Catcher Mickey Owen of the Cardinals as rumored."

Giles pointed out that every member of the Reds had experienced a more successful season at one time or another in his career than he did the past year.

"If some of our players had played way over their heads last season," Giles said, "we might be anxious to make a trade, but there's no reason to believe that most of our regulars won't be able to do as well or better in 1941 than they did last season."

Baker Is Pretty Happy

Del Baker, Tigers' manager, was not as pessimistic over Detroit's outlook as many others, some of whom predicted the Tigers would have to pull a surprise to stay out of second division.

"I know it looks like that three or four clubs might beat our brains out on paper," Baker said, "but that's a lot different than doing it on the field. Anything can happen, but I certainly am not of the opinion that we'll finish in second division. We have ample power on our club and our pitching outlook is more than bright. We have a number of young fellows who are on the verge of becoming stars."

Baker didn't intend to worry until next year about his none-too-stable and elderly infield (average age 31).

"You can't tell about a veteran ball player until you see him in the spring," Baker said. "Right now I expect our infield to again line up with York at first, Gehringer at second, Bartell at short and Higgins at third. If any of them fail to come through, we have Leo Meyer, Frank Croucher and Floyd Perry, a rookie from Beaumont, in reserve."

Well, Yes and No

Baker looked sad and forlorn when he was asked if he wished the American League's no-trade rule was off the books.

"I think that any rule that retards the progress of the game is a bad one," Baker said. "But I still believe that any rule our bosses put in the books should be abided by."

Only trade made at today's session was the sale of Infielder Stuart Martin, who hit .238 for the St. Louis Cardinals last season, to the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Cubs and Dodgers sparred around, but never got beyond the warm-up stage.

It developed the New York Giants were a little previous in announcing the signing of Gabby Hartnett, former Cubs' manager, as player-coach. Secretary Eddie Brannick said, "We are still dickering with Hartnett and hope to sign him in Chicago next week, but so far he hasn't come to terms."

Boston College On Clemson Card

Clemson, S. C., Dec. 3 (AP).—Clemson's Southern Conference football champions announced their 1941 schedule tonight, with undefeated Boston College, selected for the Sugar Bowl game, replacing Tulane. Virginia Military Institute replaced Wofford and George Washington replaced Southwestern.

Clemson defeated Boston College, 6-3, in the 1940 Cotton Bowl classic.

Next year the Tigers will meet five Southern Conference opponents and, departing from an old custom, will play Auburn last instead of ending the season with Furman.

The 1941 schedule:

September 20, Presbyterian College at Clemson; 27, V. M. I. at Lynchburg.

October 4, N. C. State at Charlotte, N. C.; 11, Boston College at Boston; 23, South Carolina at Columbia; 31, George Washington at Washington (night).

November 8, permanently open; 15, Wake Forest at Clemson; 22, Furman at Greenville; 29, Auburn at Auburn.

Wilson Opens Court Season Here Tonight

D. C. Quintet Faces Albright at Tech High Gym at 8:30

The Wilson Teachers College basketball team, only varsity sports representative of the school at Eleventh and Harvard Streets Northwest, will open its season at 8:30 tonight with Albright College at Tech High gym.

Coached by "Doc" White, the famed old Chicago White Sox pitcher, Wilson with its biggest team in history will play an ambitious schedule of 22 games.

Not since or before the great 1938 team, which featured Ollie Tipton, Phil Fox, Cliff Keyser and Bobby Ducas, has Wilson had so promising a group of candidates as this year's squad of 15 players, most of them sophomores.

Capt. Charlie Clark, former Central High ace, is the only regular retained from last year and he and Hal Ifshim, from Madison High in Brooklyn, are expected to be the Owls' offensive leaders.

Clark, who has an outside position that sometimes prevents his playing, will not start in tonight's game. Besides Ifshim, the team will be composed of Ray Holben, forward; Ernie Cole, center, and Ed Lake and Ralph Battaglini, guards.

In reserve will be Richard Schattman, Sam Fusco, Johnny Land, Curtis Harrison, Frank Engler, Howard Sorrell, Juke Lewis, Joe Rike, and Bill Seganish.

Though the Owls lost four regulars—"Flash" Gordon, Bernie Gillian, Donald Gaw and Roger Irvin by graduation—Coach White believes the current team will be better than last year's squad, which won ten games and lost only three.

Wilson, which finds it impossible to get games with other local colleges who feel that the risk of losing to such a small school is too great to be assumed, will play most of the smaller teacher colleges in the vicinity. A highlight of their schedule will be a game at the University of Baltimore Saturday night.

Brown Bomber Goes Literary; To Give Lecture

Boston, Dec. 3.—Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion, not only approves of Boston's literary atmosphere, but he's going to do his part to spread it.

The Pro Parvulis Book Club announced today that the champion would speak at its junior book fair of New England on a program December 7, devoted to athletic heroes and authors writing for American youth.

Louis is in training for a bout with Al McCoy December 16.

Final Pro Roundup Finds Redskins at Top

Baugh's Passing, Kicking Cited; Todd and Johnston Rank High in Scoring Department; Millner's Catching Earns 4th

What the National Pro Football League's service bureau calls the final roundup of statistics on individual performers is coming at you now—and Washington's Sammy Baugh, Dick Todd and Jimmy Johnston are still right up there at the top in the most important department of play.

Baugh closed the regular season as the most efficient forward passer of them all, outdone only by Davey O'Brien in the number of completions, and the leading touchdown and ground-gaining passer of the year.

What's more, Baugh is the league's best punter with an average of 51 yards from scrimmage in 35 kicks—eight more yards per punt than Cleveland's Parker Hall, second best.

In the scoring department, Todd and Cleveland's John Drake are tied for the most touchdowns with nine each, but Drake's two extra points put him in second place with 56 points to Todd's 54. Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers, led with 57 points—nine short of Andy Farkas' 1939 record.

But Tood was the fifth leading ground gainer in the league with 411 yards, and his average yardage per run of 5.3 was topped only by Brooklyn Dodger Banks McFadden's 6.3.

Jimmy Johnston tied the one-game touchdown record of three touchdowns, scored seven for the season to tie Hutson for the number piled up and was tied with his teammate, End Bob Masterson, for sixth-place in the scoring race with 42 points. At pass receiving, Jimmy finished third with 29 catches for 350 yards.

Washington's End Wayne Millner, with 22 catches, was tied with Cleveland's Jim Benton and Vic Spadaccini in pass receiving.

Baugh led the passers with an efficiency average of 62.7 per cent, beating Teammate Frank Filchock's 1939 record of 61.7 per cent. He completed 111 out of 177 tosses, while O'Brien completed 124 out of 277 to finish sixth in the efficiency race with 44.7 per cent.

While none of the 1939 individual champions regained their titles, Detroit's Whizzer White won back his 1938 ground-gaining crown. White, idle last year, piled up 514 yards, while Drake was second with 480 and New York's Tuffy Leemans was third with 474.

Philadelphia's Rookie End Don Looney dominated the pass receiving department. He led in receptions with 58, set the record for a single-game performance with 14 and picked up most yardage on single game catches with 180 yards.

The Chicagoans have swept through 37 consecutive games without a defeat.

Kimbrough To Play With South Eleven

3 Other Texas A. & M. Stars Signed for Game Against North Players

By the Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 3.—The Blue and Gray Association announced tonight that John Kimbrough and three other Texas A. and M. stars had accepted invitations to compete in Montgomery's third annual North-South football game December 28.

The association headquarters said Kimbrough telephoned from Texas that the Aggie team had voted to reject all bowl bids and that he and Jim Thompson, blocking back; Marshall Robnett, guard, and Vaughn, center, would play in the North-South game.

The acceptances from Texas A. and M. completed the Southern 22 member squad, while eight vacancies remained on the "Blue" team, which will be filled this week.

Earlier three other luminaries, one from the South and two from the upper side of the Mason-Dixon line, were signed.

Acceptances were announced from Ed Rucinski, end of Indiana; Bill Murphy, back of Cornell, and Dave (Rodeo) Parker, end, of Hardin-Simmons.

Rucinski was signed by Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern, and Murphy by Carl Snavely, of Cornell. These coaches will handle the North for the third consecutive time.

Parker was recommended by Coach Jess Neely, of Rice, who will team with Coach Ray Wolf, of North Carolina, in handling the "Grays."

Three Hoya Stars On Boston College All-Opponent Team

By the Associated Press

Newton, Mass., Dec. 3.—The Boston college eleven split honors almost equally among the five toughest teams it faced this season in selecting an all-opponent eleven today. Georgetown won three positions while two each were given to Tulane, Auburn, Temple and Holy Cross.

Rusher Gets Good Advice After Pass By Paul Christman

Columbia, Mo., Dec. 3 (AP).—The season's best football repartee: Paul Christman, Missouri's merry magician, and an Oklahoma rusher both fell a second after the Tiger tosser let loose a pass.

"Did you complete it?" asked the prone Oklahoman.

"Yeah, but duck; here he (the receiver) comes," warned Christman.

Halfback Ralph Carter, who caught the pass, was thrown for a 23-yard loss as he backpedaled in a vain effort to elude tacklers.

Armstrong Is Voted Ring's Most Valuable

Ring Writers Honor 'Hammering Henry'; Challengers Rated

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 3.—For his contributions to boxing in losing as well as winning, Henry Armstrong today was awarded the Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy, which annually honors the memory of the Associated Press boxing writer and war correspondent who was killed in Spain.

In naming Armstrong unanimously, the Boxing Writers Association of New York considered his gallant showing in losing his welterweight championship to Fritzie Zivic two months ago as much as the fact he is the only ringman in fistic history to hold three world titles simultaneously.

Leading Challengers Named

The third annual award of this plaque will be made at the writers' annual dinner January 9 at Ruppert's brewery. Armstrong follows Jack Dempsey and Billy Conn as winners of the award, which goes to "the man who has done the most for boxing" each year.

The writers also named the leading challengers in all fistic divisions. Conn and Max Baer were voted a tie as the outstanding contenders for Joe Louis' crown, with Red Burman, of Baltimore third.

Murray Lewin, of the New York Daily Mirror, was elected president of the association, succeeding James Dawson, of the New York Times.

Only two other fighters, Louis and Baer, received consideration with Armstrong for the award. After considerable discussion, the association voted unanimously in favor of the game little Negro who came from St. Louis originally, but more recently has fought out of Los Angeles.

Armstrong returns to the fistic wars January 17 to meet Zivic in Madison Square Garden in an attempt to regain his welterweight crown. He lost a one-sided 15-round decision to the Pittsburgher October 4, but finished on his feet, and, at the final bell, with both eyes punched closed so that he couldn't see his rival, he was still on the aggressive, moving forward blindly and throwing punches.

"Hennery the Hommer" began his pugilistic rise in 1937 when he knocked out Petey Sarron to win undisputed possession of the world featherweight championship. By March of 1938, he had piled up a record of 38 victories, 26 of them by knockouts. Then he took the welterweight championship from Barney Ross and the lightweight title from Lou Ambers to complete his unprecedented triple. Afterward, he relinquished the featherweight title and lost the lightweight crown to Ambers in a close, disputed decision.

Ring Writers' Ranking

The boxing writers voted the following lists as their rankings of champions and three outstanding challengers in order for each division:

HEAVYWEIGHT—Champion, Joe Louis; challengers, Billy Conn, Pittsburgh, and Max Baer, Sacramento, Calif. (tied), and Red Burman, Baltimore.

LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT—Champion, Conn; challengers, Jimmy Webb, Fort Worth, Tex.; Tommy Tucker, New oYrk; Mello Bettina, Beacon, N. H.

HENRY ARMSTRONG

Rovers and Eagles Play Friday for Post Charity Fund

Two Hockey Rivals Clash At Riverside

Neediest Families to Get 10 Per Cent of Gate; Game Figures In Cup Competition

The Washington Eagles and New York Rovers will meet at Riverside Stadium Friday night in an important Eastern Amateur Hockey League match for the benefit of The Post Neediest Family Fund.

The match is important because it will go far toward settling the eventual winner of the Hershey Cup Series, decided on the first 22 games.

At present the Eagles are leading the league, two games ahead of the Rovers who have come forward with a rush to stave off what first appeared an easy Hershey title for the Washington club.

Severine G. Leoffler will donate 10 per cent of the receipts of this match to The Post Neediest Family Fund, just as he did last year when this worthy cause profited by $230 from an Eagles-Rovers match.

The Rovers, 1938-39 champions and the third-place team behind Baltimore and Washington in last year's race, have practically a new club this season, but the new men seem to be working well together. Most colorful newcomer to the New York squad is Goalie Johnny Fischer, who wears a white golf cap on the ice.

The current Rovers team was built around a nucleus of only three holdover players—Frank Parker, Julian Sawchuk and Howie Hollinger.

The Rovers and Eagles have met twice before this season, splitting even. The Rovers ended a seven-game Washington winning streak in Madison Square Garden by scoring all their goals in the last period for a 4-2 decision. But the Eagles gained revenge here three days later by winning, 5-4.

Because this is a charity match the free list has been suspended. Tickets, priced at 65 cents, $1.10 and $1.65, may be procured at Riverside Stadium. Reservations may be made through Republic 2950.

period backfield of Frank Filchock, Wilbur Moore and Erny Pinckert. If the going gets tough, however, Flaherty may abandon his custom of substituting entire units each quarterer in order to get his greatest possible offensive threat into the game.

Filchock, Moore, Pinckert and Fullback Andy Farkas were in one of the backfields running Bear plays yesterday, and Flaherty said he plans to use Farkas this week. The hard-driving fullback was held out of last Sunday's aerial display by Davey O'Brien because of his lack of experience so far this season on defense. He has played only 2½ minutes this season, that in the New York Giants game.

Bob Hoffman, rookie blocking back who's been giving Krause a battle for the starting position, probably will be unable to play against the Bears because of the slowness of his injured knee to heal. He's the only casualty beside Tackle Bill Young.

Tossing aside the Redskins' 7-3 victory over the Bears, the wagering gentry yesterday was reported to be offering anywhere from 10-to-13 to 5-to-7 odds on the Bears to take the Indians by storm. These odds may undergo a radical change by kickoff time, 1:30 p. m. Sunday, however.

Wayne Names Captain

Miss Scherick Sets 2 Marks At Convention

Rolls 164 High Game, 389 Set in G. A. O. Mixed Bowling Loop

Pearl Scherick, Eagles, and once a star in the Convention Hall Ladies' District team, was the heroine of the G. A. O. Mixed Loop's meet at Convention Hall last night with all time highs in the women's division for 164 game and 389 set, over Hap Burtner's mapleways.

She added 10 pins to the previous record for game and 3 to the set mark. Lou Hawley, Zippers, had highs for the men with 157-398, but Miss Scherick's splendid scores overshadowed everything else. The Senators won team highs with 581-1,641. The Eagles lead the Senators by pinfall although both have won 31 wins and lost 14.

The Washington Post lads rolled at Convention Hall and watched as George Becker, No. 5, took high game, 147, with Ollie Smith, No. 11, up to his old trick of getting high counts by adding 22 pins to the former season record for set, getting a total of 389. The No. 8 team took high game with 587 as the No. 11 boys rolled a set of 1,585. Teams 12, 4 and 1 are tied for league leadership with 25-17 each.

The Railroad Retirement Board ladies at Arcadia discovered that Margaret Wambsganss, Senators, had high game of 118 as Nettie Shapiro, National Limited, won set with a 300 count. The Dixie Flyers flew off with team honors, getting 474 and 1,370 to top the others.

It was Simons, Brightwood, who ruled Russ Diehl's Brookland drives last night in the Diamond Cab meet. Simons set a new league record for individual set with a splendid 404 set but had to stand back and see Winfield, Restaurant, take the high game with a 146 pinfall. The Shoreham boys were best as a team, taking highs of 569 and 1,657 to top the other quintets.

The Federal Power Commission Mixed League at Petworth discovered that Lyndall Harris, Buzzards, was the best bowlerette on the drives with highs of 112 and 304, while Herbert, Hoodlums, took high game of 128 for the men as Ginocchio, Hoodlums, took the set with a count of 319, pacing his team to highs of 526 and 1,444.

In the Electrical League's meet at Takoma Recreation, Davis, Cameo Appliance, took high game with 148 as Fincham, Western Electric, came through for set with 386. Davis' highs for the night helped his Cameo team win high counts with 619 and 1,735.

The Ice Palace Industrial meet found Schillke, Swigert's Market, the main man for the night with highs of 137-367. The H. & J. Construction lads came through for team highs with 565-1,624.

Two All-Star Backs to Play At Ballston

Gonzaga and W.-L. Elevens Will Meet For Camp Benefit

Two of the four backfield stars who were selected on the Washington Post All-Metropolitan Schoolboy eleven will be in action Saturday when Gonzaga High faces Washington-Lee in Ballston for the benefit of the Arlington County Monarch Club's summer camp.

Russ Arnaud, fullback, will be the host club's biggest threat, and Gonzaga will feature Elmer Raba, halfback. The two brilliant ballcarriers were well up among the leading scholastic scorers this season, Arnaud leading all competitors with 60 points and Raba hanging up 39 to hold fifth place. Their selection on the All-Metro team was almost unanimous as ten coaches in this vicinity cast their votes.

Arnaud, a senior, is strictly a runner, using both power and deception. Several times this season he has attempted excursions into the air, but his passing was hardly as potent as his running. Raba, on the other hand, is a fine ballcarrier, deadly passer and one of the longest kickers in this area.

As the teams go into the only post season schoolboy game here this year, the Little Generals of Washington-Lee boast a somewhat better record. Six victories and two defeats are down on their record, while the Purple can boast of only four victories, two losses and two ties.

Stellar booters of three periods will combine in a special between-the-halves exhibition of field goal kicking. Augie Lio and Bill Nealon, Georgetown, and Pete Sachon and Mike Cherello, Catholic U., will support the claim of present-day kickers to supremacy. Harry Deming, G. W. tackle of a few years ago and assistant coach at W.-L., will also compete. And the "old-timer" in action will be Gus Welsh, gray-haired former Carlisle Indian quarterback.

3 Dixie Pro League Football Games Off

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—Maj. John L. Godwin, of the American Legion fair committee, sponsors of the Roanoke Travelers in the Dixie Professional Football League, said today the Travelers' season has ended and that three proposed post-season games will not be played.

The decision was influenced by the fact that three of the local squad have gone to jobs in the Navy yard, another is in the Army and a fifth, Ned Legrande, is moving to Pennsylvania, he said.

Brewers Start Work for Game With Sphas

Play American League Champions Sunday At Riverside Stadium

Fresh from a slim, but utterly satisfactory victory over the Baltimore Clippers in their home scheduled opener, the Washington Brewers yesterday began drills for a meeting with the American Basketball League champions, the Philadelphia Sphas, Sunday night.

Riverside Stadium again will be the scene, and just as in their inaugural the Brewers have arranged an interesting program for fans.

Basketball, however, will be the most important thing. For the Brewers the game will be an accurate gauge as to whether they will be able to improve last year's standing and jump into the title. In their six years in the league the Sphas have won three championships and lost the other three only after playoffs. Managed by Eddie Gottlieb, the Philadelphians have five players on their roster who were with the original Sphas.

Outstanding of these is Moe Goldman, All-American from C. C. N. Y. Others are Cy Castleman, the league's finest long distance shot; Inky Lautman, Shikey Gotthofer and George "Red" Wolfe. The team is rounded out with Howard Rosen, former Temple All-American; and Petey Rosenberg, a former mascot of the club from St. Joseph's.

Coach Mack Posnack announced following the Brewers' practice yesterday that Whitey Wilson, veteran guard, would probably be inserted in Sunday's starting lineup if his present form continues. His fine guarding will be highly valuable against a team which has an average of over 40 points per game.

Southwest College Elevens Top Country in Percentage

.760 Record Hung Up Against Major Opposition on the Outside

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 3.—Young men of the Southwest seem to have played a better brand of football this season than those in any other section, if we can believe the round-up figures.

A survey of the season's more important intersectional games throughout the country reveals that Southwest teams registered a won and lost percentage of .760 when pitted against outside opposition.

Eastern teams came next with a mark of .548, and all other sections showed losing percentages; the Midwest, with .481, the South with .368, and the far West with .300.

This survey covered 102 intersectional contests. In most of these games both opponents were major schools. In the others one rival was of major caliber.

Southwestern outfits won 19 games, lost 6 and tied 1. Texas Tech won 5 of these "survey" contests, while Texas Christian lost 3, providing the high and low, respectively, of intersectional performance in that area. Texan won 3. The lone tie was Pittsburgh's 7-7 deadlock with Southern Methodist.

Eastern teams won 34 encounters, lost 28 and tied 2. Boston College won 4, while Fordham won 3 and lost 1. Catholic U. was unfortunate in winning 1 and losing 3. The two ties were Pitt and Southern Methodist, and West Virginia's 7-7 deadlock with Cincinnati. The most lop-sided intersectional scores of the season were Notre Dame's 61-0 trample over Carnegie Tech, and Boston College's 60-0 rout of Idaho.

Midwestern outfits won 25 games, lost 27 and tied 2. Notre Dame was the leading winner with 5 straight. Detroit won 4 and lost 1, while Michigan won 3. Marquette was the heaviest loser, with 4 defeats.

Southern teams won 14 and lost 24. The Southern schools had moderate intersectional programs, so there were no standout winners or losers. Probably the major upset in this section was Arkansas' 21-20 victory over Mississippi, which was rated one of the Dixie powers at that time.

The Far West including Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain areas, won 7 games, lost 14 and tied 1. There were no standout winners or losers in this region and the lone tie was Michigan State's scoreless deadlock with Santa Clara. St. Mary's provided a major upset by beating Fordham, 9-6.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Southwest | 19 | 6 | 1 | .760 |
| East | 34 | 28 | 2 | .548 |
| Midwest | 25 | 27 | 2 | .481 |
| South | 14 | 24 | 0 | .368 |
| Far West | 7 | 14 | 1 | .300 |

(Ties do not count in the percentages.)

Greensboro Gets Piedmont Berth

Atlanta, Dec. 3 (AP).—Directors of the Piedmont League today voted to transfer the Rocky Mount franchise to Greensboro, N. C., thus assuring an eight-club circuit for the 1941 season.

Club owners will meet in Greensboro, probably next month, to draw up a schedule.

Ralph H. Daughton was reelected president of the league and Bobby Rice, business manager of the Asheville, N. C., Club, was named vice president to succeed Alvin Crowder.

Directors gave Brooklyn authority to take over the Durham franchise. The club was operated last season under the sponsorship of the Cincinnati Reds who have withdrawn.

The Boston Red Sox will operate the Greensboro Club. Rocky Mount had been in the Red Sox's farm system.

Meet Ray's Rinkeydinks—They Beat the Big, Bad Bears Once

Coach Ray Flaherty's second-period eleven (he calls them the Rinkeydinks) gathers around to get their instructions in how to run the Chicago Bears' plays. They acted as make-believe Bears yesterday and ran George Halas' famous "T" formation against the Redskins' first-period eleven. But it was this collection which beat the Bears here November 17, 7-3, on a pass from Frank Filchock to Dick Todd. Kneeling (left to right) are Mickey Parks, Rookie Steve Andrako, Coach Flaherty, Clem Stralka and Filchock. Standing (left to right) are Clyde Shugart, Wilbur Moore, Bob McChesney, Bo Russell, Erny Pinckert, Wayne Millner and Andy Farkas—who was running at fullback yesterday in Todd's place

Miss B. B. Is Third In Subfreezing Race; Favored Port Wales Falters in Stretch

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3.—Turning on the heat in the final sixteenth, J. V. Tigiani's Legenda made her backers forget the subfreezing temperature as she drove to a length victory in the Bluefield Purse, feature of today's program. With a $14.60 price- tag attached, the 6-year-old Insco mare, won going away and defeated Mrs. A. A. Grey's Shailleen by a length margin. Three parts of a length farther back came F. Wyce's Miss B. B. to be third in the field of seven operating at 7 furlongs.

Mrs. Dion K. Kerr's Port Wales, installed the favorite, got to the front, but Jockey Henri Mora, making his first appearance here, was unable to keep her there. She stopped as if shot in the stretch run.

Legenda's time was a creditable 1:26 2-5 against a track record of 1:24 held by Gay Amazon.

Field Crowded at Start

The race was marked by crowding just after the horses left the starting gate. Chief Hollis from the No. 6 position came over on horses and almost piled up the field. The stewards were watching and promptly suspended Jockey R. Haber for three days.

A small crowd witnessed the day's sport conducted over a lightning fast track that had a cushion on it. The condition of the running surface was remarkable. Tractors pulled discs and harrows over it throughout last night.

Shailleen was first to show in front when starter Morrissey sent the field away. Port Wales was closest, however, and moved to the front boldly on the backstretch. It appeared that the son of Prince of Wales had the situation well in hand as he galloped along in front. But in the straightaway, the 3-year-old stopped and a gang-rush began for the wire.

Bold Burst of Speed

Legenda, who had not been asked for real speed for most of the route, was shaken up by Apprentice Weber and responded with a bold burst of speed. Shailleen also rallied but was no match for the old mare. Miss B. B. shuffled back early, came with good energy on the outside of the pack to be third.

Jockey W. L. Taylor found the winner's circle today for the first time. He had the honor of opening and closing the program with a winner. In the first race he had the mount on Fall Hazard and brought the Chance Play filly to the wire five lengths ahead of Ring Up. Matab was third. Taylor took no chances and kept a drive despite holding a long lead. In the seventh race, he scored with Palkin, keeping the $8.80-shot ahead throughout the mile and an eighth.

The daily double paid $155.80 after a foul claim was registered against Remolee, winner of the third race. Jockey B. Fels, whose Big Steel was shut off repeatedly but not by the winner, contended that Remolee came over on him in the stretch run. The stewards ruled otherwise, however. Remolee paid $13.

Kingdom, a lightly campaigned son of High Quest, was the winner in the first half of the double, taking the second race. He paid $7.20 in his own right.

WOOD DEAR closed some ground from sluggish beginning.

BIG STEEL was hemmed in between horses going to first turn, went to inside, was shut off approaching half pole and was slightly bothered by winner. Fels' foul claim against winner was not allowed. KINGOO set early pace and tired after going wide entering stretch. VAN TRYST closed gamely.

Aknusti Polo Team Given Higher Ratings

U. S. Championship Victory Boosts All Members' Goals

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—All four members of the Aknusti team which won the National Open championship received increased rankings today as the United States Polo Association announced the new handicaps for 1941.

Elbridge T. Gerry, Aknusti's star and No. 3, was boosted from 8 goals to 9; Robert L. Gerry, jr., No. 2, from 7 to 8; Gerard S. Smith, No. 1, from 6 to 7, and Alan Corey, jr., back, from 5 to 6. With the new ratings, Aknusti becomes a 30-goal team.

With Tommy Hitchcock placed on the inactive list, only two men remain at the top rating of 10 goals —Cecil Smith, of Texas, and Stewart Iglehart, of Long Island. The elder Gerry is bracketed at 9 with Winston Guest, whose handicap was not changed, and Robert Skene, of Australia, who is serving in the war.

The eight-goal men are the younger Gerry, Michael Phipps, Eric Pedley and Aidan Roark, of California, and two other members of Britain's armed forces, Eric Tyrrell-Martin and Gerald Balding.

Seven-goalers include the holdovers from 1940, Elmer Boeseke, jr., of California; Pete Bostwick and Billy Post, of Long Island, and George Oliver, of Texas, and two newcomers, Smith and Harry Evinger, of the Southwest.

Other interesting changes find the Barry brothers, of Texas, Harold, Paul and Roy, and Bob Nichoalds, of Chicago, boosted from five goals to six.

Elbridge Gerry will serve as chairman of the association's board of governors in 1941, succeeding Robert E. Strawbridge, jr. Devereux Milburn has been reelected vice chairman, and Gouverneur M. Carnochan, secretary-treasurer.

Bill Bennings —At The Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

All riders must look alike to the local steward line-up of Bradley-Wall-Combs. They cracked down on Jocey W. L. Taylor yesterday, fining him $25 for striking Jockey George Cardoza with his whip in the sixth race on Monday. In addition, they suspended Jockey R. McDonald for the remainder of the meeting for grabbing the saddlecloth of Cheer Me on the same program. J. Donald Hay, mutuel manager at Bowie, Marlboro and Charles Town and one of the best known and most highly respected men in his profession, underwent an emergency operation in the Charles Town Hospital. His appendix was removed. The operation developed into a serious one, requiring almost two hours. It was performed by Drs. John L. Van Metre and Marshall Glenn. Early today, he was resting easily and, later in the day, his physicians described his condition as "very good." While Hay is in the hospital, he is directing the operation of the Charles Town mutuel department through R. B. Thompson, his first assistant. Remember our suggestion about trees here? Well, 235 Lombardy Poplars have just been planted along the back stretch rail. The trees, now from 6 to 8 feet in height, have been set at 6-foot intervals, with the idea of providing a screen as they mature. A total of 741 horses were entered for the first two days of racing at Charles Town. Not more than 58 horses are permited to go postward on any one day, the average race being limited to eight starters, and the feature events to ten. Although the temperature dropped approximately 20 degrees during Monday night, and stood at around 18 or 20 early this morning, Starter John Morrissey conducted class at the starting gate, and put approximately 40 horses through their paces. Track Superintendent Henry Erickson, former big time rider, had harrows working throughout the night on the track, thus preventing any possibility of freezing, and offering a lightning-fast strip for the yesterday's racing. When the 5-year-old mare, Joanny went slightly lame while being walked, application was made by her trainer to withdraw her from the day's feature. Permission was granted with the understanding that she is not to be entered for racing within the next three days. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Last Bet probably is the right bet in the day's opener. He showed plenty of foot on the Maryland miler and stands out in this company. Pink Coral ran a good race at Laurel and may be the one to follow the top fellow to the wire. Bravira and Wake are good ones on the reserve list.

Second race—Giggle Lee has worked well and appears nicely placed in this event. Needs only the right handling. Miss Dolly Kay likes this track and promises to be in the thick of contention. Don Montes has speed and probably will find a spot in the money.

Third race—Balaris has shown foot in trials and meets company that seems to suit in this short sprint. I'm going to string along with this alert breaker. Little Drift has some class and is dangerous. Hibiase is good now but may find the track too hard.

Fourth race—Jean C. likes this route and is reported fit. The inside post position helps and I see no reason for mistakes. Lerno was well played at Bowie and is a threat. Nella Wood is a possibility.

Fifth race—Walter Light turned in a good third opening day and gets rid of the two horses that topped him. Knows his way around this oval and I'm going to string along. Here Goes has class and is a threat. The turns might get him, however. Roidef for the minor award.

Sixth race—Royal Business gets the call in this despite that 118-pound assignment. She has all her speed and should lead Macecloud to the wire. The latter is as good as those Bowie races, but she might have been partial to the Maryland tracks. Dulie for the show end.

Seventh race—Blue Cyclone has worked well here and gets a light assignment. Could win this at a price. Sanoma probably is the class and looms as the one to beat. Best Policy should take down part of the pay.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take Woodbridge, Accidental and Yarn Sox.

Sportsmans Park Contests Racing Dates

Shortened Meet Draws Protest to Illinois Circuit Court

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 3.—The Illinois Racing Commission today was restrained by the Circuit Court from setting any more 1941 racing dates until after it had heard an objection by the operator of Sportsman's Park to the dates selected for Sportsman's.

Sportsman's Park asked for a spring meeting from April 26 to May 17 and the usual fall meeting from October 6 to November 1. The bill said the commission, while granting the requested spring dates, reduced the fall dates to October 20 to November 1 despite an "understanding" that the full fall meeting would not be prejudiced by the spring dates.

The suit declared the reduction was "unfair, inequitable, arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and discriminatory" since Washington Park and Arlington Park, allegedly under the same management, had been awarded 68 consecutive days of racing.

Illinois Injunction Blocks Handbooks, Illegal Race News

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP).—Attorney General John E. Cassidy announced he had obtained today a temporary injunction restraining 2,000 persons from operating handbook establishments or disseminating unlawful horse-racing information in Illinois.

The attorney general said he obtained the injunction before Circuit Judge Maurice Joyce in Belleville and that the list of defendants included residents of Chicago and down-State Illinois.

Corporations named included the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Western Union Telegraph Co., and Postal Telegraph Co.

Boesch Meets Freeman Here On Arena Card

Coast Wrestler Seeks Top Billing; Ernie Dusek in Feature

Paul Boesch, well known Pacific Coast wrestler, who looms as a potential opponent for the winner of tomorrow night's Ernie Dusek-Warren Bockwinkle headline bout yesterday was added to the support-card for the weekly matches at Turner's Arena.

Boesch has won 10 matches in local starts, and is powerful enough to get top billing in the next few weeks. His foe tomorrow will be Herbie Freeman, 250-pound New Yorker, who was a member of the two-man team of Freeman and Newman in his last match.

With Ernie Dusek and Bockwinkle in the feature scrap, Brother Emil Dusek will also go scalping for Dynamite Joe Cox, the Kansan who has a personal dislike for all the Dusek boys. Fact is, Kansas Cox may be meeting his old foe Ernie, should he topple Emil.

Other supporting bouts find "Gentleman Lou" Plummer meeting Tommy Rae and Milo Steinborn the Memphis "Strong Man" tackling Whitey Gorvo, former Nevada cowpuncher.

Coordination Declared Hope Of Railroads

Local Bankers' Group Hears Dr. Stevens Cite Vast Savings

By Thomas M. Cahill.

DR. STEVENS

"If optimistic estimates are accepted, there is a vast sum amounting to some hundreds of millions which could be saved by large scale railroad consolidation and through coordination. Even discounting heavily the optimism of some of these estimates, resulting increases in revenue might be substantial despite some further traffic losses. If such cost reduction could be effected and fixed interest charges were largely eliminated through substitution of participating interest bonds either alone or in combination with income or lower fixed interest obligations, the railroads would be in a much better position to resist the impact of economic changes resulting from losses of traffic, or otherwise.

Fixed Debt Cited

The bright side, the speaker continued, is that for the most part, receivership and trusteeship roads (as well as many solvent ones which have escaped trusteeship or receivership narrowly), have been financially embarrased, primarily by too large a volume of fixed interest debt and consequent difficulties in meeting interest charges in the face of declining traffic and increasing competition.

"Scarcely any of the Class I roads," he recalled, "failed to earn their operating expense and taxes for more than a year or two during the depression, and in no year have the roads as a whole shown an operating deficit after taxes. But the increasing business risk resulting from the decline of traffic, has left all but the strongest roads with a dangerously low margin over interest charges."

Charges Slashed

In the case of the insolvent roads, he explained, the commission has met the situation by drastic reduction in debt referred to. As a result, the former annual fixed charges of over 131,000,000 would be reduced below 40,000,000.

Henry K. Dierkoph, assistant trust officer, Riggs National Bank and chairman of the section, presided. A. M. McLachlen, president, Bankers Association, complimented the section on its work. Reports were made by Lester A. Lawrence, chairman, trust law and legislation committee; Bernard L. Amiss, chairman, trust investments committee, and Willard G. McGraw, chairman, committee on standardized trust forms.

U. S. Airplane Backlogs Soar To 3.5 Billions

$385,000,000 Gain In Month Is Laid To Navy Orders

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Unfilled orders now on the books of American aviation manufacturers were reported today by Aviation Magazine to total $3,500,000,000, an increase of $385,000,000 in a month.

The increase, said the magazine, represented mainly United States Navy orders.

A year ago, said the report, the backlog of unfilled orders totaled $500,000,000, then a record high.

The figures include demands for 30,000 fighting planes—25,000 for the United States and 14,000 for the British.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Short covering helped boost cotton futures 6 to 9 points today.

Demand was prodded by a strong Liverpool cotton market and the realization large quantities of cotton goods would be needed for Government defense purposes. A steady stream of price fixing also developed, some of which was against sale of cotton to Russia.

Talk was again heard in the trade that Russia might reenter the market for sizable quantities of American cotton.

Worth Street brokers reported textile trade again centered in specialty cloths and heavy items for the Government. Prices were unchanged at the best levels of the current move.

Exports Monday, 5,808, all to Great Britain; season so far, 464,324 bales; port receipts, 11,034; port stocks, 3,315,130.

C & S to Retire $51,857,000 of Funded Debt

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Juston R. Whiting, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, today obtained a plan to be submitted to the Securities & Exchange Commission designed to retire $51,857,500 of the company's funded debt.

The plan includes: sale by C. & S. of $34,231,000 of its subsidiary Georgia Power Co., 5 per cent bonds to a group of insurance companies at 105½, using the proceeds, together with other funds, to redeem various issues of debentures of Penn-Ohio Edison Co. and Southeastern Power & Light Co.

The total of tese debentures to be redeemed amounts to nearly $52,000,000, face value, and each issue is callable only at premiums ranging from 4½ to 10 points above par. The parent company proposes to apply for authority to make a 10-year bank loan of $17,000,000 to augment its return from sale of the Georgia Power bonds in order to complete the redemption.

"This will leave Commonwealth & Southern with its only debt the bank loans of $17,000,000 maturing semiannually over 10 years," Whiting said in a statement. He estimated net savings resulting from the transactions would amount to more than $12,000,000 over the 10-year period of the bank loan.

London Stocks

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—British government and high-rated investment stocks scored new gains in the securities market today.

Interest lagged in other groups and occasional losses dotted the price list.

Demand for top-flight issues were implemented by the need to find an outlet for about $30,000,000 paid out in interest on the 3½ per cent war loan and reinvestment of proceeds of requisitioned Canadian stocks. The upward price trend was accented by a shortage of supplies in some groups.

Tobacco and brewery stocks dipped in the industrial list.

1,527,000 More Jobs Seen By June in Defense Work

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 3.—Production for national defense will result directly in the employment of an additional 1,527,000 workers by June, 1941, the National Industrial Conference Board forecast today on the basis of orders awarded up to November 1 this year.

A total of approximately 4,000,000 persons will be working on defense orders next June, the board said, of which 2,449,000 will be engaged indirectly.

At the same time, the board estimated unemployment in all industries dropped to 6,853,000 persons in October, or 45,000 fewer than in September. From August to September unemployment declined 900,000.

The board said October employment amounted to 48,838,000 workers, the highest yet reached except for a few months in 1929. Since 1929, however, approximately 7,000,000 persons have been added to the labor supply, or close to the number who are still unemployed.

Only major employment decrease from September to October occurred in agriculture, which declined by 353,000 workers, or somewhat less than the usual seasonal drop.

The board calculated that current total unemployment should drop to 4,404,000 by next June. Allowance was made for entrance into the labor supply of about 400,000 young workers.

The estimate for next June, the board pointed out, made no allowance for deduction from the labor force of men conscripted into the Army.

Workers currently engaged in defense work, directly and indirectly, were estimated at 1,838,000 persons.

Largest number of new jobs was anticipated in shipbuilding, expected to absorb directly and indirectly a maximum of 1,352,000 workers in August, 1941.

Production of aircraft, tanks and other ordnance and supplies was estimated to require almost 500,000 additional workers during midsummer of next year. Defense construction will take care of over 400,000 new workers by February, 1941, the board figured.

The conference board is a research organization supported largely by business concerns.

Trading Shrinks as List Drifts in Rut; Trade Shrinks as List Drifts in Rut;

New York, Dec. 3.—Selective improvement was to be seen in today's stock market but the general run of leaders drifted into slightly lower territory. Lack of any real selling pressure, however, was evident throughout and dealings were the slowest for a full session in about six weeks.

Th Aessociated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 44. A month ago the composite stood at 48, and a year ago at 50.4. Transfers totaled 449,200 shares, compared with 478,380 yesterday.

The news, on the whole, was a bit more bearish than otherwise, brokers said. Wall street sentiment seemed a shade depressed by the reported heavy shipping losses of the British and the continued Nazi blasting of English industrial centers.

In addition, the market had to contend with what some termed a pessimistic outlook for taxes in 1941 and the impact of such booosted charges on corporation earnings. Selling for income tax adjustments again filtered into the list and was expected to be a factor in trends during the remainder of this month. At that, such offerings today were counteracted to some extent by the switching of liquidators into other stocks.

Helping several shares to emerge with modest advances was a string of extra, special and regular dividends. Allied Chemical retained a point advance when directors announced a $2 extra. Total payments of the company, though, have aggregated $8 this year against $9 in 1939.

In the losing division were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of N. J., United Aircraft, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, du Pont, American Can, Anaconda, Kennecott, N. Y. Central and Great Northern.

Improvement was retained by Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, North American, Loew's, Paramount, Union Carbide, Sperry, American Smelting, U. S. Rubber and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to down ½ cent a bushel and corn was off ½ to⅞. Cotton turned up 30 to 45 cents a bale.

Off as much as a point or so in the Curb were Aluminum of America, Lake Shoe, Brewster Aero, Gulf Oil and Breeze Corporation. Humble Oil tilted higher along with Elgin Watch and Glen Alden Coal. Volume here was around 158,000 shares versus 120,000 the day before.

Moderate investment demand reappeared in today's bond market, lifting selected issues to new highs for the year. The general run of speculative issues, however, did no better than break even on the day.

Carnegie-Illinois, Leader of Industry, Keeps Same Base

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4.—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation today announced reaffirmation of its present base prices on virtually all products for the first quarter of 1941. The action of this United States Steel subsidiary, largest producer of steel, generally is followed by the industry.

Specifically mentioned in the announcement were hot rolled carbon steel, semifinished material, bars, structural shapes, plates, steel sheet piling, hot and cold rolled sheets, hot rolled strip and standard rails, as well as all hot rolled alloy steel items—all for shipment to and including March 31, 1941, for delivery and consumption in the United States.

"Any shipments after March 31 will be billed at prices then in effect," the company added.

No mention was made of tin plate, the price of which usually is announced in a separate statement.

The industry had not expected any change in the price list at this time, when it is operating at 96.9 per cent of capacity.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Around $50,000,000 in new State and municipal securities went to market today in a coast-to-coast financing move that affected New York, Los Angeles and Kansas City.

A banking group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn Loeb & Co. bid successfully for $25,000,000 of long-term New York State bonds issued to finance elimination of railroad crossings. The bonds, dated December 4, will mature in equal annual installments from 1941 through 19 1950. The 1946-1980 maturities were reoffered to the public at yields of .70 to 1.55 per cent.

The Los Angeles department of water and power awarded $13,391,000 in serial bonds to a group of nearly 100 firms headed by Lehman Bros. Reoffering was made at prices to yield .20 to 2.25 per cent on maturities ranging from 1941 to 1959.

Kansas City, Mo., awarded $10,000,000 refunding bonds to a banking group headed by the Chase National Bank at an interest cost basis of 1.89 per cent.

Canada Continues Heavy Shipment Of Gold to U. S.

By the Associated Press

Canada shipped $51,312,702 of the the $59,375,942 gold imported into the United States in the week ended November 27.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that while the week's total was about $33,000,000 less than the preceding week, gold imports lately have fluctuated regularly from about $40,000,000 to $100,000,000 a week.

The large Canadian shipment was part of a continuous stream of British Empire metal flowing into this country since the beginning of the war, mostly through Canadian ports, in order to pay for British war purchases in this country.

Illinois Tried, But Failed, to Stop Harmon

Zuppke's Strategy With Red Grange's Sweater Fizzled

Harmon all that wet afternoon at Ann Arbor. It was a legitimate case of ganging up on a great star, who by that time was well on his way to cracking the Western Conference touchdown record which the immortal Grange had set 15 years earlier.

"Concentrating on me was their mistake," Harmon says with a chuckle today. "They overlooked our Bob Westfall, one of the greatest backs I ever saw. While they were pushing me into the mud, Bob led us to a 28-0 victory over them. He smacked that Illinois line 37 times for a gain of 152 yards. You never saw a fellow hit harder than he did that day, and he didn't have a dry field under him, either."

But for all Zuppke's pains and oratory, Illinois couldn't stop Harmon, or keep him from getting a little closer to their beloved Grange's record.

In the first period Michigan scored twice, once when Tommy ripped his way through the desperately earnest Illinois line from the 4-yard line. Late in the second period the amazingly versatile Michigan star kicked a field goal from the 20-yard line for three more points. He also kicked a point after touchdown, to bring his season's total of points to 79 in four games. It was the first time during the season that Harmon had scored less than three touchdowns—if Illinois got any consolation out of that.

Westfall Did It

Harmon gives all the credit for the Illinois victory to Westfall. But a search of the records showed that, aside from scoring a touchdown, kicking a field goal and an extra point, Harmon was not exactly inactive. His deception and feinting behind the line of scrimmage were superb. Once he went down under a pile of tacklers, who thought he had the ball, while Little Davey Nelson scampered around end to score the first Michigan touchdown.

He set up the second Michigan touchdown, which he eventually scored, with a 20-yard run after snaring a lateral. In the second period he faded back to midfield, while the Illinois team poured in after him, and then he rifled a long sideline pass to Ed Frutig, his end, who caught the ball on the 25-yard line and ran unmolested to the touchdown. "Anybody who leaves Frutig off his All America team ought to have his head examined," Tommy says, in a glowing report on Frutig.

Harmon's chief memories of the Illinois game, aside from the way he was stalked, are of Bernhardt, Illinois fullback. "Golly, how that fellow can hit a line," he says with the genuine warmth and sort of awe that he feels for other stars.

Tackled Plenty

"I got tackled more in that game than in any game I ever played," Harmon says. "I guess they figured that it would be good policy to nail me every time, in the faint chance that I might have the ball each time. I don't think I was in one reverse play all day, after giving the ball to Westfall, that I wasn't tackled. Those boys sure were protecting Grange's record."

His touchdown gave him a mark of 27 tallies for his career, four short of Grange's mark, with four tough games to go.

The Post Radio Time Table

9:15 a. m., WJSV—The St. Lawrence River waterway having been in the news during the past week, the American School of the Air goes back over the explorations of Cartier and Champlain through which they sought to found an inland empire. Dr. Ray Chapman Andrews comments on this one.

2 p. m., WMAL—How's your Christmas shopping coming along? Ann Roberts, buyer for a leading New York department store, talks on "Gifts for Less Than One Dollar" as a feature of Alma Kitchell's Streamlined Journal.

3:15, WJSV—Lily Hertz, mezzo-soprano, and Leslie Hodge, conductor-pianist, offer a little music during Elinor Lee's customarily talkative quarter-hour. Brahms and Richard Strauss are the composers.

7:30, WRC—Alexander Woollcott, deserting his role of Town Crier, has written a novel dramatization for which Deems Taylor has composed the music. Woollcott calls his medium an "historical portrait" and this one's of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

8, WMAL—Gerard Darrow, 8-year-old authority on flora and fauna, returns to the Quiz Kids lineup, bringing a cheery voice and a happy personality remembered by us regulars from his previous appearances. Father Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, is tonight's observer. Now "Judge" Joe Kelly, learn how to ask those questions and keep the kids in check.

9, WJSV—One of the minor evils of our way of life is the effect Maj. Bowes' hamateur hour is having. Fred Allen unfortunately is falling into the Major's ways and tonight offers one of the Bowes graduates, aged 11, singing the "Bell Song" from "Lakme." After all, Fred, embarrassed laughter isn't what made you a top comedian.

9, WRC—Eddie Cantor, too, is making his assault upon the muse of song. But this time it's supposed to be funny. Graham MacNamee, Clem McCarthy and Ben Grauer are the vocal debbies.

10:15, WJSV—"America's War Hawks" titles a talk by West Virginia's Senator Rush D. Holt.

The Columbia Broadcasting System is in receipt of a complaint today. It's from a couple of good American football fans and they didn't mean it to be taken too seriously. But it does go to show you how radio gets around.

It's from a couple of Washington boys—at least their home office is in Washington—now in Zagreb, Yugoslavia. And it seems they were listening to a football game a few weeks ago when suddenly the international short wave broadcast was interrupted with a burst of news in Italian. Which is enough to try the patience of any good American, especially if he's a football fan and more especially if he's in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Said the letter: "We have always felt grateful in the past for the direct contact with America which your radio programs provided for us, but particularly now, that we are quasi-excommunicated, we appreciate the faithful voice of CBS when we turn the dial on our favorite wave band. These glorious fall days, which are akin to those in the American East, except for the vivid red of the maples, still mean football weather to us thanks to your broadcasts. The reception is perfect in every detail, including bands and cheering, but you did let us down terribly last Saturday when Ohio State in the last few minutes of the game had the ball on Minnesota's 4-yard-line and the urbane voice of CBS interrupted and announced the news in Italian."

It was signed R. G. Wiezel and E. O. Glover, of the United States Consul's office in Zagreb.
